"(If) Napoles wants one he's going to have to earn it and negotiate it just like Stracey did. The fight, the first title defence, will be in London. The bout is on the other foot now."

If Stracey doesn't give Napoles a return bout, another logical challenger would be Clyde Gray of Toronto, the Commonwealth champion in the same weight class.

Stracey's victory Saturday was an easy one, considering he was fighting one of the world's toughest and wisest champions.

The Briton opened a cut about Napoles' right eye in the second round, worked on it with 'jabs' and then finished Napoles off with a series of lefts and rights, leaving him helpless against the ropes with 30 seconds to go in the sixth round.

Stracey was knocked down in the first round and took heavy punishment in the second round.

In another title fight on the card, Alfonso Zamora of Mexico knocked out Socrates Batoto of the Philippines in the second round to retain the World Boxing Association bantamweight championship.

Winner Rates Ashe at Top

STOCKHOLM (AP) - Arthur Ashe of the United States, who failed to win the Masters tournament in Stockholm, is still ranked by most observers as the top tennis star of 1975.

Ilie Nastase of Romania, who won the Masters on Sunday after a remarkable up-and-down week, said he rates Ashe the year's No 1.

So did Bjorn Borg of Sweden, who disappointed his home fans by losing to Nastase in the final.

"You have to consider results first," Nastase said. "I think Ashe must be No. 1, and I would rate Borg No. 2, and then perhaps Jimmy Connors. I would put myself No 5 or 6."

Ashe: Won Wimbledon and the World Championship Tennis title at Dallas.

Borg: Won the French open in Paris and was runner-up at the WCT event and the Masters.

Nastase himself had not won a major event all the year until the Masters. On the first day of the tournament he was disqualified from a match against Ashe for his behavior on the court. On the final day he really looked like a master reigning among masters.

Nastase lost with Borg and won 6-2, 6-2, 6-1. As in the semi-final against Guillermo Vilas of Argentina the previous day, he

Mirror Says Queen May Soon Abdicate

LONDON (AP) — The newspaper Sunday Mirror says Queen Elizabeth may end her reign at some future time by abdicating in favor of Prince Charles.

Audrey Whiting writes in a two-page article on the Queen that the abdication might come "not this year, not next year. But it is possible that she will consider giving up the throne within the next 10 or 15 years."

"This is the present thinking of those nearest to the Queen — who know the way her mind works," The Sunday Mirror says.

The newspaper says Queen Elizabeth, who succeeded to the throne Feb. 6, 1952, begins grooming 27-year-old Prince Charles for the monarchy when he was a boy. It points out she will be 50 on April 21 and that this "is an age when many people, however active they are in their work, begin to turn their thoughts towards retirement and what it entails."

House of Commons Prepares for Coverage

OTTAWA (CP) — The glare of television lights was reflected off the polished wood desks in the House of Commons Saturday afternoon as technicians checked camera positions for what may be a prelude to full-scale TV coverage of day-to-day parliamentary proceedings.

The experiment involved initially a light-weight German camera in positions around the chamber, said Ron Anderson, a TV producer hired by the government to study the feasibility of televised debates.

Alistair Fraser, clerk of the Commons, emphasized Saturday's experiment was just that, and no final decision has been taken.

The government presented a notice last June asking Commons approval in principle of radio and television coverage, but debate on the motion is not expected until early next year.

Currently, cameras are only allowed to film the opening of Parliament in the Senate, although some experimental television committee proceedings has taken place.

Mr. Anderson, under contract to the office of Privy Council President Mitchell Sharp, said the current plan will allay the concerns of MPs who are worried about the effects of daily television coverage on Commons debate.

The eight cameras, weighing less than 19 pounds each, would be positioned at seven places on the floor of the chamber and at one perch above the visitors' gallery, at the far end of the Commons.

"There's no intrusion into the chamber at all nor would there be any cables seen," Mr. Anderson said.

The camera would tilt, pan and zoom by remote control from a room outside the Commons. The cameras themselves would be located in the corners of the chamber and only the lenses would be visible.

Mr. Anderson said the possibilities are almost limitless for use of film from the Commons and it would not be simply for the use of television networks for the news.

The House of Commons would own and operate the cameras and simply provide a "feed" to the television networks, he said. The videotapes could become an electronic Hansard and be used to assist in the transcription of debates and for archival purposes.

Television monitors could be set up in the press gallery and in MPs' offices, Mr. Anderson said.

"And the educational possibilities are enormous." The Ontario Educational Communications Authority has indicated an interest in using film on direct feeds to schools.

Tom Van Dusen, an aide to Mr. Sharp, says the CBC last year estimated total cost for installation of the equipment at about $1 million.

This the same as the annual printing costs for transcription of Commons and committee proceedings. Annual operating costs would be about $700,000, he said.

Even if the Commons approves the government motion, which would establish an all-party committee on the subject, actual start of the broadcasts "could take another 18 months," said Mr. Van Dusen, a former journalist.

Estey Inquiry Made Public

OTTAWA (CP) — The report of the Estey inquiry, which helped prompt Yves Pratte's resignation as Air Canada chairman, will be made public today.

Transport Minister Otto Lang is scheduled to table the report in the Commons this afternoon.

The inquiry, headed by Chief Justice Willard Estey of the Supreme Court of Ontario, looked into the airline's financial procedures including an unusual $100,000 payment to Montreal travel agent R. V. McGregor, allegedly for promoting Air Canada to foreign governments.

Mr. Pratte said in his resignation letter last week that the inquiry was unable to dig up anything that was not already known to management and in most cases to government. Corrective action had already been taken on these problems.

There has been speculation the Estey report says there is incompetence, but not dishonesty in top Air Canada management.

Mr. Pratte said in his letter that the appointment of the Estey commission "was a clear indication that the government had lost confidence in my stewardship of the airline."

Herrema Gets Hero Welcome in Limerick

LIMERICK, Ireland AP) — Tiede Herrema's adopted hometown gave him a hero's welcome Sunday to make up, in part, for his five weeks as a hostage of Irish guerrillas.

Thousands of persons along a three-mile motorcade cheered as the Dutch businessman was driven to a civic reception in his honor.

Herrema, who returned Saturday after a Bahamas vacation following his release Nov. 7, said he regarded himself during the ordeal as "the victim of unfortunate circumstances."

"My resolution to survive and to keep my hopes high was greatly strengthened by the knowledge that the actions and attitudes of my kidnappers in no way reflecting the feelings of the vast majority of the Irish people," he added.

Rumsfeld Says NATO Can Improve Without Increasing Expenditures

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — U.S. Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said Sunday the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) must improve its defence capability without new expenditures.

"There is no question but that the alliance and the member nations individually should improve their defence capability without new expense," Rumsfeld said on his arrival here for a two-day NATO defence ministers meeting beginning Tuesday.

Weapons standardization is one way of doing this, but it is "a most difficult thing to achieve," he said.

Rumsfeld, replying to reporters' questions, said he did not expect the meeting to take further steps toward East-West detente.

"I (detente) is a broader subject than that being discussed here," he said.

MPs Step Up Work To Break Early

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs started this week whittling away at a heavy load of legislative business in hopes they can leave for Christmas vacation Dec. 19.

They have nine working days to pass four bills the government says are a must before Christmas — including Times-Reader's Digest legislation.

The 10th day remaining is an opposition day Tuesday. Social Credit will choose the subject of that debate.

Also, on Tuesday the Commons will approve $2.8 billion in supplementary estimates presented by the government recently.

The estimates revealed the government had set aside $4.8 million for the first 5½ months operation of the new anti-inflation board.

The House will devote most of this week debating second reading—approval in principle—of two bills.

The first would lower the number of years of residence in Canada before a person can become a citizen to three from five; the second would impose a limit on the growth of federal spending on medical insurance.

Drapeau Thanks Quebec For Olympic Support

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau repeated Sunday that he was grateful for the provincial government takeover of responsibility for construction of some Olympic facilities.

Speaking on radio station CFCF, Mr. Drapeau said Quebec should "be thanked for the dynamic decisions they took" in deciding to step into construction of the 1976 Summer Games facilities.

"The situation had reached a stage where a body more powerful than the city had to take over. Without that government decision, the Games would have been a failure."

Garneau Urges Quebec Teachers to Talk

MONTREAL (CP) — Education Minister Raymond Garneau and the Quebec Federation of Catholic School Boards (QFCSB) said Sunday the province's teachers' union should end their work-to-rule campaign and make a counter-proposal to the government's contract offer.

In a joint statement following a meeting, the minister and the federation's administrative council condemned the teachers' harassment and slow-down campaigns.

However a teacher spokesman said Sunday the government has not yet made public its complete offer and the unions will continue their campaign until it does.

Dog Lovers Protest U. of T. Research

TORONTO (CP) — Sixty demonstrators, accompanied by a mongrel dog, paraded near the medical sciences building at the University of Toronto Saturday to protest the use of animals in research.

The dog, named Saucy, had a sign that said "Am I next?" strapped to its back as it walked near the building where 68,721 animals were said to have been used in research last year.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (Reuter)—Famed vaudeville and radio comedian George Burns, acting in his first major film role for nearly 40 years, was named Star of the Year on Sunday by the Hollywood Women's Press Club.

The 79-year-old actor, star of the comedy The Sunshine Boys, is said on accepting the Golden Apple award: "It just shows you if you hang around long enough you are bound to be discovered."

Veteran Hollywood actress Katharine Hepburn was named woman star of the year. She was not present to accept, but Barbara Stanwyck, who picked up her Apple for her, was herself given a standing ovation.

Jeff Bridges, son of actor Lloyd Bridges, was named best new star for his role in Hearts of the West and Gordon Jump as tress Susan Clark was named best new female star for her portrayal of athlete Babe Didrikson in the television film Babe.

The club, which in the past was handed out Sour Apples to Frank Sinatra and Jane Fonda for conduct considered unbecoming to Hollywood, this year made no such award.

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP)—The North Dakota state penitentiary will be set for the film The Brothers, based on the Soledad Brothers story by George Jackson. Mathews, film location co-ordinator for the state of Montana.

Mathews said the film's director, Lee Segal, and a production plan to be in Bismarck on Dec. 15 to cast local people for parts. Filming is to start in mid-January and is to run for about five weeks.

Mathews said eight or 10 local people will be hired for small speaking parts. He said a number of Bismarck residents have been Douglas and Muhammed Ali, who reportedly approached for leading roles.

North Dakota was chosen over Montana for the film because there are not as many prisoners in its penitentiary, and the filming will not disturb security arrangements, Mathews said.

He said Edward Lewis, the film's executive producer, has previously produced Executive Action, Tell Them Willie Boy Is Here and Bluebeard, a recently made Soviet - American film.

CLINTON, N.J. (AP) — Bob Dylan 'took his Rolling Thunder Revue to a nearby middle-class prison Sunday night to help publicize the cause of Rubin "Hurricane" Carter a former boxer seeking a new trial on his conviction of murdering three men in 1966.

The minimum-security prison here, the Clinton Institution for Women, has 300 prisoners, 120 of whom are men. Carter was transferred there about one month ago.

Before the concert, poet Allen Ginsberg talked about why he felt the appearance by the entertainers was important.

"There was a sense that protest was dead in the artistic community. But this concert tonight is a symbolic sense of the 1970's — continuation," said Ginsberg, who sings on the tour in the background.

Carter, a middleweight boxing contender in the 1960s, and co-defendant John Artis are serving life sentences for the deaths of three men in the robbery of a bar in Paterson, N.J., nearly 10 years ago.

Both petitioned for a new trial earlier this year after two prosecution witnesses recanted testimony that had placed Carter and Artis at the murder scene.

NEW YORK (AP)—For the first time in 25 years, John Wayne is not on the list of top ten in movie box-office stars this year.

The list was released Sunday.

Wayne is the all-time champion, in the list compiled by Quigley Publications from a poll of the country's movie exhibitors. But in 1975, he fell to 13th spot.

Number one, for the second year in a row, was Robert Redford. Second, and the only woman listed, was Barbra Streisand.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (Reuter) — One of the largest turnouts of Academy Award winners in film history is expected Monday when the organization that holds the annual Oscar awards opens its new, luxurious seven-storey headquarters.

More than 100 stars who have received Oscars since they were first awarded in 1927 have been invited to the celebration to be held by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. About two dozen have already indicated they will attend.

Jack Lemmon, the only actor to win Oscars both for best supporting actor and best actor (Mister Roberts, 1955, and Save the Tiger, 1973) will be host of the reception.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Universal Pictures and its producer Joe Jones will make a motion picture based on the life of Joan Little, a studio spokesman reportedly said.

The film will be in the "highly dramatic genre of Is Anybody Out There?" a spokesman said Thursday. No actors have been signed.

Miss Little was acquitted by a North Carolina jury earlier this year on charges of murdering a white jailer. She claimed she acted in self-defence after he forced her to commit a sexual act. The case attracted national attention and brought Miss Little the support of feminist groups, in particular.

She is now pursuing appeal of an earlier conviction for burglary.

LORAIN, Ohio (AP) — Benny Bill McQuillen figure they are a cinch to become the biggest eaters in baseball. Between them they weigh 1,460 pounds.

The 29-year-old, listed by the Guinness Book of World Records as the world's largest twins, said they are aware of national, television appearances and are planning to return to the night club circuit they left about nine years ago.

"Right now we're working on getting a pair of trousers to wear in our act," says Billy, at 730 the lighter of the two by 8 pounds. "It's no easy task. An average pair of everyday pants cost us about $150, and that's with a discount on material."

Oil-water Exchanges May Help Countries Trade

OTTIAWA (CP) — Everyone says oil and water don't mix — everyone, that is but Joseph G. Debanne of the management sciences faculty at University of Ottawa.

A former visiting professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) department of ocean engineering, he says which just water-poor countries like Algeria could make an energy swap with water-rich but oil-poor countries like France, using giant undersea aquaducts.

It may sound far-fetched, but Prof. Debanne's research has made enough sense to warrant an article about it in a current issue of the MIT Technology Review.

He says a rubber-plastic aqueduct with a 150-foot diameter could carry up to 40,000 cubic feet a second, about twice the average flow of the Dodoma River, from the mouth of the Rhone River in France across the Mediterranean to the arid lands of North Africa.

"It would cost about 2.5 cents a cubic metre for this water which compares quite favorably with 23 cents per cubic metre cost of desalinated water," he said in an interview.

The big drawback is the $8.2 billion necessary to build the aqueduct and the $4 billion necessary to build the supporting agricultural systems in North Africa.

Prof. Debanne said Algeria is studying his scheme. He feels that an international consortium could be formed to finance the aqueduct, subject to appropriate guarantees from the North African countries.

"This is the type of project that would provide technologically advanced countries such as France, Canada and the U.S. with a vast market for technology. The developing North African countries could pay for this technology with oil.

Prof. Debanne acknowledged that the oil in the petroleum exporting countries will not last forever, but by then the land would be producing enough food for export and food was becoming an ever more valuable commodity.

"We're talking about opening up 10 million hectares—about 25 million acres—of land in North Africa and doubling the grain national product of the region," he said.

"With their climate they can produce two bumper crops a year, or possibly more, as is at present the case in the Nile Region," he added.

Dr. Debanne said five economic factors favor a trans-Mediterranean aqueduct:

1. The world shortage of food and the expected aggravation of this beat-up.

2. The severe drought afflicting southern Algeria, Tunisia, North and other countries wholly or partially in the Saharan sub-continent.

3. The increased revenues and financial affluence of the oil-exporting countries;

4. The drain of money from petroleum - importing countries needed by higher energy and raw material costs;

5. The good relations between France and the countries in North Africa.

The aqueduct system offers several bonuses, he said. Energy transmitted through the aqueduct in the form of water under pressure, to mainline the giant flexible aqueduct in shape, could also be used to help push the water through an irrigation system.

This would reduce the need for water pumps and the extra energy they would consume.

Because the water would arrive at sea level, it would be plus—after a 500-mile journey at the bottom of the Mediterranean—it could be used as a coolant in North Africa.

"It has real potential for use in air conditioning, and what it could also be used in power-generating plants, which would greatly increase their efficiency," he said.

"If the North African countries have low muscles of the body work, how they are affected by disease and for his recommendations to the knowledge of how muscles contract.

Pregnancy Possible After Miscarriage

By GEORGE C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had a miscarriage two months ago and never went in for a D. and C. Is it now possible for me to become pregnant? If I become pregnant, would there be any kind of complications? What did they do to me 20 years ago when this happened?—B. L. P.

You could still become pregnant without complications provided none of the after-birth was retained. This is the reason for the D. and C. for the woman who has miscarried during the early months of pregnancy. The overgrown lining of the uterine cavity may not have been expelled completely. The gentle, prolonged procedure accomplishes that.

It is a rather minor operation and involves only a day or two of incapacitation. You would be wise to have the matter looked into even now, two months afterward. If any of the uterine tissue remains, it can be a source of sporadic bleeding and possibly of infection.

What did they do to you 40 years ago? The D. and C. (dilation and curettage) is not that new. It is much older than that. Prior to the development of antibiotics, pus, not much of anything was done. Such advances can account for the sharp decline in pregnancy complications over the years.

Recent statistics indicate that one out of every five pregnancies ends in miscarriage, and that about 80 per cent of childbearing women miscarry before age 35. This represents an amazingly high number. I don't know the statistics on D. and C.'s in between miscarriages but I'd be willing to bet it doesn't come close to matching the number of miscarriages.

What does it mean? A lot of women are running the risks I mentioned above. In most cases, perhaps most, there will be no complications. But with the risk there, the caution should be exercised, don't you think?

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 37 years old. I recently went for my reading Pap test and internal examination. The doctor tells me I had some fibroid tumors, which was news to me. They never cause me any pain.

My question concerns my infertility. I had only one conception in 15 years of marriage. Could these fibroids have been the cause of that? Or is it possible to conceive with these harmless fibroids?—Mrs. T.

Fibroid tumors are but one of several possible causes for infertility. Your fibroids probably developed after your only conception. Incidentally, a fibroid tumor is not painful. So it's not surprising the diagnosis was "news" for you. Bleeding is a more ominous symptom, but not another. The growths are usually discovered during routine pelvic examinations.

I wouldn't describe them as harmless, though, as do. Doing something about them depends on their size, their development and your doctor's discretion.

If they have been the cause of your inability to conceive, then removal might improve the situation. No guarantee.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband and I married at an early age. That was 24 years ago. At the time we were both very ignorant about sex.

During our first intercourse I didn't bleed. He knows and I know that there was no other man in my life. Recently, he has started bringing this matter up to me—often. I'm very hurt over his accusations. can you help?—Mrs. J. P.

If he is accusing you after 24 years of marriage, it would seem that he needs some professional counseling. There is obviously something else bothering him.

I really don't believe any explanation by you is in order. If it were, he would be your own and think it will end his unreasonable suspicion. I'd bet that your failure to bleed is not at issue anymore. The hymen may have been ruptured by a accident or by any number of vigorous activities. Too, the natural aperture could have been enlarged enough for intercourse without rupture or bleeding.

Using Big Bird

NEW YORK (AP) — This fall many school teachers across the United States will be using the yellow Big Bird and his Sesame Street friends to turn new and problem learners to reading. It is part of a new Harcourt multi-media reading assistance program jointly developed by the Children's Television Workshop and the Harcourt Brace publishing company to give teachers the proven appeal and techniques of Sesame Street.

Jim: "We have been getting bid many questions about the standard American forcing two bid that we might well discuss that bid."

Oswald: "The great advantage of that bid is that it is so nice when you get one."

Jim: "There are three general requirements. The first is a hand that will make or almost make game by itself. The second is slam possibilities and the third is enough high-card strength so that you for a contract may be passed out."

Oswald: "South has 20 high-card points and nine winners. He decides to open two spades. North raises to three and South sees no harm in cue bidding clubs to see what North will do."

Jim: "The rest of the bidding is worth study. North shows his diamond ace and denies second heart control after South cue bids in that suit. South's six club bid is an attempt to get North to show second-round control, but North just bids six spades."

Oswald: "Six makes easily and the partnership has kept out of the impossible spade slam."

Ask the Jacobys

A Florida reader wants to know the worst bid made in a bridge section.

There was no particular worst bid, but one player went through a series of complicated bidding maneuvers when he could have simply bid his partner's suit. It was failure to use "KISS" (Keep the Bridge Simple) that led to the trouble.

B.C. PC Leader Cancels Holiday to Fight Election

VICTORIA (CP) — When Progressive Conservative Leader Derek Walker heard there was going to be a British Columbia general election Dec. 11 he was preparing for a holiday in Mexico.

But instead of a relaxing trip to San Diego, Calif., with his wife and the 46-year-old Scotsman had to brace himself for a rigorous five-week election campaign.

He said at the time that he finished a tiring tour of all but two of B.C.'s 48 constituencies.

Despite his condition, the hard-working leader—a physician and surgeon who dropped his general practice last year—set out off running with the rest of the politicians or would-be politicians chasing 55 seats in the legislature.

Dr. Walker's campaign has not been as exhausting or far-reaching as Premier Dave Barrett's or Social Credit Leader Bill Bennett's, in mainly because the finances weren't there.

The party was only expected to spend about $25,000 on the campaign, compared with the $318,751 expenditure the Progressive Conservatives put out in the 1972 election.

Dr. Walker has visited the Lower Mainland area and made the occasional foray on Vancouver Island into the Okanagan but most of his time has been spent in his home riding of Oak Bay, part of Greater Victoria.

Dr. Walker was the only Progressive Conservative member of the legislature at dissolution, and he wants to make sure that at least a handful is re-represent the party after Dec. 11.

It could be a tough fight for the young businessman, but that's what observers said in the last B.C. Walker was a easy victory, polling 5,667 votes to his nearest rival, the Social Credit candidate.

Wilson Needs Economic Rally to Face New Year

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson will need all the cunning that brought him a string of remarkable successes in 1975 as he leads his Labour government into a new year strewn with potential political pitfalls.

Against considerable odds, he devised a stringent wage-restraint policy in 1975 and won union and food subsidies for it.

He also renegotiated terms of British membership in the European Economic Community (EEC) and then won national referendum support for continued membership by a 3-to-1 margin.

Throughout two years of oral election campaigns in 1974 he had promised that Labour, unlike the Conservative government that had taken Britain into the Common Market, let the people decide.

After renegotiation, he personally supported continued membership and was, according opinion polls during the 12 years of debate in the EEC, indicated the majority was opposed.

Even more remarkably, he brought the restive left wing of his party to heel, patching his cabinet split over the emotional Common Market issue and he saw the departure from the political centre ring of former Conservative leader Edward Heath, a bitter foe.

In April, his treasury chief Denis Healey, considered one of the harshest budgets in recent years, and the people took it with hardly a whimpering. Saying Britain was "living beyond its means," Healey lifted the equivalent of nearly $2.5 billion from the pocket of both consumers and taxpayers, increasing taxes and cutting subsidies on food, electricity and housing.

In essence, Wilson succeeded where he and a succession of other prime ministers had failed in recent decades—he convinced the people that the end really was at the door.

With inflation galloping at around 25 per cent, unemployment hitting 1 million and he thereby warned there could be no improvement in the British standard of living for the next few years, while the country put its economic house in order.

Thus convinced, the majority of Britain, the Trades Union Congress (TUC) and the Confederation of British Industry (CBI) all rallied behind the painful Wilson policy aimed at cutting inflation to around 10 per cent by late next summer. The limits put increases in pay ($12.60) a week.

But it doesn't work, and trade, employment and inflation figures do not show improvement. There is a strong threat of strong likelihood that restive left wing members of the Labour party will break ranks and defy the government.

Elsewhere, the government faces a rebellion within the National Health Service (NHS), with hospital doctors banning overtime to support wage demands and senior doctors threatening mass resignations over the plan to exclude their private practices from NHS hospital facilities.

There also is the thorny question of devolution, under which regional parliaments would be created for Scotland and Wales with limited powers—the constitutional change since Ireland was cut from the rest of Britain in 1921. All major parties favor it in principle, but remain cautious in fear that the thrusting Scottish Nationalist Party (SNP) might gain control of an Edinburgh assembly and use it to promote outright independence.

The undoubted star of the big political drama of the year was Conservative Leader who, at 49, became the first woman ever to lead a British party, having scored in February an upset victory in a leadership fight by Conservatives.

An advocate of the small-c conservative ideals of low taxes, free enterprise and the right of the bright—like herself—to succeed, she easily beat five other candidates, including Heath. He retired to the back benches, icily declining a Tory other offer of a shadow cabinet post.

With the Tories thus still under their new leadership, Wilson was free to concentrate on his economic problems.

Perhaps as an omen of troubles ahead, however, the year ended with a mass demonstration in London against the soaring unemployment. Only the government had warned would be necessary evil in its policy to curb inflation.

Prince Edward Teachers Ratify Salary Increase of 30.1 Per Cent

By MARGARET HAVLOCK
Staff Reporter

BLOOMFIELD — Prince Edward school trustees, the secondary school teachers' salary negotiating committee and elementary school teachers' salary negotiating committee have ratified salary agreements giving secondary teachers an overall increase of 30.1 per cent and elementary teachers 31.8 per cent over the 1974-75 agreements. The new salary schedule is retroactive to September 1, 1975 and applies to the 1975-76 school year.

Teachers now are being paid on the basis of the new salary schedule. The agreement with elementary teachers was not reached until after the deadline.

A release issued Monday by the board of education stated, "While it is obvious that to retain or attract good teachers Prince Edward teaching salaries must be competitive with neighboring school boards in view of recent rulings concerning teachers' salaries by the anti-inflation board it is also obvious that approval from the board is necessary before payment can be made on a salary agreement in excess of the anti-inflation guidelines.

Prince Edward school trustees will refer the elementary teachers' salary agreement to the anti-inflation board for a ruling. Until direction is received from this board elementary school teachers will be paid on the basis of a 12 per cent increase over the 1974-75 agreement.

The new salary schedule now in effect for secondary school teachers calls for a minimum basic salary of $10,300 in category IV and a maximum of $17,600 (11 years to maximum.)

Category V states a minimum of $10,800 and a maximum of $18,700 (12 years to maximum.)

Category VI calls for a minimum of $11,800 and a maximum of $21,100 (13 years to maximum).

Category VII states a minimum of $12,200 and a maximum of $22,500.

A principal with two years experience receives $30,800 and a vice-principal $26,600.

With three years experience a principal receives $32,000 and a vice-principal $27,600.

The new salary schedule for elementary teachers calls for a minimum of $7,700 and a maximum of $11,100 in category one.

Category two states $8,400 minimum and $13,500 maximum while category three calls for $9,100 minimum and $15,200 maximum.

A teacher in category four receives $10,200 minimum and $17,600 maximum while in category five minimum is $10,800 and maximum is $18,700.

Category six calls for a minimum of $11,800 and a maximum of $21,100 and category seven specifies $12,500 minimum and $22,500 maximum.

Principals are to be paid on the basis of experience and number of teachers in their schools.

Salary Demands Too High

Trenton Considers Volunteer Firemen

BY JERRY BROWN
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — A volunteer fire brigade system should be implemented in lieu the current fire department if firefighters here do not reconsider salary demands presented to the municipality, Aubrey Sharp, town clerk told council Monday night.

A special committee of the entire council was formed to begin a study of municipalities listed by Mr. Sharp that currently have a volunteer brigade to consider the possibility of implementing such a system to replace the town's fire department and volunteer system.

Council was told the firefighters demand for a 19 per cent increase in their 1975 contract, which is going to arbitration December 17, was actual basis, there were 493,000 persons officially unemployed at that time.

On a seasonally-adjusted basis, the jobless rate for those 24 and younger increased by four-tenths of one per centage point to 13.3 per cent.

The rate also increased to 4 per cent from 4.3 per cent for women aged 25 and older. However, the jobless level dropped to five per cent from 5.2 per cent for men of the same age.

SHARP JUMP

Among the increases, the sharpest jump was in New Brunswick, where the rate rose nine-tenths of one percentage point to 13.5 per cent, the second highest rate in the country.

Newfoundland recorded the sharpest drop in unemployment, but retained the country's highest jobless level. The Newfoundland rate was 14.1 per cent, down from 19.6 per cent in October.

6.6 per cent excess of the settlement the municipality reached with its other employees, Mr. Sharp told the council, continued trend to increase the firefighters salaries would "have serious effects on the negotiations with other town employees."

Mr. Sharp said that his recommendations were not meant to be taken as a threat against the firemen during the upcoming arbitration, but rather as a realistic approach to the rising salary problems.

"There are municipal employees who have served the town for more than 25 years, some department heads, who will be receiving less than a fireman who has been with the department for only five years and conceivably earning almost $20,000," Mr. Sharp told the council.

The $20,000 salary figure was based on the firefighters request for a 29 per cent increase in their 1976 contract which will not be negotiated until the 1975 contract is settled, said Mr. Sharp.

A total re-organization of the department's classification system would also be necessary if the present system were to be maintained, said the town clerk.

"It is my feeling we should have only two classifications—probationary firefighters and firefighters, period," said Mr. Sharp. Currently, the department has a fire chief, deputy chief, four captains, four first class firefighters, one second class fireman and one probationary fireman, said the clerk.

Mr. Sharp told the council that part of the problem was that they had lost control of the decision making process of granting salary increases, claiming the firefighters have entered arbitration four times in the last six contract negotiations.

"What I am really saying is that your decisions are being made for you by an arbitration board made up of appointed persons, usually from large urban centres and certainly, it is obvious that they are not concerned with the after—effects of their decision upon our town," said the clerk.

Mr. Sharp said the responsibility was for council not to sit back and throw up its arms and blame the entire problem on arbitration but to try and return the issue of salary dispensation to municipal hands.

"I recommend that council urge the ratepayers of the town to provide input into this matter to assist in the decision (re: volunteer fire brigade) council eventually is being forced to make," said Mr. Sharp.

Jobless Rate Rises In Four Provinces

OTTAWA (CP) — National unemployment rose slightly in November as the jobless rate jumped in four provinces—including Ontario and Quebec—but declined in five others.

Statistics Canada reported today that 7.3 per cent of the labor force was unemployed in November, up from 7.2 per cent in October.

It was the ninth consecutive month the rate has hovered above seven per cent, the worst jobless level in 34 years. The rate is generally predicted to get worse before it gets better.

The figures are adjusted for seasonal variation, which eliminists consider a more accurate measure of economic performance.

On an actual basis, 640,000 persons were officially unemployed in November.

The unemployment rate in November, 1974 was 5.5 per cent of the labor force on a seasonally-adjusted basis. On an

Air Traffic Controllers Suspended

QUEBEC (CP) — Two air traffic controllers at Montreal's Dorval International Airport have been suspended without pay for using French to issue air-traffic control instructions, the Quebec Air Workers Association said Monday.

The Quebec City-based association said one worker was suspended Saturday and a second earlier Monday.

The association, which represents 500 commercial aviation workers in the province, said it deplored the attitude of Maurice Pitre, regional director of the federal air traffic control service and Louis Desmarais, chief of the Dorval air traffic control centre for issuing the suspensions.

U.S. Defeats UN Attack on Israel

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States has cast its 13th veto in the United Nations Security Council to defeat a resolution condemning Israeli air attacks on Palestinian camps in Lebanon.

U.S. Ambassador Daniel Patrick Moynihan told the 15-member council Monday night his government "has received assurances from the Israeli government that such attacks are repeated, the council would consider other measures.

Moynihan said the United States strongly deplored the Israeli raids. But he said the council should also condemn the Palestinian guerrilla raids into Israel which the Israelis say their raids are designed to check.

Face Murder Charges

Two Belleville Men Remanded to Dec. 17

BY ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

THUNDER BAY (CP) — Two Belleville men charged with murder pending trial by life imprisonment were remanded in custody to Dec. 17 when they appeared in provincial court here last Wednesday.

Frederick Charles Reed, 19, who gives 86 Bertram Blvd. as his home address and Michael Paul Karlbeck, 17, of Cloverleaf Dr., are charged in connection with the Nov. 23 stabbing death of Amadee Plante, 48, a service station attendant in Pass Lake, Ont.

Ontario Provincial Police at Thunder Bay say two men attacked Plante, who was working at the service station in Pass Lake, about 25 miles east of here. Plante was stabbed in the neck.

MPs Take Exception

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs took exception Monday to a proposed new Citizenship Act that would cut the waiting period from five years to three for immigrants who became Canadian citizens. Bruno Friesen (PC Surrey-White Rock) said that the legislation, if approved unchanged, would put a policy of "citizenship made easy" into effect without good reason for doing so.

Immigration in Question

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration officers are being ordered to grant landed immigrant status to new arrivals when so ordered by the Immigration Appeal Board even though investigations into their background are incomplete, a government spokesman confirmed Monday. MacEachen Will Attend Conference

OTTAWA (CP) — When ministers from 27 consumer and producer countries sit down in Paris next week for energy-raw material talks, External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen will be one of two chairmen.

Mr. MacEachen confirmed reports Canada has been asked to be co-chair the conference in answer to a question from Douglas Roche (PC—Edmonton Strathcona) in the Commons Monday. The reports said Venezuela was asked to be the other co-chairman.

Officials said Canada will accept the invitation on the approval of the European Economic Community (EEC), the U.S. and Japan.

Canada and Venezuela will chair the ministerial conference Dec. 16-18 and are then expected to oversee the work of four commissions on energy, resources, finance and development throughout the next year.

The two probably will be in the chair for a meeting of senior officials about mid-1976 and at the wind-up of the conference, probably next October.

Christians Hold Out Against Moslem Forces

BEIRUT (AP) — Christian gunmen with their backs to the Mediterranean held out today against a fierce encircling assault by Moslem forces in the downtown hotel and commercial district of this Lebanese capital.

A police spokesman said more than 30 persons were killed and hundreds were wounded during the night. The government radio said it was "the worst and cruellest night of fighting" in the civil war that began eight months ago.

Police said at least 125 persons have been killed in the latest round of fighting. It began Saturday night after a massacre by both sides in which police said 128 persons were murdered.

The heaviest fighting was in the seaside area that includes the major tourist hotels, the main commercial district and the banking district, once the financial heart of the Middle East.

An estimated 700 Moslems pushed down the pincer movement that almost surrounded the Christians, cutting them off from the Ashrafieh, their stronghold inside the city.

Half a dozen big fires burned out of control after rocket and mortar exchanges. They included one in the 500-room Phoenicia Hotel where Christian militiamen were besieged.

The Moslems apparently were trying to push to the sea near the port of Beirut, which adjoins Ashrafieh, and cut off the Christians in the hotel and commercial district.

The Christians were holding out in several tall buildings in the area including the Holiday Inn, the Phoenicia, the unfinished Hilton Hotel and the Starco office building.

Spokesmen for the right-wing Phalange party said its 6,000-man militia, the largest of the private Christian armies, repulsed the Moslem attack at several points.

The government radio told all residents to stay indoors for the third straight day.

Nuclear Power Demand On Rise Says Expert

Although there will be increased use of other forms of energy in the future the use of nuclear energy will be a must, vice-president of the Engineering Institute of Canada said in Belleville Monday.

In the next 10 years, said Phil Ross-Ross, an engineer with Atomic Energy Canada, about $15-billion will be invested in Ontario in nuclear power.

He was speaking at the third annual host-a-student day sponsored by the Belleville branch of the institute.

Mr. Ross-Ross told students at the banquet that due to growing energy needs many engineers will be required in the field of nuclear energy.

Canadian levels of nuclear power production of electricity is equal to that of all major coalieries and is going to stay there, he said.

Many Students Oppose Sharp Fee Increase

TRENTON — A proposal tabled in Queen's Park, on Nov. 20, could possibly increase university and college tuition fees by about 65 per cent.

The report, from the Special Program Review Committee, under Treasurer Darcy McKeough, also recommended grants to students be eliminated and substituted with an increased loan system.

These are just two of the 184 recommended changes to slow the increase of provincial government spending.

The report also recommends an increased bursary system to help low-income students recognizing academic achievement as well as financial need.

An estimated 1,250 teaching positions would have to be eliminated if the increase of fees is not implemented, states the report.

Mr. McKeough said the fee increase would be inconsistant with government policy and possibly run counter the federal anti-inflation program.

In an informal survey at Loyalist College, students were asked the question: How do you feel about the proposed increase in tuition fees?

CHRIS ALEXANDER

Chris Alexander, a second-year civil engineer student, said, "It's going to cutback the number of applications and the number of students that attend."

A resident of RR 5 Trenton, Mr. Alexander said it may be helpful in some courses such as radio because of the present number of students.

LYNN BAKER

A second year mental resources counsellor student, Lynn Baker, said she does not think much of the proposed increase.

"It's uncalled for," she said. "If they increase fees 65 per cent, why not just go on to university."

If the increase was prior to her first year at the college, the Batawa resident said she would not have attended, but she added that she would have if the increase was effective for her second year.

LORNE REDFORD

"If they implement the fee increase it will be just another instance of the lack of planning." said 21-year-old Lorne Redford, a second-year communications studio techniques student.

The Frankford resident said the changes would mean a reversal of present government philosophy on education.

CAROLYN SMITH

A 19-year-old communications studio technicues student, Carolyn Smith, said if the government is to increase the fees, they should also increase the teaching quality.

"If my course continued next year, and if the fees are increased, I will not attend. I would not expect my parents to pay that much," she said.

Many students however, would be able to afford education as readily as before, she stated.

JODI BROOKS

A first-year student from Cold Lake, Alta., said for those trying to get an education it (fee hike) will create problems.

Jodi Brooks, 19, said she is making just enough money during the summer now to pay expenses.

"It's still cheaper than the States, but the cutback of grants is the shaft," she said.

The Belleville resident said the decrease of grants will hinder the opportunity for an education for the majority of people.

MURRAY VAN ALSTINE

Murray Van Alstine, a second-year water resources student, said he does not think the increase is justified.

The 23-year-old student said, "I don't think I would have returned if the increase was in effect this year — too much money."

Mr. Van Alstine said education is worth it, but it is not a good idea to increase loans instead of grants.

The Belleville resident said he thought enrolment to the college may decrease but not by much.

Integration Main Goal

Administrator of Prince Edward Heights, Robert MacKenzie, this week stated that the residents of the government centre for the mentally retarded have returned to the community in the past three years. He added that the challenge of the village complex lies in the fact that it affords an opportunity to bridge the gap between institutional and community living.

The administrator noted when the centre opened in July, 1971, it housed 39 residents and a skeleton staff.

Mr. MacKenzie said in the last two years there have been 26 direct admissions to the centre from Prince Edward County and outlying districts.

In the last three years about 40 persons from Prince Edward Heights have begun to function in the community, he added. Over one-half of these individuals receives follow-up services either from Prince Edward Heights social workers or protective community agencies.

Mr. MacKenzie said he anticipates another 20 residents will be integrated into the community in 1976.

He commented that 9.5 per cent of the residents of Prince Edward Heights experience hearing difficulties. A total of 4.5 per cent is completely deaf.

"We service the whole province for special cases as related to deaf persons," remarked the administrator.

Official Outlines New Trends In Aiding Mentally Retarded

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Prince Edward Heights, the Ontario government centre for the mentally retarded, is a half-way point between life in a large institution and community living, says administrator Robert MacKenzie.

With a small number of cases there is close work between Prince Edward Heights and the Sir James Whitney School in Belleville.

Mr. MacKenzie said that the major problem is integration of deaf residents with the community. The community is unable to communicate with the deaf residents of Prince Edward Heights.

The administrator said efforts have been made to find homes in the community where Prince Edward Heights residents in the process of integration can live.

He commented that it is difficult to find proper accommodation as some of the proposed houses do not meet required standards of space and fire safety.

Sidney Making Sure Residents Aware of Winter Rec Program

WALLBRIDGE — Registration for winter recreation programs in Sidney Township begins Wednesday says township recreation director Wendy Neale, and programs offered have changed little from last fall.

Only skiing at the Batawa Ski Club and skating at the Stirling Arena have been added, she said.

Mrs. Neale said Monday registration will begin Wednesday at the township offices and continue through to Friday 10 a.m. to 4.30 p.m.).

In an effort to overcome problems encountered with their fall program, the recreation department will twice advertise its winter programs in the hamlet of Batawa.

The director said no response had been obtained from Batawa children to fall programs — thereby forcing their cancellations.

A survey to ascertain a reason behind what was considered a lack of interest showed children in the hamlet simply hadn't known the programs were being held, she said.

This time, children will be given notices about programming at the schools something not done in the fall. Batawa homes will also be mailed a flyer, she said.

Programs for children this fall will include ballet, gymnastics, judo (with $7 registration fees), and art ($10, materials included.)

The children skiing program, said Mrs. Neale, will costs $20 and children must bring their own equipment.

The course fee includes bus fare to the Batawa Ski Club from a number of still undesignated locations in the township.

Except for the skiing program ($12) all adult courses will cost $10.

Recreation department staff will also take place (7 to 9 p.m.) at Bayside Elementary School Thursday, and Batawa Elementary School Friday.

PLO Only the Latest in Long Line of Political Entities Conceived in Blood

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

Perhaps the severest test of what we think of the Third World and its complex and infuriating politics and economics has been exposed to the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO).

Before it came to prominence, first through the aircraft hijackings of its more extreme branches, then through its efforts to receive United Nations accreditation, we were inclined to write off the Third World as a place of military tyrants and corrupt leadership.

These have not gone away. Indeed they are endemic to the national life of too many countries of the emerging world.

But it is the PLO, with their insistence they represent a potential Palestinian state of four million people, which challenges our objectivity.

Whatever we think of the brutal methods PLO have employed to get the world to listen to them, the organization does represent a potential power in the world as the Jewish terrorist organizations did just did in the 1940s, and as such notables as David Ben Gurion, Begin and the late prime minister Nehru said their Congress party did in the 1930s.

By inviting the PLO to take its full part in the Security Council debate on last week's Israeli air raid on Lebanon, the United Nations has given the PLO equivalent status to member nations.

It already had received full observer status by the United Nations. And if that had affronted you, remember that many of the national leaders of Third World countries in the UN at present were also heads of liberation movements a few years ago.

Further back in the post-war period, (other than the leaders of Jewish liberation organizations of the late '40s), is present senior statesman Golda Meir, who, at 84 honored by Queen Elizabeth. But at 64 in the mid-50s she was the head of the Kikuyu tribe which literally spearheaded the bloody and extremely vicious Man Man revolt.

No one hears anything from Mozambique, one of the newest of the new nations whose president is a Marxist and until the proclamation of independence against Portugal, was head of the Frelimo.

It was the tough, resilient liberation movement which fought Portugal in East Africa, for about 15 years and finally won.

The same is true of Algeria's leaders who fought a relentless cruel wars against the French in the late '50s until the late Gen. Charles de Gaulle saw the light and supported Algerian independence.

Few, very few, of the Third World new nations have emerged in the peaceful way we in the West would prefer. Nigeria is an outstanding exception, having gone into childhood with a constitution modeled directly on the Canadian and allowing substantial regional autonomy.

But if Nigeria was born in peace and calm, that largest of African nations had to go through the fire and blood of civil war when Biafra broke away in 1966-69 and temporarily proclaimed itself an independent state.

Therefore the PLO is the most recent in the long postwar history of the rise of the world's liberation movements, determined to find an independent state for its people, almost always by violent means.

Their place and attitude transcends the problems of Middle East politics and issues. They demand a new approach with the same sense of legitimacy as the Indians, Kenyans, Algerians and the Jews before them.

Miss MacDonald's Pitch

Flora MacDonald made some useful suggestions on the subject of protection of our coastal resources — a reference to the "raping" of our fish stocks by foreign fishing fleets — and regarding prison policy in the course of her recent visit here.

With new long-range surveillance aircraft on order, the problem of patrolling our coastlines to the extent necessary should become easier. Naval destroyers are also engaged in this function in the Atlantic and presumably such violations of the fishing limits as are detected result in prosecutions.

As for law enforcement, the member for Kingston and the Islands is on controversial ground in calling for an end to the death penalty, but she does balance this line with a call for tougher measures to prevent crime and with regard to parole.

However, why animals are equated with hardline criminals has always been a mystery to us, as when Miss MacDonald refers to those criminals who should never be granted parole as "literally animals." Of course we know what she means, but animals in general deserve better; they can be trained in good behavior, as with dogs, and wild animals are a fact of nature. Hardened criminals however act the way they do because of other ungovernable forces in human nature. Yes, prisons are for them.

A Span of Years

The work span of most professional and working people, given good health and barring unforeseen circumstances, is about 40 years.

It has been Wellington's good fortune no doubt that former principal Milton Snider was the guiding force and grassroots educator he has been described for that space of time and a little more. Forty-one years in all.

Memories of schooldays evoke some of the strongest emotions and glimmers of nostalgia, and it was just such an occasion at the Consolidated School recently when it was renamed the C.M.L. Snider elementary school.

It lends strength to any community when a man of integrity and dedication can give so many years of service to succeeding generations. This was what Wellington has enjoyed under Mr. Snider.

The former principal has been retired since 1973, but his name and his work live on in the community, and in the minds of former students such as Alex Tait. Now a teacher in Kitchener, Mr. Tait's recollections at recent dedication ceremonies went back to Grade 1, attention to the Three Rs and some old-fashioned discipline from both principal and parents.

The school itself spans a past and present in education in the community which is symbolic of the essential strength and stability of life in Ontario even amid changing and often difficult times.

Movie Nostalgia

In the movie "That's Entertainment," which is a composite of the best of the Hollywood song and dance musicals of bygone days, actor Mickey Rooney appears on the set of the old Andy Hardy series.

The name of Mickey Rooney still casts memories back over the years. At 53 he is something of a showbiz legend — and here he was in Belleville, for the second time in less past few years, and a reunion with actor-singer Wally Williamson and his family.

The pair toured and starred in a number of movies together. Mr. Williamson under his then stage name of Julian Gallo. Students of Massasaga and other area schools know Mr. Williamson for his musical visits and one Massasaga Grade 1 lass, speaking of his visit on the occasion of the school's 50th anniversary summer concert has recalled that the show went on even though the visitor had a cold.

Her memory one day should match that of Andy Hardy fans of the forties, and of other movies of Mickey Rooney who in that latter-day movie set appearance noted wryly that "we all change with the years."

A little heavier yes, but still the one and only Mickey Rooney and talking again of his fondness for the Quinte area, in particular of Ameliasburg township where the Williamsons live, and of a renewed desire to acquire some land here. It seems a far cry from Andy Hardy and Hollywood, but all the more interesting for that.

Quinte Animal Shelter: Efficient Operation Says Reader in Seeking Public Support

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

In your article, Saturday, Nov. 15 — City Board Rejects Humane Society Request for Grant.

Throughout the past year, I have read and heard various reports of the financial difficulties of the Quinte Branch of the Humane Society, and also various criticisms of the branch, i.e. the kennels aren't clean enough; diseased animals are put out for adoption, etc.

My own feelings, through quite a number of visits to the Society in a search for pets, was that the centre was very well kept in view of the facilities available; the animals' kennels were clean; they had food and water; the staff was courteous, and always seemed to care about the animals they were sheltering. (Also, thanks to the Society, I have had a lovely white cat for the past three years, and a beautiful German Shepherd dog for the past two — these animals received a loving home — we received a lot of love in return).

Although I have no first hand knowledge of the financial status of the Society, from what I can gather, it is hampered under a thoroughly inadequate budget, inadequate staff and facilities, and secretarial assistance. Also, how they cannot even have a Tag Day to help raise funds for this extremely worthy cause, because "Tag Days are unpopular with the public". On the front page of the same edition of your paper, however there appears a large photo of a "tagger" one of many getting ready to "tag the public" for funds to try and raise approximately $1,500 of the $6,000 needed to put on a Santa Claus parade, which isn't even any form of charity. Why doesn't the RPAB "discourage" this Tag Day?

Also, hardly a day goes by that there isn't a Walk-a-thon, Skate-a-thon, dance-a-thon, bike-a-thon, starve-a-thon, etc., etc., to raise cash or another. Granted, the participators and sponsors are to be commended for their efforts, but I think we must all realize by now that this is a lot of duplication, and in some of these rather haphazardly-arranged events, one wonders if indeed the charities end up getting a very large percentage of the money donated. It seems to be getting to be almost just a fad. In fact, in one instance, the high school student soliciting me as a sponsor, couldn't give accurate information as to the charity he was supposedly "starving" himself for.

Every year the government grants hundreds of thousands of dollars for causes that make us shake our heads in wonderment, some of the Canada Council grants are for "happenings" that make one gasp in disbelief, and yet, the sick, neglected, and abandoned animals of our nation seem to rate practically zero with the "powers that be", and also, seemingly, with the public, particularly in this area. How utterly disheartening it must be at times for the dedicated people who try to care for them.

Somehow I am sure there must be many, many people in the Quinte area who are animal lovers, and who feel our Humane Society is doing a great job, and fulfilling an urgent need. We call on them when we have problems with our pets, or when they are lost or found — let's help them to do an even better job.

If just a few thousand of us in the Quinte area would take just $1.00 each from our Christmas budget; if every reader would just give the price of cigarettes plus a few cents more to make a dollar each, and we all donated this to the Humane Society, think what a lift it would give to the workers. Think also how animals might have a better chance of not being lost and abandoned, or of freezing or starving to death this winter.

I am enclosing a cheque for $25.00, made out to the Humane Society. I hope this will encourage others to make a contribution as well. I know I can count on you to make delivery of this cheque, and may I hope that when doing so, you might see your way clear to offer your assistance in printing "proper identifying tags, etc." that would be needed should the Society win an appeal for a Tag Day, they now already have one volunteer "tagger" — my phone number is 394-2272.

Treasurer.

Era Of Canned Applause

The Picton Gazette

In the entertainment industry — and in politics too — careers are made and broken by applause and by lack of applause. We are often manipulated into offering applause and sometimes our applause is measured by machines. Persons in groups can be led to applaud things at which very few of them as individuals would even clap one hand. We readily applaud things which do not deserve our applause — probably because we feel that willingness to applaud indiscriminately is a sign of tolerance and broadmindedness.

Canned applause along with canned laughter is often dubbed into the sound-track of filmed television programs and used as background support on radio shows. We sit in our easy chairs and let ourselves be beguiled by artificial applause like accepting what we really know to be utter tripe as the fine flower of human creativity. How else can you account for the phenomenal success of some television shows?

We often show amusement and offer applause because we do not wish to be judged odd and puritanical and narrow-minded. But broad mindedness can have its own subversively Philistine narrowmindedness. Artistic integrity is not necessarily authenticated by four-letter words, bared female bosoms and explicit sex.

Today we are being subtly forced into conformities of response and attitude without our being fully aware of the extent to which we are being manipulated. Applause can be contagious — and therein is its peril.

Human nature, fortunately, has in it a strain of stubborn eccentricity and this keeps society from becoming thoroughly homogenized in taste and judgements. We hope many of us, really, bring individual judgement to bear on entertainments on politics — on anything which is group, for its own selfish purposes, tries to manipulate us into applauding?

Unusual Disease

Montreal Star

Sleeping sickness may be a misnomer for the disease which once we were inclined to translate only into the deepest Africa and the tsetse fly. But equine encephalitis as it is now known in North America has been bedeviling us for years too often to be accepted as casually as it seems to be by health authorities in both Canada and the United States.

Yes it not for the sometimes fatal nature of the disease - and the nearly always serious medical effects on those who survive the conflict between the administrations of Manitoba and Winnipeg about how that city's mosquito-control programme proceeds. But surely it is the sort of problem which should not be debated at the local level.

It is one which calls for a coordinated effort by both authorities of both Canada and the United States, with advice from the World Health Organization if necessary because the virus is not one that can be localized.

Conservation of Equity Is Now the Prime Concern of Tax Advisors

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

Up until the income-tax reform of 1971, Canadian tax advisors always find ways to beat the tax system a little if they tried hard enough.

But since then, just as much effort is required to avoid being beaten by the tax system.

Professional tax advisors so longer concentrate on the investment strategy directed at avoiding tax, but on the conservation of clients' equity in anticipation of a tax [illegible] may not, however, some capital will again have a reasonable chance to grow.

Some of the key suggestions made by a panel of tax and investment specialists at a recent conference sponsored by the Financial Post were these:

—Take full advantage of the opportunities to defer taxes and to invest, by using registered savings plans.

—If you borrow, do so (if at all possible) for a purpose that permits you to treat interest as payments as an expense that you can deduct from your taxable income.

—Consider combining investment and employment through things (such as antiques, fine art or even a summer cottage) that tend to increase in value over the years.

"The tax and the investment game are becoming much more expensive for an amateur to play than they have been since the end of the last war," according to panel member William A. Macdonald, a Toronto lawyer.

The fundamentals of that game have been changing in Western economies because increasingly politicized, driving the laws of economics underground, he contends.

The result has been much higher taxation on capital investment and savings, a 10-year decline in real rates of return on most business investment, and ever-expanding government controls, he said Mr. Macdonald's view.

For the individual taxpayer, "the central strategy must be directed at ultimately having chips to play with when there's a worthwhile game to play, some unpredictable time ahead."

Example: Let's say your marginal, or highest, income-tax rate is 60 per cent. (Yes it should be so lucky). You borrow $50,000 at interest of 11 per cent or $6,000 a year.

If you apply the borrowing to the purchase of a non-business asset (the family home for example), there's no tax relief.

But if you invest the $50,000, then the interest is a deductible expense. Overall: Your after-tax cost of borrowing is only $2,400.

The saving of $3,600 is the after-tax equivalent of an additional $9,000 salary or bonus, Macdonald points out.

Tax benefits on a considerable scale are made, he says, sometimes be found in what the Income Tax Act calls personal-use property.

The idea is to take advantage of the fact that some such personal items tend to hold their real value, especially if they are unique, or because they "age" rather than wear out.

A work of art or an antique that is bought or sold for less than $1,000 is ignored by the tax collector. Any capital gain you might make is tax-free income—providing that you are not a dealer.

What if the price is more than $1,000, and you sell at a loss rather than a gain?

The loss could be used to offset gains from the same class for one year back or five years forward.

"This is not as good as ordinary capital losses, which can be carried forward until death," notes Mr. Macdonald.

"But it's better than ordinary personal-use property — a loss which don't count at all."

The hidden danger in tax strategies is that the taxpayer may become too absorbed and put the cart before the horse.

If the investment transaction itself doesn't make sense, forget it.

Workers Are Bitter

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Striking paperworkers in the St. Catharines area are more bitter towards the pulp and paper companies than are paperworkers in Northern Ontario, a senior union official said Monday. About 2,000 union members have been on strike against five area mills for five months.

McKeough To Outline Spending Plans

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Treasury Darcy McKeough said Monday he hopes to outline to municipalities soon the details of the province's spending plans for next year.

He was answering questions in the legislature on his previous statement that the increase in government grants to communities will be held to six-per-cent increase during the next fiscal year.

Marion Boyd(non (NDP—Toronto Beaches-Woodbine) said municipalities facing the six-per-cent increase ceiling already are planning cuts in vital programs. Mr. McKeough said he is delighted to hear that municipal officials are starting their budget processing early.

Urban Institute Paints Bleak Rental Picture

TORONTO (CP) — The Urban Development Institute (UDI) painted a bleak picture for apartment dwellers Monday, warning of dire consequences if government rent-control proposals are adopted without key amendments.

The institute, representing landlords and developers, said the government's proposed controls would hamstring landlords financially, restrict upkeep on buildings and bring apartment construction to a halt.

Bob Strom, chairman of the institute's apartment group, presented figures from a UDI survey which show the average vacancy rate in Metropolitan Toronto is 2.7 per cent and the rest of the province has a vacancy rate of 3.4 per cent.

He said the government has been egred into a witch hunt by the NDP because of a few "rare and badly distorted" leases brought out during the election campaign.

Mr. Strom quoted a report prepared for the housing ministry last summer which said average rents in Toronto had increased by 11.74 per cent over the preceding 12 months.

Mr. Strom said the survey was proof that rents were not set without a conscience.

The institute's survey among its members indicates "there is no shortage of accommodation in Ontario—or even right here in Metro Toronto," he said.

He was answering the institute wants two amendments to the proposed rent-control bill.

The first would allow landlords to rent vacant apartments at market value, regardless of the increase ceiling—proposed as eight per cent for the first year. The second would allow landlords and tenants to reach mutual agreements on rent increases, outside the proposed rent control bureaucracy.

NDP Leader Stephen Lewis said later in an interview that he does not accept the institute's vacancy rate figures, saying he has followed the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.'s figures recently and they have shown vacancy rates as low as one or two per cent.

He was skeptical of Mr. Strom's suggestion that the average Toronto rent is just more than $216 a month. Mr. Lewis said the government's housing survey, showing the 11.74-per cent rent increase, is suspect.

"For every person they surveyed in mid-lease—when they couldn't report a rent increase—they calculated the rent increase as zero," Mr. Lewis said. "They shouldn't have been counted at all."

Watergate Memories Will Influence 1976 Election

WASHINGTON (CP) — United States citizens, when they line up to vote next November, will have their first chance since Watergate to choose for themselves the man they want to occupy the White House.

And already, experts are speculating upon how—if at all—that scandal may have affected traditional American attitudes toward the presidency.

Details of the Watergate upheaval may be growing dim in the memories of many Americans.

It was back on June 17, 1972, that a band of burglars was arrested in the Democratic national committee headquarters in the Watergate office-hotel-shopping complex on the banks of the Potomac.

Brick the widening scandal unfolded, however, his boss—President Richard Nixon—had resigned his office and 66 individuals and 29 corporations had been charged with a variety of crimes.

Forty-four people and 19 of the corporations pleaded guilty. Twenty men went to jail.

Then came additional shock when President Gerald Ford issued a blanket pardon to Nixon, the man who plucked him from the House of Representatives and put him on the path to the White House itself. Ford subsequently found it necessary to go on television to insist there had been "no deals" involved in his succession or the pardon.

By election day, 1976, the U.S. will have functioned for more than two years under caretakers, neither of them elected to their posts, in the offices of president and vice-president.

The impact of Watergate, however, may be blurred for scholars who will have to grade it against such issues as intelligence community - production, recession and soaring unemployment, the energy crisis and disclosure of murder plots within the U.S. intelligence community, issues that peaked as Watergate was waning.

Some experts are convinced that all of this is reflected in signs of declining political party membership, traditional base of candidate power in the U.S.

Some say the time may be ripe for the emergence of a strong man with broad personal-party-issues support based on distrust of the political systems of the past. So far, no such demagogue has appeared.

Others predict that the traditional two-party system not only will survive, but will grow stronger as the public shies away from the demagogue this go-round.

One who feels this way also predicts that future presidents will tend to become more and more remote from the public, dodging controversy as much as possible.

Aaron Wildavsky, dean of the graduate school of public policy at University of California, writes:

"The failure of demagogues, parties or mass movements to take advantage of the national disarray of the past 10 years suggests the unlikelihood of any great change in today's basic political arrangements."

Wildavsky argues that a reticence on the part of future presidents may emerge as they study the "severe erosion" of personal reputation suffered by all recent presidents as far back as Dwight Eisenhower.

In addition, he notes a decides lack of public enthusiasm for any of the current prospective replacements for Ford.

"When one or two leaders fail, that may well be their fault," he writes. "When all fail, and when all known replacements are expected to fail, the difficulty is not individual, but systemic."

Few of the prospective replacements—and there are more than a dozen in the field—are taking hard stands on any of the issues. Instead, many have been content to deal with bread-and-butter policies.

Ford's firing of Defence Secretary James Schlesinger and since-reversed stand against financial aid to New York City have handed his enemies further ammunition.

Much of the anti-Ford campaign has taken on bitter personal overtones of revenge.

One columnist, who refers to Ford as "old bungle foot," calls him "Nixon's Revenge."

Ford himself, to the despair of his image-makers—who describe him as "earnest" and "amiable," presents a massive target for political jibes.

Something less than a dynamic speaker, Ford's utterances have given rise to the remark that if he ever gives a fireside chat, the fire will go out.

And he has been photographed falling down the stairs of his presidential jet, bumping his head in the doorway of the presidential helicopter and wearing a piece of tape on his forehead where he bumped it in a swimming pool.

Such incidents have revived the old line by the late Lyndon Johnson who said that Ford—a former college football lineman—had been playing too long without a helmet.

His campaign with the WIN buttons—standing for whip inflation now—was a fiasco. First, the buttons ran out. Then cartoonists blossomed with drawings or rich Arab oil men wearing "LOSE" buttons.

Some believe that such ridicule may prove more harmful to Ford at the polls than any possible long-range connection with Nixon and Watergate.

Nixon's top three counsellors—H.R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and John Mitchell—are all out of jail after serving shortened versions of their 2½-to-8-years sentences.

So is John Dean, the former White House aide whose televised testimony kept the country spellbound at the height of the scandal.

Haldeman, his distinctive crew-cut grown long now, is writing a book on Watergate. Ehrlichman has grown a beard and now is working on a novel somewhere in New Mexico. Mitchell is helping in the preparation of his own appeal.

Dean, whose wife beat him to it, is also writing a Watergate book.

Ziegler went into brief exile with his boss in San Clemente, Calif. Now he works for an international engineering firm.

Senator Sam Ervin (Dem. N.C.), colorful chairman who enlivened the investigating committee sessions with folksy down-home humor, has retired to a porch down home in Morganton.

Howard Baker, pipe-smoking Republican senator from Tennessee who became a television talk-show celebrity as vice-chairman to "Senator Sam," still is in the Senate. Today he is spoken of, but not stridently, as a possible middle-of-the-road moderate candidate for the presidency.

Joseph's Family!

Leslie, Paulette, Pam Melinda (top), Dale, Joan, Judy and Margaret (bottom) pose with Alex Joseph, who claims them all as wives. The children are also Joseph's. The family, except for wife Carmen who was in Salt Lake City aiding Joseph's legal battle, got together to celebrate a victory in their fight with the federal government. A federal court prevented U.S. marshals from evicting Joseph and his followers from Hacienda, a community they have established on federal land. Several followers were evicted earlier in the week from more-remote "homesteads" nearby. The family poses on the porch of their restaurant. (AP Photo)

Truckers Ask Review Board To Intervene in Assessments

TORONTO (CP) — An official of the Ontario Trucking Association said today it has asked the federal anti-inflation review board to intervene in a 41.5-percent increase in assessment rates to be imposed by the Board starting Jan. 1.

M. W. Donnelly, chairman of the association's board, said in a news release the increased payments mean the industry will have to pay $25.4 million to the board next year, compared with $16 million this year.

"There's just no way that our industry can absorb this additional $9.4 million, especially with other operating costs increasing to the breaking point," the chairman of the 1,800-member association said.

Mr. Donnelly said a reduction in the number of trucking accidents requiring compensation during the first 10 months of this year makes it difficult to justify the increase in the rate. "We believe that there has to be intensive scrutiny of Ontario's entire system of employee accident compensation costs," he said.

Rebel Priest Refuses To Leave Rectory

MONTREAL (CP) — Father Yves Normandin, dismissed Nov. 5 as pastor of a north-end church, refused Monday to leave the church's rectory to attend a scheduled meeting with Montreal Archbishop Paul Gregoire.

Father Barry Jones, spokesman for the archdiocese of Montreal, said the case now is at an impasse, and added the next step will have to come from the new pastor, Father Marcel Bircher, and wardens of the Ste. Yvette parish.

Father Bicher, accompanied by wardens, locksmiths and police, tried unsuccessfully Friday to force the priest out of the church's rectory where he has been barricaded since Thursday.

Father Normandin, dismissed from his post for refusing to abide by a Vatican decree for changes in the mass ritual, including discontinuation of Latin, has said he will remain locked in the church until he is forcibly evicted or "until I die."

Group Claims Crowe Has Conflict of Interest

OTTAWA (CP) — Chairman Marshall Crowe of the National Energy Board already has made some decisions on the merits of a northern natural gas pipeline, a public interest group argued before the Federal Court Monday.

The Committee for Justice and Liberty Foundation said the Canada Development Corp., with Mr. Crowe as its president, put $1.2 million into a study group which later became Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd. W. I. C. Binnie, appearing on behalf of the Foundation, said the court must assume Mr. Crowe considered all aspects of the project, deciding on its feasibility, before he committed funds from the crown corporation.

The foundation along with Canadian Arctic Resources Committee and Consumers Association of Canada are challenging Mr. Crowe's right to head an energy board panel now considering competing applications for a northern pipeline.

They say he may have a bias in the case because of his former membership on the Arctic Gas board of directors and his possible participation in government pipeline planning as a cabinet official.

Mr. Crowe was a member of the consortium board from 1972 to 1973, representing the CDC, of which he was president and later chairman. He stepped down from both the CDC and Arctic Gas boards when he was appointed to the energy board in the fall of 1973.

Meanwhile, just as the court case got under way Monday morning, a lawyer for Arctic Gas said the CDC withdrew from active partnership in the consortium effective Oct. 31. It no longer takes part in decisions and has no vote on the board of directors.

Pop Can Hobby Turns Into Furniture Business

By ISABEL HUGGAN

When she made her first tiny chair out of a soft drink can last February, it was an a start to a hobby. She was only looking for a diversion — but somewhere along the line it became a business.

For now, 200 chairs and 150 tables later, Mrs. Bunnett is turning out three pieces a day, and most work regular hours in order to keep up with the demand for her miniature furniture.

"It took me six hours to make that first chair," she recalls, "but I work a lot faster than that now!"

"I just used a pair of pliers to begin with," Mrs. Bunnett says. "It was hard to twist the metal exactly the same every time. Finally, I found the hobby shop carrying such tools especially for this. They've made it much easier."

The ornate designs, composed of curves and are created out of thin strips of metal cut out of the sides of a can, and which are also attached to the bottom that serves as the chair seat or table top. Mrs. Bunnett uses mainly soft drink cans, but friends beer and turpentine cans for settees and love seats, and oil cans for Barbie-doll-sized chairs.

She works in front of the fireplace in her kitchen, at a small workbench made for the task by her husband Larry. Although she works quickly, she is still very careful of her gloveless fingers as she cuts and twists. "I've only cut my thumb once on a can, and that was enough," she says.

After the body of the chair or stool is made, it is spray-painted gold or black, and a stuffed velvet seat pad is attached. The furniture is then suitable for use as a pin cushion, although many are bought simply as ornaments or for furnishing a doll house.

Her mother and mother-in-law have both sold pieces for Mrs. Bunnett, and she has some for sale at the Latta General Store near her home. Most of her orders, however, are as a result of her work being seen in homes and offices. She takes orders through friends, and upholsters in whatever shade of velvet is required.

Unique pop can furniture, three or four inches high, elegant velvet and gilt.

Nancy Bunnett starts work on a soft drink can.

Mr. and Mrs. Kirk Francis Genereux

Genereux — Farrell

The Church of St. Michael the Archangel was the scene of the November wedding of Mary Ellen Farrell and Kirk Francis Genereux.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Joseph M. Farrell and the late Joseph Farrell; the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Genereux.

Father Ken Stitt officiated at the ceremony, where Lois Farrell and Duane Freeman, sister-in-law and brother-in-law of the bride, were soloists.

Given in marriage by her brother, Richard Farrell, the bride wore a qiana gown with sheer organza insert trimmed with seed pearls in a scroll design. The gown has a high mandarin neckline and long sleeves. The A-line skirt features a chapel length train. Her full length veil was trimmed with seed pearls and lace and she carried a cascade of red roses and baby's breath.

Donna Freeman, the bride's sister, was the matron of honor in a royal blue velvet gown with puffed sleeves and a weetheart neckline. She carried two white mums.

Attendants were Jeanne Genereux, the groom's sister, and Debbie Dafoe, in rose velvet gowns and carried two mums.

TOMMY

When you first meet 12-year-old Tommy, you are impressed with his eyes, the most striking feature of an attractive face. You are also impressed with his quiet, serious manner. Tommy is shy and reserved, not ready to accept strangers as immediate friends. With people he knows he is pleasant, cooperative and helpful.

Though Tommy is a registered Indian, he may have some black ancestry. He has light brown, very curly hair, hazel eyes and medium complexion.

Tommy is healthy and active, happiest when he is outdoors. He loves camping, hiking, anything to do with water and woods. He has recently developed interest in sports but is not involved in any teams himself because they are not available in the area of his foster home.

Tommy is an average student in Grade five. He likes school, is fond of reading and writes poetry. He enjoys music, especially Country and Western.

Good at working with his hands, Tommy likes woodworking. He has made bows and arrows and carved figures. He is interested in farm machinery and how it works.

Tommy will require time to feel he belongs in a new family but he wants to try. His will be a fine son for a mother and father who can help him believe he is really wanted and loved.

To inquire about adopting Tommy, please write to Today's Child, Ministry of Community and Social Services, Box 888, Station K, Toronto M4P 3H1. In your letter tell something about your present family and your way of life.

Nutrition Advice for Mothers

Marcia O'Linsky, speaking to Mothers' Group.

If you think you're the only one who has problems preparing dinner for your preschooler, you're not alone.

The subject was under discussion Friday when the Mothers' Group met for their weekly session at the Corby Public Library. Guest speaker was Marcia O'Linsky, public health nurse for Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit, who told the mothers that proper nutrition for preschoolers can be difficult.

"Nutrition can be a problem," said Mrs. O'Linsky. "A well-nourished child has a better chance to grow, learn, feel and look good," she said.

Mrs. O'Linsky suggested mothers balance their children's diets by giving them a lot of nourishing foods they like, to make up for those foods that they won't eat.

Mrs. O'Linsky also suggested that children help prepare the food in the kitchen. Gimmicks such as making food designs on the plate and serving food in unusual ways can also be used, she said.

Examples of teaching children good nutrition were demonstrated in a film called Jessy Is A Good Thing-from Project Head Start in the United States. The project has been operating for a few years in schools for children in poor communities.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "Itching Piles." It is most embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and especially aggravating at night.

If you want satisfactory relief—here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective case of healing. Its germ-killing properties also help prevent infection.

In one hemorrhoid case after another "very striking improvement" was reported. This improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions.

All this was accomplished by a healing ointment (Bio-Dyne)—developed by a world-renowned research institution. The substance is now available in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Available at all drug counters. Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Ann Landers

Education Prevents Sexual Exploitation

Dear Ann Landers: I have struggled with this letter for several days, trying to put it into language you can print. This is the best I can do. The subject: Relatives and the Sexual Exploitation of Children.

I am 20 now and have vivid memories of three such experiences. The first was an uncle. I was only six years old at the time. He followed me into the bathroom when were alone in the house and took sexual liberties with me. I was warned not to say anything to anyone or something "bad" would happen to me. I didn't realize what he was doing and was just plain terrified. I never told a soul.

The second encounter was with my own father when I was 11 years of age. I would rather not go into the details of that soul-searing experience. I never told anyone about it because I was afraid it might destroy my mother.

The third was a friend of my parents. I was 14. He was drunk, had passed out in my house during a party and came to my bedroom at dawn. It's hard to believe I was so naive. I never told a soul what happened. I realize now I COULD HAVE become pregnant.

I will be 23 years of age next week and just lost a boyfriend I really cared about. Our romance lasted only three months because I'm afraid to let a man get close to me.

How can these hideous experiences be avoided? The answer: education. Parents should talk freely to their children about the sanctity and privacy of their bodies. Children should be instructed at an early age (four isn't too soon) not to allow anyone—friend, neighbor, or relative to take liberties with their bodies. Moreover, children should be told that if anyone tries to get intimate to report it to a parent at once.

I know now that I was severely damaged by those early sexual experiences. I know, too, that every day some innocent child is being exploited in every state in the union. Please, Ann, print this letter and help open the eyes of both parents and children. It's a wonderful opportunity to educate millions. Thank you. — A Victim

Dear Friend: You are the one who should be thanked. I hope every parent and child who reads this column will pay close attention.

You didn't ask for any personal advice but I feel compelled to offer it. If you haven't considered therapy to help resolve the problems created by YOUR early traumatic experiences, I hope you will do so immediately.

Dear Ann Landers: A close friend has taken up oil painting as a hobby. She claims it has done her more good than three years with a shrink. Last week she surprised us with a boudoir gift—a beautifully framed monstrosity for our living room.

The canvas is enormous and the painting looks like either a barn that has caught fire or some industrial accident — depending on your imagination. My husband says we must hang it for a while at least. I can't bear the thought, yet I'd hate to hurt her feelings. She's a dear person. Please advise. — Torn

Dear Torn: Sounds like a great conversation piece. Hang it for a while—then rotate your art (many people do this) and move the picture to a closet shelf.

Police PR Program 'Cops and Kids' Improves Images

HALIFAX (CP) — A two-year-old program named Cops and Kids is successfully giving the Halifax Police Department a more kindly image.

The sole memberers of the police department's community relations section, Inspector Noel Westall and Constable Bob Cook, started the program when a schoolteacher and three education students suggested they spend two hours with Grade 5 students at the West-mount School two nights a week. This year it is being expanded to take in three more schools.

The students travel throughout the city with Inspector Westall and Constable Cook in an unmarked police car and listen to the police radio.

Cruising through the city, they stop to watch policemen investigating automobile accidents and doing other police work.

Children are encouraged to ask questions and the two policemen explain police procedures.

At the end of the two hours the two policemen go into the children's homes and visit their parents.

Since the program began all Grade 5 students at Westmount School have had a chance to participate. Of the 35 who participated, only two said they felt police were "meaner" than before their experience.

Twenty-three indicated they would have liked to spend more time in the car, 31 felt a policeman's work was hard and 34 indicated they would like to do it again.

Inspector Westall said the program's success has a great value in preventing crime.

Children rarely see a policeman in other than an aggravated, tense atmosphere which leads them to think of policemen as "bad people" who harass them or their parents, he said.

Parent participation is important because the children relate easily to the parents. In the first year, it took children half the night to start relating to the policemen because they had to get over their initial fear of them. But with parent involvement the children seemed more secure.

WI Changes Priorities

OTTAWA (CP) — The Federated Women's Institute of Canada has decided to change its priorities, its president said in an interview Friday.

Mrs. Ellen McLean said the 27-member national board, after a two-day meeting here that wound up Friday, has a list of topics to bring back to provincial branches for discussion.

Land use, the use and misuse of resources and credit, strengthening of the family unit, the role of women in public life and human rights should be stressed by the organization next year, she said.

She said the 55,000-member institute has a lot of political clout. Although its membership is primarily rural, it's "started the ball rolling" for many community self-help projects across the country, she added.

"We're well-respected in municipal and provincial government circles because we do our homework when we approach a problem and the solutions we propose are very practical."

Mrs. McLean said the institute has specialized in nutrition education during the past year and plans to continue this program.

"We hope to reach more low income people," she said. "What's the good of a welfare cheque if you don't know how to spend it properly?"

Mrs. McLean said a woman-to-woman approach in small communities probably is the best way the institute can spread its nutrition education.

"Up to now we've been preaching to the converted," she said. "It's time to go out and reach the people who need the information."

Lunches Paid

MONTREAL (CP) — The Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal has decided to pay lunch-time supervision costs for students this year rather than have parents assume the expense. The board decided by a 8-to-4 vote that the costs which totalled $283,856 last year, were the responsibility of the schools not the parents.

Abortion Laws Still Unfair, Discriminate Against Poor

TORONTO (CP)—Three doctors said Thursday that lower-income women have just as much difficulty ending unwanted pregnancies as they did before the Criminal Code was amended five years ago to permit abortion on medical grounds.

Toronto physicians May Cohen and Linda Rapson and Hamilton psychiatrist Wendell Watters, members of the steering committee for Doctors for Repeal of the Abortion Law, have compiled a report titled "A Survey of Hospital Abortion Committees in Canada.

A number of Toronto physicians charge well over the OHIP rate . . . and those who can afford to pay get abortions," said Dr. Cohen.

Lewis Criticizes Undue Delays in Compensation

TORONTO (CP) — Stephen Lewis, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party, said Monday that the province's Workmen's Compensation Board (WCB) is taking undue lengths of time to process claims by widows of asbestos workers who have died of cancer.

Speaking during a meeting of a committee of the legislature studying WCB spending estimates, Mr. Lewis said he has documented evidence of three cases in which widows have been waiting since early this year for the board to issue decisions on their claims.

He said the Ontario government had been aware for many years of dangers facing asbestos workers and "I just don't understand how the government could be so negligent and so wrong in dealing with health hazards."

WCB chairman Michael Starr told Mr. Lewis that he regretted the time it took to process claims.

Mr. Lewis said there has been lack of communication between WCB and physicians expert in environmental health. He cited what he called a silicosis problem at Canada Porcelain Co. Ltd. of Hamilton, where "cases are starting to assert themselves in profusion."

Labor Minister Bette Stephenson, whose ministry is responsible for the WCB, said she could see no reason for any breakdown of communication between the board and doctors.

John Sweeney (L—Kitchener-Wilmot) said claimants often wait more than three months before they hear from the board. Part of the delay is often caused by a doctor who fails to fill out reports properly, he added.

Dr. Stephenson agreed. "They just don't seem to understand the urgency," she said.

Earlier Monday, Mr. Lewis asked Health Minister Frank Miller in the legislature whether he was aware that three recent tests at the Canada Porcelain plant showed silica counts in excess of the allowable amounts.

Mr. Miller replied that he recalled only one test done a year ago and said he would look into the situation.

Dr. Charles Stewart, WCB consultant on chest diseases, told the committee that 17 claims are pending from coke-oven workers at the Hamilton plant of the Steel Co. of Canada Ltd.

The WCB is awaiting doctors' reports in some of the cases—seven of which involve cancer—and job classification in others. There are also three cases pending from Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd. in Sudbury, Dr. Stewart said.

Mr. Lewis said in an interview that the WCB should agree there has been ample evidence to support claims of lung disease caused by asbestos dust at the Canadian Johns-Manville Ltd. plant in Toronto.

He said the board granted benefits to a woman who wheeled a coffee cart through the plant for only two years when she was a teen-ager.

Dr. Stewart had told the committee that the woman's disease was diagnosed as mesothelioma, a serious ailment caused by asbestos dust.

Some Soft Drinks Removed From Shelves Due to Lead

MONTREAL (CP) — Several brands of canned soft drinks marketed in Quebec and Ontario by Seven-Up Ltd. are being removed from grocery stores shelves as a precautionary measure after tests revealed the drinks may contain an unacceptable level of lead, it was announced Monday.

The recall affects all cans of Welch's Grape Soda, Schweppes, Seven-Up and Diet Seven-up, a company spokesman said.

Canned varieties of the affected products are marketed throughout Ontario and Quebec with the exception of the Ottawa area, which is unaffected. An exception are Schweppes mixes which are also sold in the Maritime provinces and Manitoba.

The action follows preliminary tests which indicate some of the drinks may contain a higher than permissible level of lead, apparently resulting from the solder used in the manufacture of the cans, the spokesman said.

"There is no danger of a person becoming immediately ill from drinking the canned products," he said.

"However, even the suspicion of a problem of this nature is enough to concern us and we want to see the worst foot too."

However, police will call witnesses to testify on police training when the commission begins hearing public submissions on Jan. 12, he said.

The commission was set up by the province in 1974 to investigate allegations of brutality by Metro police. Its job is to decide whether mistreatment is a tendency or practice and to investigate whether the use of force is necessary.

The terms of the inquiry allow Mr. Justice Morand to recommend changes in police recruiting and training.

The 17 cases heard so far by the commission invariably came down to a question of credibility, he said. In every case, there were "two groups of people telling directly opposite stories and we had to decide who was telling the truth."

Police officers often were asked whether brutality was common in the force. On some occasions an officer would say he had heard stories but had never seen examples, Mr. Justice Morand said.

He said company plants have ceased using the cans, manufactured by Crown Cork and Seal Co. Ltd., which has altered production of its cans to employ a solder eliminating the lead problem.

Plants of Seven-Up Montreal and Seven-Up (Ontario) Ltd. halted all production of canned brands after being informed of the hazard by the federal department of health and welfare.

Consumers who still have cans of these drinks can return them to the store where they were bought.

Police Commission Will Interview Toronto Cadets for Information

TORONTO (CP) — A royal commission investigating the practices of Metropolitan Toronto police will privately interview training officers in an effort to get more information on what goes on in police schools, says the head of the commission.

Mr. Justice Donald Morand of the Ontario Supreme Court said in a recent interview that hiring and training practices of the force will be important factors when the commission makes its recommendations to the provincial cabinet in April.

Mr. Justice Morand said commission hearings may not be the right place for the public to find out how officers are trained, adding that the public will get information more quickly if he acts as an intermediary.

"I may find out things they are not prepared to show you," he said. "People tend to put their best foot forward in public

Spending Restraint in 1976 Will Further Depress Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — Restraint in capital expenditures is expected to lead the Quebec economy into a lacklustre 1976, following an even more depressed 1975.

Most forecasts suggest a five-per-cent growth rate for Quebec and Canada in 1976, although the Quebec government has predicted the province could slightly surpass the national average.

This growth anticipated for 1976 follows a standard 1975 which witnessed the Quebec and Canadian economies barely breaking even as they tried to shed the shackles of a recession and inflation rates unparalleled in peacetime.

Although the shackles will bind the economy more tightly in 1976, cautious fiscal policies by government and business will result in few major construction projects—the traditional mark of a booming economy.

Guy Saint-Pierre, industry and commerce minister, said the high cost of the James Bay hydroelectric power project will permit the provincial government to become involved in only two other major projects.

These two projects are a $600-million iron-ore development at Fire Lake in northern Quebec and a $400-million aluminum smelter near Quebec City.

Restraint is also expected to be the key philosophy of the private business sector.

Robert Baguley, senior economist with the Royal Bank of Canada, said that capital outlays for non-residential construction and for new machinery and equipment will increase by only three per cent in 1976.

Although the economy will be healthier in 1976 than in 1975, Mr. Baguley said corporations will avoid major expenditures of staff increases in their efforts to boost productivity, which now L lagging in comparison with the United States.

Construction activity, however, in 1976 is expected to reach the 1975 level as major projects started in previous years continue. Such projects include the $13-billion James Bay development, the $1-billion 1976 Olympic Games and various commercial high-rise projects in Montreal.

The value of Quebec construction projects reached $6 billion in 1975, compared with $5.3 billion in 1974, reported the Construction Association of Montreal and the Province of Quebec.

Economic predictions for 1976 have been muddied by the federal government's price and wage guidelines announced on Thanksgiving Day.

Although ceilings of eight to 10 per cent on wage increases were demanded, many pundits are unsure whether these rules will be enforced.

Had the government not invoked these measures, the 17-per-cent average wage increases which characterized 1975 were expected to recur.

The average wage increases for 1976 will largely be determined by any exceptions the federal government permits.

Thirteen Montreal economists predicted in a survey that despite the controls, prices will increase more than nine per cent in 1976, one per cent above the government goal.

They also expected unemployment will remain at the relatively high rate of about 7.5 per cent.

One of the more heated debates concerning Quebec's economic future involves controversial language legislation which promotes the use of French in the business environment.

The government has said companies which do not adopt French as the language of work will not receive government contracts.

Major opponents of the legislation, as it affects business, appear to be corporation based outside of Quebec. However, these are not the companies the province is most actively wooing.

Unlike some other provinces, Quebec ardently courts American and other foreign companies, promising them a happy marriage as long as they respect the cultural milieu of Quebec. Such respect implies use of French as the language of work.

For the American firms planning investment in a foreign country, it makes little difference whether the language of work is English, French or Spanish, many corporation executives have said.

Quebec-based companies seem less wary of the legislation than other Canadian companies. The Quebec-based companies have either learned how to live with growing Quebec nationalism or have adopted policies allowing them to skirt language issues.

Another major monkey-wrench in Quebec's economic future is the financial status of the province's largest city, Montreal. The city is burdened by debts, which will multiply with the $650-million deficit expected from the Olympics.

Although Mayor Jean Drapeau's metropolis enjoys built-in safeguards against the kind of money crisis afflicting New York City, the opposition municipal party says a "dangerous pattern" of financing has evolved just the same.

A prospectus for a recent Montreal debenture issue indicates revenues and expenditures for 1976 will be $644,271,700 compared with $446,820 in 1971. The 1976 debt service, excluding local improvement debentures, was put at $102,071,900, compared with $64,436,437 in 1971.

The city's current per-capita debt—believed to be the highest in Canada—is $743 compared with $625 in 1971.

Dr. Victor Goldbloom, Quebec municipal affairs minister said the government is "concerned with the financial status" of Montreal.

He said "there's always a possibility" the provincial government will impose a form of control on the city similar to the government's recent takeover of building and financing of the main Olympic facilities.

Labor Co-op Aids Community

ANTIGONISH, N.S. (CP) — A group of students at St. Francis Xavier University here is earning money and helping the community at the same time through a labor co-operative.

The co-op provides inexpensive student labor for odd jobs in business establishments or around the home. From babysitting to snow shovelling, and from typing to window washing, the students p almost any work for minimal wages.

Commercial establishments are charged the provincial minimum wage. The rate to home owners is negotiable, ranging from $1.50 to $2 an hour.

The project, headed by two adult education students, will continue until examination time and then will resume in early January if demand is sufficient.

Mail Strike Delayed Parking Tickets

HALIFAX (CP) — The national postal strike is causing Halifax police trouble in collecting payments on parking tickets but the ticket holders will pay or it in the end.

Sgt John Conn said the ticket department had about $100,000 worth of parking tickets outstanding which is about $52,000 more than usual.

Parking fines were recently raised in the city to $15 for most non-meter offences from $5.

Sgt. Conn said a drop box has been set up and tickets can be paid during regular office hours but people seem to be avoiding both methods of paying.

When we save energy we fight inflation.

One solution to two problems.

Inflation is a priority problem. The Federal Government has introduced new legislation and appealed for individual restraint.

Many of us overlook one important fact: energy conservation fights both dilemmas. Here's how the two problems come together in one solution.

(Reading time: 8 minutes)

On October 13, the Prime Minister spoke to the Canadian people. He said, in part, "We have come to expect that there is some magic by which we can have cheap and plentiful food, energy, housing and government services, together with an ever-improving standard of living.

"I am asking you to live by the fact that all Canadians must restrain their rising demands upon the nation's wealth, so that Canada as a whole will be able to live within her means. That is the only anti-inflation weapon which offers hope of permanent success."

All of us in the community—individuals, companies and governments—are grappling with inflation. We tend to think of energy as a separate problem. It's not.

This year the average Canadian family will spend about $1,000 directly on energy. Money for gasoline, heating fuel and electricity. And prices will undoubtedly go higher because new supplies are high cost.

But you're not helpless. Energy conservation will cut consumption and save you money—or at least help to offset rising prices. You'll have a little more cash to cope with other forms of inflation.

For example, setting the thermostat back 2C° (4F°) will save you $30 to $40 this winter. Better furnace servicing, while it costs a little, can cut as much as $100 from your fuel bill each year.

- Insulation, weather-stripping and storm doors and windows involve an initial investment but can save 10% to 50% on your annual heating bill. That's probably between $30 and $200 a year.
- Buying a compact car instead of a gas guzzler can save you $500 a year on gasoline. You'll probably also save on the lower purchase price, plus lower costs of maintenance, repairs and insurance.
- Frequent tune-ups, slower highway driving, car pools and public transit all help.
- Other measures: turning out lights, cooking efficiently, saving hot water, buying returnable bottles and avoiding throw-away products. They all save energy and money.

Energy conservation cuts business costs.

One of the reasons for the higher prices of most manufactured products and many services is the spiralling cost of energy. Think of all the times in the past year you've heard: "We've had to raise our prices to cover the higher energy costs."

For business, energy conservation is an excellent cost-cutting tool. It works to hold down the costs of such basic commodities as cement, steel and paper; such consumer goods as food, furniture and cars; services ranging from taxi fares to health care.

How much can business save?

Many companies have cut 5% to 15% from their energy bills simply by good housekeeping. New equipment and process changes, which require an initial investment, can save a good deal more—50% in some cases.

And of course all these savings should be passed along to the consumer.

That's fighting inflation!

Conservation cuts future capital costs.

If we continue to gobble up energy at our present rate of increase we'll need many more pipelines, tar sands plants, electrical generating stations, powerlines, uranium and coal mines, gas and oil wells. The projected capital cost of these projects is at least $110 billion between now and 1985. That's an investment of about $20,000 for each Canadian family.

Present energy prices are rising to help pay for that investment and future prices will be even higher in order to carry and pay back the tremendous debts incurred.

This investment requires a doubling of the proportion of our national wealth which is allocated to energy development—from 3% of Gross National Product to almost 6%.

The key question is, where will the money come from? In a tight capital market it will have to come from money otherwise destined to finance schools, hospitals, business expansion and social programs. They may have to wait.

And what effect will such massive capital demands have on interest rates, foreign ownership, the value of the Canadian dollar and the balance of payments? The answers are worrisome.

How much of this projected capital investment can be eliminated by conservation? If we can lower the annual growth rate in energy consumption from 5.5% to 3.0%, then we can reduce our capital investment by 1/3. That's $7,000 per family. That's fighting inflation!

Where can the savings come from? Some examples: If we cut our annual growth rate of energy consumption by only 1/10 of 1% per year the energy saving in 1990 will be more than the total output of a tar sands plant at a current cost of $2 billion or five nuclear power stations at a current cost of about $5 billion. How could we do it? Simply by turning down all residential and commercial thermostats just 2½C° (5F°).

If we improve car mileage from the current 17.5 mpg average to 28 mpg in 1985, we'll save the equivalent output of two tar sands plants at a cost of at least $4 billion.

Yes, some conservation measures do call for an initial investment, but a modest one when compared with the energy saving. For example, a national program to reinsulate only the most inefficient houses would cost about $300 million —but the saving would amount to 10 million barrels of oil every year. That's ¼ of the output of a tar sands plant.

Conservation cuts the costs of imported oil.

Right now, the Atlantic provinces and Quebec use expensive oil imported from the OPEC nations. It costs about $12.50 a barrel and is subsidized by the Federal Government to bring the price down to the $8 per barrel paid by the rest of Canada for western oil.

That $4.50 per barrel is paid for by the tax on oil exported to the United States and by the 10¢ per gallon excise tax on gasoline used for non-business purposes.

But as our production of western oil declines in the years ahead, our exports will be cut back. We'll lose the revenue and tax on exported oil. We'll begin to build up a tremendous national debt—what the economists call "a balance of payments deficit"—for imported oil.

If the growth of demand continues unabated, by 1985 this deficit could be a staggering $5.5 billion per year in today's currency—that's $212 per person. That money is shipped out of the country. It doesn't work for our economy. It doesn't provide jobs or incomes for Canadians.

By saving oil (and electricity) in the Eastern provinces, we can reduce our need for imported oil. By saving oil in Ontario and the West, we can divert some of our western oil to Quebec (via the new Montreal pipeline) and further cut our need for imported oil.

Conservation cuts "energy costs."

Our growing energy appetite is forcing us to develop more remote and more "complex" sources of energy. Examples: the tar sands, nuclear power, distant hydroelectric sites, Arctic oil and gas.

Of course to find, extract, transport and process these sources of energy takes energy. In fact, we are expending more and more energy to make a unit of useful energy available.

With rising costs for energy inputs, we're spending more and more money for less and less energy.

The proportion of our national energy budget which is consumed by the energy industries has already doubled—from about 6% in 1957 to almost 12% in 1971.

By cutting demand we can lower future energy costs.

We can all help.

In a sense we're fortunate. One solution can help solve our dual problems of inflation and energy. All of us—individuals, companies and governments—can play a major part and reap both immediate and future rewards.

Conservation can stretch our energy reserves, cut costs, reduce inflation, improve our environment and our way of life far into the future.

That's a powerful weapon.

If you're not part of the solution, you're part of the problem.

Officials Say Intersection Doesn't Need Lights

A parish priest has registered the latest warning on the need for increased traffic controls at an east suburban Belleville intersection.

City council's traffic committee Monday read a letter from Mgr. J.A. Carley, of St. Joseph's parish, indicating his belief that more precautions are needed to safeguard youngsters at Herchimer and Victoria avenues.

"How many of these children do we have to lose to prove that something must be done to protect them from this dangerous situation?" Mgr. Carley, "I sincerely hope, for the sake of those responsible, that it will not be a matter of too little, too late."

The intersection has been a source of frequent complaints to city councillors who have mentioned it at various committee meetings.

It crops up in committee at least four times a year, commented Ald. George Zegouras, who said he supported Mgr. Carley's remarks.

"Do we have to wait for someone to get hurt?" queried Ald. Zegouras. He also said ran area residents claimed it is "almost impossible" to cross Herchimer in rush hour.

But the committee was told that a study by city engineer Joseph Angelo again had shown the intersection does not meet provincial government - traffic conditions to justify traffic lights.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie also noted there is a school guard stationed at the crossing. Installation of traffic signals would mean removal of the guard. In such an event the intersection could even be less safe for children.

Mayor Ben Corke said there be easy solution to the situation but "somewhere along the line" committee members have to "hang our hats" on the traffic formula needed before lights are warranted.

The committee took no action as it voted to receive Mgr. Carley's letter.

Fair Exchange

Seven-year-old Jimmy Ferry decided Monday that sitting in the driver's seat of a fire engine was a fair exchange for a toy donation. Jimmy is one of 35 boys of the 17th Beaver Colony of Eastminster Church who were given a tour of Fire Station No. 1 for their donations to the firefighters' Christmas toy drive.

Sidney St. Sidewalk Issue Again Returned to Council

A resolution calling for a sidewalk along Sidney St. as a safety measure for school children is being returned to city council by its traffic committee.

The committee a month ago recommended council consider the sidewalk in its 1976 budget.

The walk was part of a safety plan in the area round Our Lady of Fatima separate school. It would extend from the recently-installed lights at Graham St., across the intersection of Wilson Ave., then along the north side of Wilson towards Elgin St.

City council returned the recommendation to the committee after Ald. Joe Cox suggested the Wilson intersection — with heavy truck traffic turning into nearby industry — might be a dangerous crossing for children. He suggested the sidewalk go up the south side of Wilson, allowing youngsters to cross further away from the intersection.

But, Ald. Paul Russell told the committee, drivers had a better view of pedestrians at the intersection, and traffic slows rounding the corner. Children should also be taught how to cross at every intersection in the city, he said.

Information Centre Gets Federal Aid

The federal ministry of consumer and corporate affairs is giving the Quinte Information and Assistance Centre $15,000 to enable the consumer help group to operate in 1976.

In a telegram addressed to centre board chairman Vera Heimbuch, Monday, Minister Andre Ouellet commended the centre's "consumer services saying after reviewing its program, he decided to extend the funding.

The grant is the second from the ministry, following close on the heels of a $12,000 grant received in April this year.

It is also the sixth federal government grant the centre has received, both under its present name and that of the Citizens Bureau, since 1972, when it began its operation in Belleville.

Mrs. Heimbach termed the grant "a vote of confidence in what we're doing."

"I'm pleased at the amount. It certainly makes it easier to operate and work up a budget."

She said the size of grant will allow for a "smoother" centre operation. This year, when $12,000 was received, "it left us in a deficit position."

The chairman said that the previous grant was intended to last until March, 1976, but recent budget reviews prompted the board of directors to conclude money was available only till the end of this month.

The minister's telegram didn't come as a surprise, the chairman said. Since the application was filed in August, correspondence and contact with Ottawa indicated the funding request would be received "favorably."

She said she did not know when the group will get the funds promised in the telegram, saying that once it comes, it will mean "we can keep right on rolling."

The telegram indicated that either Mr. Ouellet himself or some other ministry official mlly be in Belleville to open the centre officially under the new funding.

Overtime Offered To Posties

Belleville postmaster Roy Wainwright said today he will follow the postmaster-general's orders to give regular postal workers as much overtime as common sense permits.

It will mean, says the postmaster, a corresponding decrease in hiring of casual workers—normally taken on briefly during heavy mail movement.

"We'll have to cut them down," said Mr. Wainwright, who had earlier predicted hiring about 150 casual workers to handle mail prior to Christmas.

Although the postmaster-general did not put a limit to the overtime by regular workers, Mr. Wainwright said "I'm sure we can be aware of the overtime problem and break over the brow of the hill before we are confronted by the backup.

The committee agreed that a sign with flashing lights should be posted outside the overpass near King George Public School.

Sign to Warn Motorists Of Change in Lanes

Motorists heading for Belleville's downtown will now be alerted to traffic problems on North Front St.

The problem area is immediately south of the Canadian National Railways underpass where North Front's four lanes narrow to two lanes. The approaches for driver heading downtown should be posted with a cautionary sign, city council's traffic committee decided Monday.

The trouble is that people driving south to the city's centre may not be aware of the problem until they break over the brow of the hill and are confronted by the backup.

The committee agreed that a sign with flashing lights should be posted outside of the overpass near King George Public School.

Report a Surprise

Educators Told Space Needed

Increasing enrolment in Hastings County elementary schools has created a shortage of classroom space, a report of the board of education indicated Monday.

Board trustees expressed shocked at the report from Eric Ferguson, education director, which recommended the use of a variety of public buildings within the county to absorb the surplus students.

Unlike the provincial average of declining elementary enrolments, Hastings County is on an upward enrolment trend due to annual growth in the Bayside and Stirling towns west of Belleville, the report says.

Most trustees were astonished at this trend and asked the administration council to provide more statistics and information to back up the director's recommendation of finding more space.

Mr. Ferguson's report, presented to the board Monday night for quick action, prompted officials to call a special meeting later this month. The board had planned on cancelling the next meeting in December due to Christmas.

The director himself was not present at the meeting. A board official said he was in Toronto attending a conference for a education film sponsored by Ontario Educational Communications Authority.

However, speaking on behalf of the report, deputy director J.F. Reid told trustees that capital funding for new construction, renovations and new programs appeared to be extremely low this year for below the expectations of the board.

In the past six years spending ceilings have drastically reduced new construction.

In his report, the educators urged the board to make an immediate study of all available accommodations in the county. The board accepted this point but flatly rejected his following suggestions.

The report urged the board to immediately re-activate the Avondale school building to develop an arts centre for a group of elementary schools in west Belleville. The cost would be $48,500.

Trustee Ed Paquet, who said he found the report disturbing and completely unacceptable, said the board should not approve this kind of expenditure until it knows definitely what its financial outlook is for the next year.

Mr. Paquet warned that if trends continue the board may be forced to make staff cuts next year as well as reducing educational programs. He said the province may be handing down the toughest budget boards of education have ever seen.

The report also recommended that several closed schools be re-opened to act as satellite facilities for newer schools. The old Foxboro school was also on the agenda to re-open and make use of these facilities.

Mr. Runacres even went as far as telling trustees that the board may have to rent some homes, churches, warehouses, apartments, shops and other schools to accommodate the projected enrolment.

Chairman of the board Jean Hutchinson, who said the situation is "frightening" asked the administration council to prepare a detailed account of their recommendations for the next meeting.

New Dispatch System May End Staff Hunt

Dale Denyes, the board's manager of staff services, recommended to the board a trial central clearing system be implemented. They could to solve the long-standing supply teacher problem that has given many headaches to elementary school principals.

Mr. Denyes explained that for several years principals have spent undue time in the morning hunting for supply teachers, some of whom would not accept assignments at certain schools. They argue time was lost each day through confusion and as many as 19 phone calls to obtain one supply teacher.

Mr. Denyes recommended that the board hire a part-time secretary at a cost of $4,000 a year to administer the central dispatch system.

Casting doubt on the program Stirling trustee Don William said the $4,000 was an unnecessary expense. He suggested that a secretary at the Ann St. Education Centre could be available for four hours to operate the system.

He then said that if the system works the board should take a second look at the operation and evaluate whether a part-time secretary should be hired.

Mr. Denyes agreed to the board adding schools in the Trenton, Centre Hastings and North Hastings areas would remain on the old systems. Each area apparently has a qualified and reliable pool of supply teachers.

The dispatcher would receive requests from principals at a designated time in the morning and then from a rotating list of names would try to reach a supply teacher.

Tuning In

Eastern Ontario String Quartet violinist Marion Stratton tunes her violin prior to a one and a half hour mini-concert by three quartet members at Glanmore House, Hastings County's museum, Monday. The concert is one in a series of musical and theatrical events planned at the museum this week as part of Christmas festivities.

Committee Limits Parking

One side of Singleton Dr. — a street used by Unemployment Insurance Commission workers to park their cars — should be banned to parking, city council's traffic committee decided Monday.

The east side of the street — where new homes now are occupied — should be declared a no-parking area, the committee agreed with Police Chief Douglas Crosbie.

Monday, few cars were seen on that side of Singleton. The chief later said UIC employees now mainly park on the west side of the street anyway. But, his recommendation was to make the pattern official.

Logo Contest Winners

Ken Graham, an art teacher at Sir James Whitney School, took first place and Kent Munro, a Grade 7 student at Sir Mackenzie Bowell elementary school, took second in the city's centennial committee logo contest. About 75 logos were submitted for consideration. Contest winning logos will not necessarily be those used in centennial promotion.

Making It Official

Cars of Unemployment Insurance Commission workers line west side of Singleton Drive Monday. Few park on opposite side of the suburban street, said police. But to make it official the city's traffic committee approved a police suggestion that parking be banned on the east side.

Union Leader Says Workers Confused Over Government Policy

BY CLIFF KENYON
Staff Reporter

"Trade unions will oppose federal wage and price controls and some labor leaders are going to end up in jail, a union representative said in Belleville Monday.

"They are not convinced anti government has said nothing to convince trade unions that prices are going to be controlled the same as wages," said Edward Seymour, education and publicity director for Textile Workers' Union of America.

Mr. Seymour, however told members of Belleville Rotary Club he believes the trade movement will "assist in a positive manner" when they are convinced all sections of the economy will be under the same controls.

Workers, said Mr. Seymour, have seen their purchasing power decrease during the past two years and feel they have been betrayed by government and management.

"The group of people responsible for administering the guidelines...just before they were announced...got a 23 per cent increase," he said.

Mr. Seymour, who works out of the union's Toronto office, said the guidelines could be more easily accepted by trade unions if they knew what the government is doing and felt the government knew what it is doing.

"We are in difficult times — the trade union movement doesn't know what's happening," he said.

"Already the government has gone against its own guidelines," said Mr. Seymour, referring to the government decision that wage increase controls apply to striking Metro Toronto teachers even though their last contract was signed prior to 1974.

"How can we convince our membership to restrain demands when they can read of price increases every day", he said referring to proposed rate increases by Bell Canada and Ontario Hydro.

"The field of collective bargaining is going to be one of more turmoil than in the past," said Mr. Seymour, as union leader.

In essence, he said, unions now are trying to get contract agreements so their wages can catch up with losses during the past three years.

He termed federal government attitude to the recent postal strike as the "most anti-labor campaign" conducted by any Canadian federal or provincial government.

"It seems to me, despite all government efforts, union leadership did have support of members."

Almost half of Canadian Union of Postal Workers opposed acceptance of the contract, said Mr. Seymour. "I don't know what kind of situation is going to exist in the post office."

Jim's Juveniles Down Bowmanville

BOWMANVILLE (Special) — Allan Portt and John Merrill shared the Belleville Jim's Pizzeria Juveniles' goaltending here Saturday night as the visitors rolled to a 7-4 exhibition win over Bowmanville.

Merrill was brought up to the team after Mark Meehan broke a finger on his catching hand in an off-ice practice session last Thursday, explained coach Keith Kaine.

"Merrill and Portt gave us solid goaltending," said Kaine.

Jim's took an early two-goal lead in the first period but Bowmanville battled back to get on even terms. Belleville had a 3-2 lead heading for the second period and broke it wide open with the only three goals of the middle frame. Bowmanville side held a 2-1 edge in the final 20 minutes.

BCI and Moira Split Victories

Belleville Collegiate Institute and Moira Secondary School traded victories in Bay of Quinte Basketball Association midget and junior A Division action Monday night.

Don Wilson and Mike Wright popped 11 apiece in leading the Collegians midget team to a 41-19 win. John Dall had six and John Henry four for the Trojans.

Moira juniors saved face when they cagaged in a defensive battle and BCI came out on top 35-33. Bruce McKay scored ten for the winners with 15 and teammate Colin McKay got 18. John Cox had seven for BCI and Don Smith and Jeff Cass added six each.

Taking Aim On Turkeys

In keeping with the holiday season, plenty of prizes were presented with Ken Wormald skipping his rink to the top of the field in the two-day event.

Second place went to a rink skipped by Jim Mutell. Curling with Mutell were Ed Mutell and John and Jackie Hughes.

12-year-old Player Dead

He was stricken early in the first period of an exhibition game with Kingston Young Nationals.

Dr. Clifford Meyer, coroner, said as far as he could tell, there was no "unnatural physical contact" in the game.

The death was still under investigation, Monday.

McNevin Award To Becker

On Sunday afternoon at the Memorial Arena the Tommy McNevin Memorial Award was presented. The trophy is unique, in that the player winning it must also show proficiency in music and academic studies.

The award was presented by Gerry O'Connor to Clinton Becker, a goaltender last year for the Maher Shoes Atom Minor Hockey team.

"This award is very special since the youngster has to excell in three categories — academics, music and sports to win it" stated Cliff Belch of the Recreation Centre.

Presenting the trophy were O'Connor and Peter McIlevin.

Bob's Sports Winner But Can't Widen Lead

Bob's Sports extended its unbeaten streak to six games with a 5-0 win over Bel-Con Engineering Monday night, but it did nothing to improve the team's breathing room at the top of the Gas House Hockey League heap. While Bob's was running its streak, so were the Yardmen.The BYBF crew dumped Bi-Temp Airconditioning 7-2. In the third GHHL contest Monday, Constellation doubled up on Murray's Food Market 8-4.

The victory gave Bob's eight wins and a tie for the first half of the Gas House season. Their 17 points however is just one more than the Yardmen and while both have completed 10 games, they have to look out for Chuckwagon Foods who stands in third place with a game in hand.

The Yardmen's win was their fifth straight. Ron Richardson led the way with three goals and Dan Lupenette got two. Rob Brown, Pat Mullins and Doug Thompson scored once apiece.

Bi - Temp found themselves shortstaffed and alternate goalie Steve Campbell was forced to take the role of an attacker. Despite playing between the pipes all season, Campbell scored once and drew an assist on Steve Dexter's marker.

Ron Mitchell was a one man bombardment leading Constellation to their victory. The highflying forward pumped in five goals and collected two assists. Singles went to Dave Murray, Eric Tupnette and Gord Vesterfelt. George Johnson was credited with three helpers.

Islanders' Rookie Setting Hot Pace

MONTREAL (CP) — Bryan Los Angeles Kings.

Trottier, the sensational rookie centre with New York Islanders, is the hottest rookie point-scorer in the National Hockey League since at least 1945-46, the beginning of the NHL's so-called modern era.

Trottier picked up a goal and six assists in four games last week, giving him 11 goals and 26 assists for 37 points in 28 games. He now shares fifth place with Marcel Dionne of the

He is half way to equalling team-mate Jude Drouin's rookie assist record of 52 while he was with Minnesota North Stars.

Hartland Monahan of Washington Capitals is the second best rookie scorer with eight goals and 16 assists for 24 points, followed by Dennis Maruk of California Golden Seals, who has nine goals and 13 assists for 21 points. Four of Maruk's goals have come with the Seals shorthanded.

Guy Lafleur of Montreal Canadiens holds the over-all points lead with 46 on 18 goals and 28 assists. Peter Mahovlich of the Canadiens is next with 37 goals and 27 assists for 44 points while Bobby Clarke of Philadelphia Flyers follows with 15 goals and 36 assists for 41 points.

Montreal's Ken Dryden has the best personal goals-against average with a 1.85 mark for 1,200 minutes played. Dryden also tops the NHL with four shutouts and he and Michel Larocque have combined to give Montreal the league's best team goals-against average—2.17.

Ironically, Dionne held the NHL's record for most points by a rookie—77—set in 1971-72 when he broke in with Detroit Red Wings. Trottier is far ahead of Dionne's pace of that season when the centre had five goals and 13 assists after 28 games.

If Trottier were to maintain his current point-scoring pace for the remainder of the season, he could end up with 105 points.

BOTTING CALLED UP

ATLANTA (AP) — Veteran centre Bobby Leiter of Atlanta Flames of the National Hockey League was placed on the inactive list Monday and right-winger Cam Botting was called up from the Flames' central Hockey League farm team in Tulsa. In 34 games at Tulsa, Botting, 21-year-old native of Kingston, Ont., has had 11 goals and nine assists. He has scored three goals in a game twice this season to lead the CHL in that category. A spokesman for the Atlanta Hockey League Flames said there would be an announcement later this week on the future of Leiter, 34, of St. Boniface, Man.

Teams Favor Merger

TORONTO (CP) — Several teams in the National Hockey League are pressing again for merger between their league and the World Hockey Association, the executive director of the NHL Players' Association (NHLPA) said Monday.

Alan Eagleson said such a merger could not take place without the consent of his association.

"Although many clubs have contacted me in this regard I am unable to discuss the topic due to the nature of the five-year agreement," he said.

The agreement between the league and players states that in the event of a merger, the players will be entitled to terminate the agreement with respect to certain provisions in the standard player contract.

In the event of a merger, the players would ask that compensation and option clauses be removed from the standard player contract.

N.H.L. president Clarence Campbell said in Montreal he couldn't foresee a merger taking place in light of his league's agreement with the players.

Sources say the NHL teams pressing for a merger are Philadelphia Flyers, St. Louis Blues, Pittsburgh Penguins and New York Rangers.

Mariners' Star On the Move

Lacroix, who won the league scoring championship last season as well as a sin 1973-74, has collected 23 points in his last 16 games and stands 11th in the over-all scoring race with 32 points.

Lacroix holds the record for most points in the WHA with 282. At the start of the 1973-74 season, the San Diego centre had 122 goals and 266 assists.

He achieved that total with four different teams—the now-defunct Philadelphia, New York and New Jersey franchises, and San Diego.

Statistics released by the league Monday show Marc Tardif of Quebec Nordiques in the lead for this year's scoring championship with 44 points on 23 goals and 21 assists.

Team-mate Chris Bordeleau follows with 43 points and Bobby Hull and Ulf Nilsson of Winnipeg jets are tied for third with 42 points.

Joe Daley of Winnipeg Jets continues to lead the league's goaltenders, posting a 2.16 goals-against average and four shutouts. Gerry Abrahamson of New England Whalers follows with a 2.37 mark, although he has failed to register a shutout and has won only six of 15 games he has appeared in.

$1,000 Fine

Howe Suspended For Two Games

On Friday night, the president of Houston Aeros was not upset with referee Ron Asselstine he justled and elbowed his way into the first suspension of a 29-year playing career.

By Monday evening, he was calling Asselstine "the best ref. right now in either league" and saying he holds no animosity toward him.

Earlier in the day, chief executive officer Ben Hatskin and Bud Poile, vice-president in charge of hockey operations, set Howe's suspension at two games and added an $250 fine to the automatic $150 that went with the game misconduct latter before he ejected.

Both Howe and Grahame were handed indefinite suspensions by the league Saturday and missed that game with Phoenix Roadrunners. Hatskin's ruling means Howe will miss tonight's game with Cincinnati Stingers before returning to action.

Asselstine was given time off to decide on his future. On Friday night, he said after the game he was would quit because of his run-in with Howe.

"I still think he can handle a game," said Howe of Asselstine in a telephone interview from Houston. "I hear he had one of those nightmares in Phoenix the night before and I think the thing was weighing on him.

"These poor guys are worked too hard anyway. I think they should be rested too, just like some overworked hockey players."

After the game, Asselstine said: "I'm finished. When the man who's supposed to be the craftiest who has ever played the game drives one in the pots, it's obvious I'm not the man for the job."

Poile said he considers Asselstine a good official but that he acted unwisely by leaving the ice after the Howe incident.

"I can't condone his leaving the ice, but you have to consider there was a lot of pressure," he said. "I guess they threw everything except the roats at him. To his credit, he came back and finished the game without any problem."

Howe, 47, went after Asselstine when he was handed a high-sticking penalty in the second period. He first argued the penalty, then bumped Asselstine into the boards.

"I tried to draw his attention to the telescreen which showed the Winnipeg guy holding my stick," he said. "When he refused to look at it, that's when I elbowed him in the ribs."

The $1,000 fine isn't likely to come out of Howe's pocket.

"Actually, as president, I'm in a good position," he said. "I can give myself a bonus to make up for the fine."

How said he has no intention of fining himself for drawing a two-game suspension from the World Hockey Association. Earlier in the day, there were reports Howe would fine himself his pay, $2,250 a game, for the games he will miss for abusing the referee.

Defence Sharp As Oakland Tames Broncos

OAKLAND (AP) — Oakland Raiders defence rose to the occasion by hacking down Denver quarterbacks John Hufnagel and Steve Ramsey all night.

"Ten sacks!" said rookie Oakland safety Charles Phillips, who intercepted three passes as the Raiders 17-10 win over the Broncos. "That's what makes my job easy—when the line is putting pressure on the quarterbacks.

Otis Sistrunk, from his defensive tackle position, led the charge on the Denver passers. He took part in five of the sacks which took some heat off the Oakland offence and helped the playoff-bound Raiders win their seventh successive National Football League game.

"Our defence always rises to the occasion," Phillips added. "But our offence is so potent that it was just a matter of time until we scored."

The time seemed interminable to Oakland fans, who did some booing during the 28-minute wait.

The normally explosive offence run by quarterback Ken Stabler seemed to be working with a silencer. Denver was ahead 3-0 on Jim Turner's 18-yard field goal which followed an Oakland fumble in the first quarter.

"They took almost everything away from us," admitted Stabler, who completed just two of his first nine passes and suffered two interceptions. Oakland's offensive efforts had accounted for only 30 yards by late in the second quarter.

But Horace Jones then sacked Hufnagel, making his first NFL start, at the Denver 31-yard line and the Raiders drove 44 yards after taking a short punt.

Alberta's Ron Hayter Says CFAB in Trouble

EDMONTON (CP) — An Alberta Baseball Association official said Saturday the Canadian Federation of Amateur Baseball (CFAB) is threatened with extinction if provincial defections result from the federation's lack of aggressive national programs.

Ron Hayter said the CFAB is "shirking its responsibilities by not aggressively promoting national championships in all age classes."

Hayter was commenting on a statement made last week by Bill Donovan of Saint John, N.B., CFA vice-president, that Hayter was dreaming if he thought Canada could afford age-class tournaments.

"Donovan says my proposal for national age-class competitions is impossible. That's a touch of hogwash," Hayter said in a statement.

Donovan said individual towns cannot afford trips to national competitions, nor can about half the provinces. It costs $6,000 to send a team from St. John's Nfld., to British Columbia, he said.

Hayter agreed costs can be high, but the benefits of the experience are worth the price and "the CFA should be striving to find ways of easing the financial burden on teams competing in national championships rather than curtailing or abandoning this vital segment of national programming in amateur baseball."

Last Pass for Dawson?

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Len Dawson's long, distinguished career may have ended in the shadow of his own goalposts, in pain and frustration.

If so, it would seem an unlucky way for the American Football League's all-time leading passer to go out.

The 40-year-old Dawson has maintained that this, his 19th season as a professional quarterback, may be his last. But he insists he still has not made a decision and will not do so for several weeks.

In any event, he will play no more this year. Mid-wayin the fourth quarter of Sunday's game between San Diego Chargers and Kansas City Chiefs, Dawson fell beneath a Charger pass rush and broke his right thumb.

The Chiefs went on to lose to lowly San Diego, 28-20, dropping their record to 5-7. It was San Diego's first win of the season.

An obviously disappointed Dawson said later: "It sure wasn't a very glamorous finish if this is the way I went out."

From 1962—Dawson's rookie year at Pittsburgh—through his last play Sunday? he passed for 29,711 yards and 229 touchdowns.

Those figures represent American Conference records. On the all-time National Football League quarterback list, Dawson ranks fourth behind Johnny Unitas, Fran Tarkenton and Sonny Jurgensen.

Dawson languished for five seasons at Pittsburgh and two at Cleveland before switching leagues in 1963 when Hank Stram brought him to the struggling Dallas Texans in the American Football League.

Dawson promply led them to the AFL championship over Houston Oilers in pro football's second largest game.

The next year, owner Lamar Hunt moved the Texans to Kansas City and they became the Chiefs.

Cards Make Room for Hector Cruz

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals have turned third base over to hard-hitting minor leaguer Hector Cruz by trading Ken Reitz to San Francisco Giants for left-handed pitcher Pete Falcone.

"He (Cruz) has been the best ballplayer in the minor leagues the past two years," Cardinal manager Red Schoendienst said Monday in announcing the trade at baseball's winter meetings.

"The Giants have needed a third baseman for a number of years and Reitz is a good ballplayer," Schoendienst added.

Cruz, who teamed with his brothers, Tommy and Jose, in the St. Louis outfield when called up late in the 1973 season, was named the Most Valuable Player in the American Association last season.

The trade is subject to approval by the National League because of the impending sale of the Giants.

Reitz, 24, gives the Giants the league's Gold Glove winner of 1975. He hit .289 with five home runs and 63 runs batted in last season after a .255 rookie year in 1973 and a .271 campaign in 1974.

Falcone, 22, who was 12-11 with an earned-run average of 4.17 as a rookie in 1975, joins right-handers Lynn McGlothen, Bob Forsch, John Denny and Harry Rasmussen as starting candidates along with southpaw John Curtis.

A draft session earlier Monday found only five clubs willing to part with $22,000 to grab minor league talent.

Detroit Tigers, drafting first, took 22-year-old right-handed pitcher Bruce Taylor from the Cincinnati Reds' Indianapolis farm club of the American Association.

Meanwhile, organized baseball's official rules committee made the designated hitter rule an official playing rule Monday, optional for use by all major and minor leagues.

The action does not affect a pending American League proposal to use the designated hitter in World Series, all-star and exhibition games at all parks.

DH Rule Optional

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Organized baseball's official rules committee decided Monday that the designated hitter rule would be optional in all leagues—both major and minor.

The action put the DH rule into the official playing rules for the first time. The American League has used the DH rule for the last two seasons on an experimental basis and plans to continue using it.

The action does not affect the AL proposal that the DH be used in the World Series, all-star games and exhibitions at the American League park. That proposal will be voted on later this week.

We didn't invent the idea of not changing models completely every year. All we did was invent the Honda Civic.
Which proved so sound an idea that thousands of Honda Civics now catch your eye on Canadian roads. In fact, it's Canada's fastest growing import car.
For 1976, we've made a handful of changes to further improve what is already a beautifully efficient machine.
Never fear. Honda Civic will still give you top mileage per increasingly expensive gallon of gas. Honda Civic will still be the lowest priced Japanese import.
And Honda Civic still comes complete with state-of-the-art performance features. Such as rack and pinion steering, MacPherson strut suspension independent on all four wheels, disc brakes up front, and front wheel drive.
The few changes for 1976 are mostly interior. Your nearby Honda Civic dealer will be happy to review them with you in detail.
As long as you're there, take a test drive. And find out how good it feels to drive a Honda Civic instead of looking at one.

Stingers Get Back on Track

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Stingers have skated in and out of danger for most of their short existence in the World Hockey Association.

The Stingers got off to a 9-1 start in their first season, then, as coach Terry Slater describes it, "all of a sudden we got bombed."

"Injuries have been the big thing," said Slater. The tailspin coincided with the loss of veteran goalie Sergo Aubry, who suffered a groin pull.

"When Aubry got hurt, we had to rely on the kids," said Slater.

"It's the goaltending," said Slater, praising rookie John Kiely, a product of the University of Vermont. "Everyone is back playing his position because they know they can trust the goaltending now. They're not all trying to play goal."

After suffering through eight successive defeats, the Stingers won their second in a row Sunday night, and it amazingly found themselves on top in the WHA's East Division.

"We were fortunate that the other teams in the division were struggling too," said Slater, who is undergoing anything but an easy year with the Stingers a first-year team.

The front office, in the midst of the losing streak decided a shakeup was in order. Norm LaPointe, a 20-year-old rookie goalie, was returned to the minor leagues, Gary Veneruzzo was traded to Phoenix for Ron Serafini and Kiely and Rich Coutu, another young goalie, were brought up.

"We could go with older pros, but we're building for the future here," Slater said. "The big thing is if we can keep three times together we'll be alright."

Unhappy In Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Howard Darwin says he and Earl Montagano, owners of the Ottawa 67s, will sell the franchise or move the team if attendance doesn't get better.

"You just wouldn't be a businessman if you didn't move the team or sell it if things don't improve a lot," Darwin said Sunday night after an OHA Major Junior A hockey game which the London Knights won 3-1.

Only 1,984 spectators showed up for the game at the 9,355-seat Civic Centre and the owners could only give away 135 free tickets and hockey packs slated for the first 1,000 children who came accompanied by an adult.

Darwin said tickets to Wednesday night's game against the Moscow Selects are selling slowly—1,500 so far.

To add injury to incult, Mike Hodgins, who broke his nose again, and Tim Higgins, who aggravated a nagging hamstring, will be off the rink with Jim Roberts and Warren Holmes Wednesday night. Before Sunday's game, Roberts suffered a groin injury and Holmes, an injured knee.

Lancers Hang On For Win

LINDSAY, Ont. (CP) — Lindsay Lancers scored four goals in the first period and held on to defeat Cambridge Hornets 4-3 Monday in the only Ontario Hockey Association Senior A game.

Lindsay held a 4-2 margin after the first period and took a 4-3 lead into a scoreless third period.

Lindsay goaltender Bruce Jackson turn aside 36 shots, compared with 35 for Cambridge's Gary Gray. Lindsay receive eight of the 14 penalties.

Play resumes Thursday with Napanee at Whitby.

After midnight, December 31, New Car Buyers in Ontario will have to spend hundreds of dollars more for most models.

Under existing legislation Ontario new car buyers must complete their deal prior to January 1, 1976, to be eligible for the provincial government 5% Sales Tax rebate on most new models. At that time as well, the currently reduced provincial sales tax will revert to 7%.

AS OF JANUARY 1, 1976 NEW CAR BUYERS WILL BE OUT OF POCKET ANOTHER 7%

As they say, "All good things must come to an end", and the countdown has already started all across Ontario to end the Provincial Government's 5% sales tax Rebate on most new cars. As well, the current 5% sales tax is due to revert to 7%. The deadline is midnight, December 31.

After that, new cars are going to cost Ontario consumers everywhere a lot more, hundreds of dollars more.

There's still time for you to move up to a new model at a real saving. Now is the time for wise buyers to take action. Whether you're thinking domestic or import, full-size right through to subcompact, don't delay your buying decision, visit these reputable district dealers this week and compare. Every model in town is competitively priced. Special deferred terms can be arranged and remember, your trade-in is probably worth much more than you think! Make this test drive week . . . do it now!

STANFIELD, Marjorie (Carol) — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother who passed away December 9, 1973.
Sweet memories are precious, dear to my heart,
We have so many memories, of me are one to part.
Her memory is our keepsake,
With which we will part
We think of her quietly and fondly
We long for her to hear.
—Lovingly remembered by the family.

Dr.

MASON — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, James McAvoy, who passed away December 9, 1974.
Not looked around His garden,
Not looked on another day,
Not looked down upon this earth,
And are sorrowing today.
We put His arms around you,
Dear Father, and say,
We miss your kind advice and guidance,
For life only takes the best.
If broke our hearts to lose you,
But you did not go alone,
For part of us went with you,
The day we laid you down.
An Angel Band by other hands
Was given to wife Gertrude and son Lee.

MARACLE — In loving memory of a dear father, Maracle who passed away December 9, 1971.
Our family circle has broken,
A link gone from our chain,
But God's mercy has taken
A white knight of great worth.
Some day we hope to meet you,
Some day we shall see,
We shall meet in a better land,
Where God's angels
Gently remembered by daughter Bernice.

Bridge Stronger Than First Thought

TRENTON — A ministry of transport and communications test of the Dundas Street Bridge has shown that the structure is basically more sound than a previous report filed by a municipal consultant indicates, council was informed, Monday.

Council was informed the current situation limit could be raised to 15-tons and then lifted entirely if stop-gap repairs recommended in the earlier study are completed.

Arie Hoornweg, commissioner of public works, told the group the repairs would cost about $75,000 and could conceivably be completed by spring.

"It is not a major job to complete the repairs," said the commissioner. "If the repairs are made the bridge can last for at least an 100 years." Mr. Hoornweg told the council urban questioned if a new bridge is not being considered.

"The ministry will not pay for a new bridge, which will cost millions, when they can pay the same 75 per cent share and just rebuild the present structure," said the Hoornweg.

Another Artist Withdraws Work

Lindsey Hallam said today she withdrew her work-three water color paintings and two etchings-paintings, one worth $1,200 — because the work was not on display in either the Upper or Lower Library.

"I took my stuff out of the show because I have some personal dignity," she said.

She added the paintings were found in the closet of the show that was organized by Dave Brockelsby.

Oddities in the News

Shark Bites Boat

SYDNEY, Australia, (Reuter)—A couple returned from a weekendfishing trip with what they said was a record-breaking shark catch and a tale of an attack on their 25-foot boat by another shark.

Pam Hudspeth told reporters she and Jack Farrell were fishing off Sydney's northern beaches during the weekend when a 14-foot white pointer shark stuck its head over the stern.

"We were terrified," she said. "It tried to take a bunk out of the back of the boat, like in the film Jaws."

She said that when Farrell tried to push it away with a pole, the enraged shark put its snout under the stern and tried to toss the boat into the air.

Later, Farrell landed the shark with a rod, but it snapped the line and swam off, she said.

The pair later landed a Mako shark weighing 775 pounds, which they said bettered the old world record of 600 pounds.

BOISE, Idaho (AP)—New York City is about $300 richer. That's how much Shirley Greer Clark collected in a garage sale to help the city deal with its financial woes.

"The main impact has been on public opinion to the point they realize New York is our neighbor and they want to help," she said after the sale.

Loyalist College Board Loses Two Key Directors

Loyalist College Board of Governors will lose two of its most experienced members Dec. 31 in the persons of Wilf Wilkinson of Trenton and Reg Loader of Belleville who have served the past 7½ years.

Both Mr. Wilkinson, a Trenton appointee and Mr. Loader, a provincial government appointee, are retiring after serving during what they term were the "pioneer years" of Loyalist.

MR. Wilkinson is completing his second year as board chairman. Previously he served as chairman of the board's finance committee for five years and during two of those years, he doubled as board vice-chairman.

During an interview following this week's board meeting — his last regular session as member Mr. Wilkinson said his major efforts were to help place the college on a sound administrative footing both financially and in terms of operation.

"I had the opportunity of being part of the board's task force which visited other colleges in 1969 to see how they were run," he related.

Mr. Wilkinson said he realized personal satisfaction at the end of each college year when signing diplomas "and knowing somebody is being fitted from the time that is being put in. That's what it's really all about."

He said one of his biggest thrills was "presiding over the first convocation in our own college building in 1974."

Mr. Loader said his biggest thrill was being elected chairman of the board's management committee for five years — an ironic feat in view of his extensive involvement in the labor movement in the Quinte area.

Recognized as being largely instrumental in developing the college's manpower retraining division, he said he was keenly interested in the Loyalist extension program and was chairman of a committee which named the college buildings.

"Although I feel I'm leaving something, I feel we are moving into a new phase at the college," he commented. "It's about time for new faces."

The departure of the two veterans leaves Rev. H.J. Maloney of Bancroft as the only active board member from the college's formative years.

Father Maloney, who also served on the former joint Sir Sanford Fleming — Loyalist board years ago before Loyalist became a separate entity, told the board Thursday he will likely retire at the end of 1976.

Deaf Can Still Contribute To Hearing World: Educator

Deafness is an educational handicap that can be overcome, says Bill Williams, assistant superintendent of Belleville's Sir James Whitney School.

Mr. Williams made the comment in the context that deaf people are not necessarily intellectually dull and are often become valuable assets to the community in the labor force.

He made the comments Monday while speaking at a meeting of the Bay of Quinte chapter of the Society of Industrial Accountants.

Underlining his point, he told the meeting about a three deaf students who last year attended a special teaching seminar which eventually led to one student become a full time teacher at the Belleville school.

Following the meeting he remarked the one successful student had, several years before, been a graduate of Sir James Whitney.

This year he said three more deaf people are in the special teaching program and all three have teaching positions waiting for them at schools for the deaf in Milton and London.

While non of the people have Ontario teaching certificates, they all have an intrinsic knowledge of deafness," he said.

Their knowledge of deafness — having gone through the system themselves — affects the need for an Ontario teaching certificate," said Mr. Williams.

All of the teachers have completed a five-year arts course in Washington's Gallaudet College, the oldest post secondary school for the deaf of its kind in the world, he said.

"These people teaching is a new horizon — a new barrier that's been overcome," he said. "Having completed their education — they have to be very able," said Mr. Williams commenting on their qualification as teachers.

In capsule version, Mr. Williams gave association members and their wives a slide show tour of the school which employs 381 staff members in the care and teaching of 378 students.

The student to teacher ratio is five to one, which Mr. Williams says is "near perfect."

Sir James Whitney teaches children and young people ranging in ages from five to 20 in language, arts and vocational courses.

Detour Details Released

Detours around a major city traffic link are expected to be in effect next week.

Through traffic will be directed off East Dundas St. — onto Bridge St. when work begins on the first phase of the Dundas reconstruction scheme.

Local traffic will not be affected, city engineer Joe Angelo told city council's traffic committee Monday.

Westbound through traffic will turn off at Herchimer, travel Bridge St. and return to Dundas by Coleman St. Eastbound through traffic will follow Pinnacle to Bridge and back onto Dundas by MacDonald Ave.

Dylan Plays For Convicts

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Bob Dylan sang "He could have been champion of the world" and Muhammad Ali seemed to agree.

But the subject of the song, Rubin (Hurricane) Carter, was not at Madison Square Garden Monday night to hear his praises sung.

Instead, Rubin (Hurricane) Carter heard it all the previous night in prison, where he is serving a life term for a triple murder nine years ago that he says he did not commit.

Dylan and the other assorted superstars of The Rolling Thunder Review sang for Carter and the 800 other prisoners in the jail Sunday.

Tremors Can Be Family Pattern

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband has had a tremor in his right hand for many years, caused, he believes, by working long hours under pressure. Recently it seems to be appearing in his left hand, too.

He is 75 years of age, in excellent health, and never had a serious or even near-serious illness.

We would appreciate any suggestions you might make.—Mrs. C.H.S.

There are several possible causes of tremor, so I cannot comment in any detail on your husband's symptoms specifically, only offer a few suggestions.

Some tremor appears to run in families. Diseases affecting the central nervous system can cause involuntary tremor. In elderly persons, an overactive thyroid gland or faulty circulation in the brain due to arteriosclerosis can be involved.

The fact that your husband's tremor was one-sided at first, then appeared in the other hand, strongly suggests the possibility of Parkinson's disease. This is often the pattern of development in that problem. It onset can be insidious, progressing slowly and gradually over the years.

Your husband should be checked for this despite his appearance of general good health. Your personal physician or a neurologist should be able to diagnose the condition rather easily. Early treatment of Parkinsonism with the newer drugs can do much to arrest the disorder.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I began having soreness and swelling around my ankles a year ago. They have become bone around the ankles and are breaking off. A creamy discharge follows after the sores heal and redness.

I wash them in warm salt water, which usually helps for the soreness. But the condition returns in a day or two. The creamy discharge is what bothers me. Can you comment?—Mrs. M.N.

The creamy discharge is the most distinctive symptom you mention. This suggests an infection that would be caused by the staphylococcus germ. Sometimes a use per cent solution of iodine painted around the cut-lets will heal the sores. In extreme cases removal of the nail is necessary if the infection lies deep in the bed.

You should reply see a dermatologist. Something more sophisticated than your salt bath is obviously needed.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What happens to matter caught in the pouches in the intestines as in diverticulosis? I'm thinking of a bit of broken tooth swallowed. Also, I'm thinking of small seeds. These relieve my anxiety.—Mrs. D. S.W.

The fragment of tooth undoubtedly add right path for diverticulum and is long gone. The bits of food and seed carries off such bits of material. In the rare event of something be coming trapped, there would be irritation leading to diverticulitis inflammation). This would cause pain.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I take quinine capsules nightly for leg cramps. Could this cause a loss of hair? My hair seems to be thinning rapidly to the point I think I am nearly bald.—Mrs. D.R.

I have never heard of quinine causing this, and I doubt it would.

Older women can lose hair rapidly for no reason other than the loss of follicle viability. A hormone deficiency (thyroid or other) can be involved. I suggest you be checked for this. Any problem should be evaluated with appropriate supplements.

Bounsall Attacks New Labor Bill

TORONTO (CP) — Employees would not be forced into a bargain in good faith under a private-members bill to amend the Labor Relations Act, Ted Bounsall (NDP—Windsor - Sandwich) said Monday.

Mr. Bounsall was commenting in the legislature during debate of the bill introduced by Ray Haggerty (L—Erie). The would allow the labor minister to order a 60-day, cooling-off period where a strike or lockout would result in dangers the provincial health, safety or welfare.

If no collective agreement was reached during the cooling-off period, then employees would be allowed to continue the strike.

Mr. Bounsall said such legislation would allow companies to sit back and wait for the minister to order workers back to work.

Opening lead—Q ♠

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

The forcing two bid with the best two notrump response was invented by Theodore Lightner. Waldemar von Zedtwitz and Oswald Jacoby fixed it in 1929. Here is a hand that led us to that discovery.

Jacoby, who sat South, opened one spade. He hoped that he would get a second chance and he did when the unfortunate East player reopened with two clubs. Young Jacoby simply jumped to seven hearts.

The bid was spectacular and quite unsound, but it succeeded because North held four hearts and two spades. North actually held the heart queen, but all he needed was four hearts.

Experts used it for about 20 years and then started to get away from it because of two weaknesses. The first was that you used four bids to cover the two hands that warranted an opening force. The second, that the negative two notrump response tended to make the wrong hand declarer at notrump.

In the next article we will show how the experts have found ways to handle forcing opening bids in better manner.

Ask the Jacobys

A Nebraska reader wants to know if many experts use a one club opening as a forcing bid.

The answer to this question is a very small number indeed. Probably about 50 of the top thousand life masters, if you want to use that as your criterion.

Ottawa Will Accept Province's Terms

OTTAWA (CP) — Faced with reluctance by provinces to compromise themselves on a full length of the federal anti-inflation program, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said on Monday that Ottawa is prepared to accept provincial participation for an 18-month term.

Replying to Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield in the Commons, Mr. Macdonald said he would prefer the provinces sign up for the full three-year length of the program, but a shorter course was better than none at all.

The provinces would be asked to sign formal agreements to have the federal wage guidelines apply to provincial public servants for a shorter period such as two years, or "in the expectation" their participation would be reviewed and extended at the end of that time, he said.

All provinces have expressed support for the program but have withheld formal agreements until they see the regulations setting out the details.

Premiers Robert Bourassa of Ontario and Alberta, said at a federal-provincial finance ministers meeting last month that provinces "do not want to initially commit themselves for more than one year."

The selective wage and price controls were imposed Oct. 14 and are to run 24 months to Oct. 31, 1978.

The Conservatives tried unsuccessfully to limit the length of the program to 18 months. The government did amend the bill to provide for review in parliamentary review of the program after that period.

MacBeth Will Amend Store Hour Laws

TORONTO (CP) — Solicitor-General John MacBeth indicated Monday he is willing to amend the government's proposed Sunday retail legislation to exempt more small businesses and certain religious groups.

The amendments proposed before the select committee studying the bill, Mr. MacBeth suggested that anyone who opens considering Saturday a holy day may be exempt from the bill if they close Saturday.

His amendment would exempt small operations under 2,000 square feet in extent and employing three or fewer persons if they close closed at 6 p.m. Friday.

The Jewish sabbath traditionally begins at sundown Friday. Other proposed amendments would exempt stores selling pets and bandicrafts.

As drafted, exemptions were provided for service stations, antique shops, nursery stores and flower shops and fresh fruit stands in the summer months only.

The minister's amendments would allow exempted stores to sell related goods. For instance, a pet shop would be allowed to sell aqar kipbeg, while a fruit and vegetable stand could sell and carry-out sandwiches.

The amendments also would allow restaurants, real estate offices, insurance agents and beer-and-car-rental agencies to remain open on Sunday.

MacBeth suggested a possible change to allow drug stores to open Sunday if they are no more than two square metres in the store for each pharmacist who is working. He said this would ensure that the store would be open primarily to dispense drugs.

David Warner (NDP—Scarborough-Ellesmere) said the bill should be used to put pressure on the owners of milk stores which "drive the little guys out of business." He said such stores should be forced to close on Sunday unless they provide better working conditions for their store managers.

Stanley Singer (L—Riverview) said such changes should be made through legislation governing working hours and minimum wages.

Backroom Masterminds Set Election Moods

VANCOUVER (CP) — With the British Columbia election only two days away, the face-to-face battle between the parties are masterminding the final thrust of a whirlwind campaign.

Backroom strategists are responsible for the inflexible projection of the Social Credit campaign, the organized disorder of the New Democratic Party's bid for re-election and the budget-conscious, best-of-the-pasts approach by Liberals and Progressive Conservatives.

At a final meeting Sunday night fire up the workers—about 250 shovels—the furnace was turned all. When they decided to warm up with a cup of tea, the fuses blew.

The party workers laugh about it. With only one seat in the Legislature—Dr. Wallace's—the Progressive Conservatives can not drop much lower and provincial campaign manager Dennis Lam's figures show that five of the 29 Conservative candidates have a good fighting chance.

Mr. Lam said in an interview Monday that his party cannot afford to do much on its shoestring campaign budget of $50,000 and "about all we can offer our candidates is moral support and research help."

Hotels are an extravagance, even for the party leader, so Mr. Lam vacates his apartment and sleeps on his parents' couch whenever Mr. Wallace hits Vancouver.

Social Credit strategists run a tight campaign, which does not allow leader Bill Bennett to stray from his strict schedule.

Ottawa Won't Change Pornography Laws

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor General Warren Allmand said Monday that the government hasn't considered changing laws dealing with pornography.

The question was raised by James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) who referred to a recommendation of an Ottawa coroner's jury last week calling for a ban on pornographic material in Ontario.

Mr. Allmand said the RCMP is responsible for policing the transportation of pornography into the country from outside, but it was the provinces who police the pornographic trade within Canada, he added.

The minister said he would consider Mr. McGrath's suggestion that laws dealing with pornography be included in Criminal Code amendments now to be introduced in the Commons.

Bobby Orr's HOCKEY TIPS

The Wrist Shot is the Most Important Shot

Everyone likes shooting the puck. It's a common sight for youngsters to get on the ice and forget about some of the other basics for shooting the puck.

Often, youngsters will neglect working on some of the more essential shots in favor of the slap shot. This is wrong because if you aren't spending time on your wrist shot you're not developing the most important shot in hockey.

From my position (defence), I generally use more slap shots than wrist shots. However, I know that whenever I move in close to the opposing net and need a more accurate shot, I use the wrist shot.

With younger children, we find that with any kind of shot they seldom hold the stick properly. The trouble is they hold the stick too loosely in their hands. This is the first key — not only for the wrist shot but all shots — hold the stick firmly.

The wrist shot involves a sweeping motion where the puck is brought from behind. Your wrists are cocked and as you bring the puck forward you release your wrists.

Most vital in any shot is your weight. As the puck is brought forward, the weight is also brought forward. When you shoot, all your weight goes into the shot . . . all your weight is on that front foot. That's where your power will come from and in order to obtain it, you must put your weight into the shot. Richard Martin of Buffalo Sabres has got a great wrist shot. Hang and he's let it go. Because Martin's wrist shots are accurate and extremely hard, he most definitely is a player to watch.

Although Phil Esposito's shots don't seem too hard, believe me, he's got a very heavy wrist shot. His shot is like being hit with a brick or stone. On top of that, Esposito's shot is very accurate. There are many others with excellent wrist shots but Martin and Esposito are two of the best.

The only way for your wrist shot to improve is to work on it industriously first and foremost each day.

Northern Electric Goalies

Strong goaltending highlighted the Northern Electric Hockey League action on Sunday as the Rebels and Yankees each earned hard fought wins over the opposition.

The Rebels supported by the strong goaltending of Rick Hutchinson skated to a 5-3 win over the Falcons in the first game of the day. Bob Buston was the main threat behind the win, firing three goals and assisting on two others. Kevin Allen rounded out the scoring with his pair of goals and an assist. Doug Rathbing in net for the Falcons did his share in holding down the score for the losers.

Randy Hutchison, Paul McLellan and Ron McFarlane each potted a single tally for the Falcons with McFarlane and Hutchinson assisting.

Tom MacDonald was the only Bearcat to beat the Yankees' goalie, Dave Casselman, as the Bearcats fell prey to the Yankees by a 4-1 margin in the second game of the day. Wayne Brown fired two goal and added an assist for the winners with singles going to Bruce Lloyd and Barry Brownlee.

Belleville's McInroy-Maines minor Bantams of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association came up with a strong showing Sunday in league play to edge the Trenton minor Bantams by a 5-4 margin in Belleville.

Down by a 3-1 count in the first period, McInroy-Maines managed to fight back, outscoring the opposition by a 3-1 margin in the final period of play to earn the victory. John Broder scored the goal that gave Belleville the win.

The Belleville Yardmen Minor Midgets with strong goaltending from Brian Cook were able to fight to a 3-3 tie with Kingston Township. Mike Bryant, Dan Duffy and Hugh Graham each picked up a single for Belleville.

The Salmon River Motel Novices split a pair of weekend games with a 9-0 loss to Oshawa in a league game on Saturday and a 3-1 exhibition win over Picton. Kevin Reed, Jeff Wannamaker and Greg Rupnow each scored once in the Belleville victory. Picton's lone goal came from Paul Ireland.

In Major Atom play the Towers Food City club found the Kingston atoms too much to handle and dropped a 9-2 decision. Jeff Brown and Andy Bunnett did the scoring for Belleville.

The Dixie Lee Minor Peewees dropped a pair of games losing 6-1 to the Kingston Township entry on Saturday and 13-2 on Sunday at the hands of Oshawa. Chris Coates fired the lone goal in the first Belleville game and David Meagher picked up both markers in the second game.

The Rollins Construction Major Peewees also found the going tough on the weekend as they dropped a pair of games. Saturday Kingston topped the local entry by a 4-1 margin and Sunday by a 10-1 score.

Matt Whitley fired the single for Belleville in both games. In the only other game the Belleville Lions Major Midget entry fell to Oshawa by a 3-1 score. Bob Buston fired the lone goal for the Belleville club.

Dukes Score 5-0 Win

WELLINGTON (Special) — Goalie Frank Hardy chalked up his first shutout of the season here, Sunday as Wellington Dukes blanked Bobcaygeon 5-0 in Ontario Hockey Association Junior D play.

Dukes have a pair of games scheduled on the weekend. Saturday, the club is in Haliburton and Sunday, Bewdley will be the visitor on Wellington Arena ice for a 4.30 p.m. contest.

Knee-deep Wading in Season

Nicholson Catholic College students clammer off a city bus on Pinnacle Street this morning and step knee-deep in banks of snow rolled up onto roadsides by city plows overnight. Students in Belleville, those unaffected by cancelled school bus runs, waded through the aftermath of a storm that hit southeastern Ontario overnight and left 11.4 inches (29 cm.) of wet, heavy snow in the city.

Controls Extend To Key Trades

OTTAWA (CP) — Thousands more companies and workers now may be under the federal anti-inflation program as a result of an announcement Tuesday night by Finance Minister Donald Macdonald.

The minister told the Commons he will ask the anti-inflation board to consider the situation of companies and employees in key transportation, grainhandling and construction industries now not under the guides.

If the board rules they should be covered, they will be subject to price-and-wage controls retroactive to Tuesday, said Mr. Macdonald.

He spoke just before the Liberal government defeated 108 to 79 a motion of non-confidence moved against it by the Social Credit party.

The motion, condemning the government's social and economic policies and urging interest-free loans to the provinces, was supported by the Progressive Conservatives and New Democrats.

The Commons also approved a $1.75 billion package of supplementary spending estimates which the government announced Nov. 12 it would be requiring But on procedure grounds, Speaker James Jerome ruled out a provision of the supply bill allowing the government to borrow $2 billion for public works and other programs.

The amount granted Tuesday includes $385 million for consumer and sales taxes, $250 million for interest payments on federal debts and $177 million for increased medical costs.

Although the anti-inflation program has yet to get final Senate approval and royal assent, it has been law since midnight Oct. 17, a few hours after Prime Minister Trudeau announced it on nationwide television.

Under the legislation, the anti-inflation board has the power to bring companies and employees not specifically named under the program.

Already subject to the guides—limiting employees to pay raises of about 10 per cent in the first year and limiting price increases to amounts covering production costs—are firms with more than 500 employees and construction companies with 20 or more employees.

Mr. Macdonald, whose announcement was seen as a surprise, told MPs the cabinet had decided to ask the board for a ruling on:

If Contract Not Approved

Mackasey Will Fight Anti-inflation Board

OTTAWA (CP) — Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey said Tuesday he would fight any move by the federal anti-inflation board against a pay award that put striking postal workers back on the job a week ago.

The possibility that the board might denounce the award in 22,000 indoor postal workers was raised inside the Commons and outside.

Some officials speculated that the board might feel forced to denounce the 38-per-cent award—the profit in the first year—as excessive, therefore prevailing rejected unrest in the post office and forcing the cabinet to intervene to make the pay raise stick.

Legislation setting up the anti-inflation program, expected to become law late this week, provides for cabinet intervention to overrule a decision under the program.

The program places a basic ceiling of 10 per cent on pay increases in the first year, although it provides for some exceptions.

Mr. Mackasey has said the post office award is justified on the ground that the indoor workers are receiving the same as letter carriers were awarded before the pay-control program was introduced Oct. 14.

However, some government officials speculated that members of the board oppose making an exception in this case.

Replying to James McGrath (PC—St. John's East), Mr. Mackasey said he is ready to defend the pay raise to the board if necessary.

Say Cheese When Your Team Asks for Money

BY HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Hastings County council has found a tasty alternative to a request for financial aid to send a local team to a hockey tournament in Alberta.

The request came earlier this year from the Marmora-Trent Valley League Oldtimers aiming to participate in annual oldtimers hockey tournament in Lethbridge next February.

Tuesday, council's finance committee feared a precedent would be set by allocating such a grant.

The novel solution: Present the team with 50 lbs. of county cheese. It would be distributed by the team or provided at any tournament banquet—while simultaneously promoting Hastings County products.

Trustees Raise Salaries Behind Closed Doors

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

Hastings County Board of Education trustees went behind closed doors Monday night and with a 9-4 vote increased their monthly salary by $50 to $250 from $200.

Trustees last increase occurred a year ago when the honorarium was increased $100, to $200 from $200. The ministry of education allows no more than $400 a month salary for chairmen of trustees.

Sitting trustee Don Williams, who opposed the increase, said Tuesday the board's action is inconsistent and provides poor leadership for Ontario's wage and price guidelines. The board's increase represents an 11.6 per cent hike.

"I feel we are elected representatives and should be providing some leadership for the government's restraint program, otherwise, we are headed for problems," he said.

Mr. Williams, who asked for a recorded vote, criticized those trustees who during the open session showed fiscal restraint on two programs and then later voted in favor of their own increase.

Trustees who opposed the increase were Louise Burr, John Forbes, Miriam Graham, chairman Jean Hutchinson, Ken Little, Bob Ord, Jim Spry and Don Williams.

Mr. Williams, who said the increase should have been dealt with in open session, said the taxpayers had a right to know how the individual trustees felt about the move.

Supporters of the increase argued that the board decided last year there would be an increase and that $350 brings the board more in line with neighboring boards.

Mr. Peterborough County Board of Education pays trustees $250 a month, while the Prince Edward County Board of Education pays $100 to trustees. The Lennox and Addington County Board of Education pays $200 while Kingston's Frontenac County Board of Education pays the maximum.

Trustees attend at least four meetings a month and some spend many more hours on special committees. However, the trustees usually do not hold regular meetings during July and August.

Miriam Graham, vice-chairman of the board, said Thursday she could not morally vote in favor of the increase because of the guidelines. However, she defended trustees by saying that the job is worth far more than $400.

Layoff Threats Hurt Salary Talks: Smith

By JERRY BROWN
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Continual threats of layoffs made by town council during bargaining sessions with the local firefighters association has made normal contract talks impossible said Capt. Dennis Smith, a spokesmen for the men, Tuesday.

Capt. Smith said that council's refusal to make decisions concerning salary requests are being made by the arbitrators because the politicians refuse to make a judgement themselves, he said in a lengthy rebuttal to a report council heard at Monday night's session.

"We don't like negotiating through the media but we are forced to do it," said Capt. Smith.

Capt. Smith said the firefighters were aware of a responsibility to the town when they devised their demands.

"We don't realistically expect to receive what we have asked for, said the captain. "But that is the way negotiations are conducted, said the captain. "You make an offer, the town makes one and then everyone compromises, but that is not the way it has been with our contract negotiation," said Capt. Smith.

In a report filed by town clerk Aubrey Sharp, it was recommended the town explore the possibility of replacing the current permanent fire department with a fully volunteer brigade if the firefighters don't modify salary demands, Mr. Sharp said the recommendation was not meant to be taken as a threat to the firefighters association but Capt. Smith said he felt differently.

"How can this be anything but a threat," said the firefighter. Every year we are threatened with layoffs if we don't accept council's offer, said Capt. Smith.

The spokesmen for the firefighters association concurred with views expressed by Trenton Fire Chief Cecil Ellis, said it would be impossible for the town to switch to a volunteer system.

"Where would the five people we took out of the Gilbert Hotel have come from if they not arrived," said Capt. Smith.

Volunteers Slow Down Fire Brigade Says Chief

TRENTON — The town's proposed plan to disband the regular fire department and replace it with a volunteer brigade system would probably increase response time to a fire by at least 600 per cent, said Trenton Fire Chief Cecil Ellis, Tuesday.

It is currently possible for the department to be at the scene of a fire anywhere in the municipality within three minutes but this would probably increase to almost 30 minutes with a volunteer system, said Chief Ellis.

"The volunteers must first assemble at the fire hall to mobilize the truck before anyone can be dispatched to the scene of a fire," said chief Ellis.

Indonesia Suspends Trade Talks with Holland Over Incidents

AMSTERDAM (AP) — Indonesia has suspended trade talks with the Netherlands, apparently because the Dutch government has been unable to end the occupation of the Indonesian consulate in Amsterdam by South Moluccan nationalists, the Dutch economics ministry announced today.

Representatives of the two governments have been meeting in Jakarta, the Indonesian capital, to discuss the sale of several hundred million dollars worth of ships and perhaps planes to the former Dutch colony.

A ministry spokesman said all indications are that suspension of the talks is the direct result of the action by the two dozen South Moluccan people holding as estimated 55 hostages in the Amsterdam consulate and aboard a train in northern Holland.

South Moluccan nationalists holding hostages for nearly a week have demanded a meeting in Geneva with Indonesian President Suharto, but an Indonesian representative said the demand will be rejected.

A Geneva meeting between Suharto and Johan Alvares Manusama, a leader of a community of South Moluccan exiles in the Netherlands, was among a series of demands submitted to the Jakarta government by gunmen holding an estimated 25 hostages in the Indonesian consulate in Amsterdam. They seized the building last Thursday.

An emissary of the South Moluccans met Surjadi Kromomihardjo, political counsellor at the Indonesian embassy in The Hague. Surjadi, who said he was not meeting in an official capacity, said the demand to Suharto will be "categorically released."

The Indonesian ambassador, Lt.-Gen. Sutopo, said in a radio address that "there will be no spending for the year ending March 31, 1976, to $51.34 billion, 11 per cent above a year ago.

The amount granted Tuesday includes $385 million for consumer and sales taxes, $250 million for interest payments on federal debts and $177 million for increased medical costs.

Under the legislation, the anti-inflation board has the power to bring companies and employees not specifically named under the program.

Already subject to the guides—limiting employees to pay raises of about 10 per cent in the first year and limiting price increases to amounts covering production costs—are firms with more than 500 employees and construction companies with 20 or more employees.

Mr. Macdonald, whose announcement was seen as a surprise, told MPs the cabinet had decided to ask the board for a ruling on:

"The trucking industry, the construction industry, and here we are considering, of course, firms with less than 20 employees; the shipping industry on the West Coast of Canada, the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence; the longshoring industry, and the grain handling industry with a view to recommending whether, in what manner, and to what extent, designations should be made.

"If the anti-inflation board makes a positive recommendation in respect of any or all of the foregoing industries, and if the governor-in-council (cabinet) decides to designate some or all of these industries, the designation will take effect as of today and the designation will be applicable to both prices and compensation (wages)."

Mr. Macdonald said outside the Commons it was important to make the announcement as soon as possible so companies would be warned. This would force them to take the restrictions into account in making corporate decisions, he said.

If the request is approved by the board, all companies in specified industries would be covered, regardless of the number of employees.

Students Hope to Take Play Repertoire on Road

By MARG. HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

BLOOMFIELD — The Prince Edward Youth Theatre next summer hopes to "hit the road" with a trio of children's plays but assistance with transportation is required from the Prince Edward board of education, says theatre director Larry Tayler.

Mr. Tayler, who met with school trustees this week to discuss the project, says it Prince Edward Collegiate Institute students participate in the youth theatre presentations.

The purpose of the group is two-fold. It is to produce and present three children' plays in 1975-76 and to perform them in various locations in the Quinte area," he told trustees.

Mr. Tayler said the group's first production, Pig Tales, already has been performed in the Picton area and at the end of December work will begin on two other productions.

The theatre's next play will carry a nautical theme to tie in with the sailing Olympics and will be presented at the Children's Festival of Arts in Belleville next March.

The third play slated for production was written by two former PECI students, Marie Marie McDonald and Nicola Brookes and tells the story of a little girl lost at the Sandbanks.

Mr. Tayler said that in une ,the theatre group hopes to present a trio of plays at summer resorts and provincial parks throughout the area.

The Kingston Olympics Public Events Committee has invited the actors to join in their festivities.

For six weeks the Prince Edward Youth Theatre would perform in the Quinte area and Kingston if plans are approved.

Mr. Tayler said if the project has local support the group can qualify for a Wintario grant.

"We are the first school group in Ontario to approach Wintario about this type of grant," explained Mr. Tayler.

He added that Wintario can provide up to 50 per cent of the theatre group's operating budget of $6,500.

Half of this amount is in grantickets for the students who would take part in the six weeks project.

"The figure is incredibly low for what other theatres get," commented Mr. Tayler.

He said that local service clubs and municipal councils will be approached in connection with raising funds for the performance of the plays next summer.

Mr. Tayler said transportation is a major problem for the group and he has requested the board to provide direct financial assistance through van rental and gasoline costs or loan of the board mini-bus and the services of a driver. An alternative suggested by the theatre group was loan of the mini-bus with permission for Mr. Tayler to operate it.

Mishap on 401 Tuesday Snarls Evening Traffic

BRIGHTON — A two-vehicle accident sent one man to the hospital, caused more than $2,000 damage, and reduced traffic to a crawl in the eastbound lane of Highway 401 during Tuesday's snowstorm.

Injured in the accident, was Bruno Gabriel, 58, of Kitchener. He is listed in satisfactory condition in Trenton Memorial Hospital suffering from facial lacerations and multiple injuries.

Police spokesman for the Brighton OPP said the Gabriel vehicle was travelling westbound in the eastbound lane of Highway 401 when the mishap occurred. A tractor-trailer driven by David Dickson, of Scarborough, was travelling eastbound, took evasive action, entered the median and rolled over.

Dickson was not injured. There was $2,000 damage to the Gabriel vehicle which was in collision with the tractor-trailer. Police estimated damage to the truck at $1,000.

Constable B. J. McArthur said the mishap is still under investigation.

Three Hurt In Crash

CROFTON — Three persons received minor cuts and bruises Tuesday afternoon in a two-car collison on Highway 14 about one quarter mile north of Crofton.

Damage to each vehicle was estimated at $500 in the collision which occurred shortly before 6 p.m.

Damage Extensive

BATAWA — About $850 damage was caused in a two-car collision about 3:35 p.m. Tuesday on Highway 33 near here.

Roland Sabouin, 48, of Campbellford, was driving northbound when he was in collision with a vehicle driven southbound by Iris Redford, 40, of Frankford.

No one was injured and no charges were laid, said Belleville OPP.

Meberships Under Review

City council next week will finish drafting appointments to the various boards and committees which play an integral role in Belleville's local government.

Council met in caucus early this week to consider membership on the various groups for 1976.

Plans are to meet a half-hour earlier next Monday — council's regular session — and finish drawing up the list of new year appointments, he said.

Political Prisoner Crowd Jails in an Imperialist-leaning Indonesia

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

Indonesia is a sprawling nation of 100,000,000 spread over a vast stretch of the Southeast Asian seas, a collection of thousands of islands large and small.

Perhaps the best-known in the West is the exotic island of Bali, renowned for its dancers and beautiful women, and rightly touted as a major tourist attraction in Asia.

But Indonesia is a troubled nation, its spread of island-to-island domination challenged in the South Moluccas at the western end of the archipelago, while the central government in Jakarta proceeds to assert ever-straining portions to the eastern end not under its rule.

In 1962 Indonesian armed forces led by a cruisty, took control of East Irian, that portion of the vast island of New Guinea which had been part of Holland's vast Asian empire before World War II.

And this was only another Indonesian task force, again landed by naval craft supplied originally by the Russians, seized the capital city of Dili of Portuguese Timor an island possession of the troubled Portuguese homeland since 1975.

These imperialistic excursions of a country born out of the decline of Dutch empire in Asia, the pre-war name for the region lying the Dutch-East Indies, do not hide the growing crises within one of the Third World's most populous and richest potential nations.

Indonesian Premier Sukarno came to power after a shocking bloodbath and near-civil war which resulted in the death, execution and assassination of an estimated half million Indonesian Communists and the end of a pro-Soviet era under the late and discredited founding president Sukarno.

Remember him from the early 1950s when the likes of Nasser in Egypt, Nkrumah in Ghana, the emerging Castro in Cuba and Sukarno in Indonesia seemed to be the oriental charismatic leaders of the future in the Third World.

Indeed Sukarno debauched a mandate guaranteed to him after World War II during which he fought as a resistance leader against the Japanese imperialism and the earlier more benign Dutch variety.

Jakarta, in 1955, the Indonesian capital, was not only the seat of expensive and lavish Asian games with their own political overtones, but of one of the first of many conferences of non-aligned nations.

At that time the People's Republic of Cuba was persona grata in Indonesia with Premier Chou Enlai on hand for the big event of 25 years ago.

The military which overthrew him, tested in Asia's pro-Communist friends and allies and tried to make his vast state enterprises run efficiently, succeeded in fallen on evil days.

If Sukarno kept up his political prisoners, he never did it to the extent President Suharto and the Indonesian people's forces have done.

An estimated 50,000 Indonesians are in jail with no hope of any due process of law, since Suharto took over.

Indonesia is so deprived and bankrupt African or Asian mini-state. She is mineral and oil-rich; a vast nation with vast potential.

And yet her present internal upheavals have spilled over into world news twice in the past Mackerton hijacking and kidnapping in Holland. Indonesia looks like a nation without a national course.

Teachers and Politics

A number of city secondary school teachers have telephoned staff members of The Intelligencer to voice their displeasure at a Dec. 3 headline that read "Walkout On Teacher Plan."

That heading appeared above a Canadian Press story that read: "Officials of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation (OSSTF) said Thursday that a walkout by Ontario's 34,000 secondary school teachers to support their striking colleagues in Metropolitan Toronto will be considered today by the OSSTF executive council."

One spokesman, London district vice-president John Meal said the council meeting was "to decide whether we will strike."

Hastings division OSSTF president Judie Carty was quoted as saying secondary School teachers in this county want to stay within legal bounds and not participate in any province-wide walkout or slowdown which she termed "illegal."

We think the public is getting fed up with the teaching profession as a whole, and the teachers are getting a little bit edgy about the situation.

There was a time when many teachers were underpaid, But we think the Metro Toronto teachers' quest for 43.9 per cent pay increases plus a cost-of-living allowance is stretching the profession's credibility with the public. How many people do you know that make $10 - $20,000 for 197 days of work a year, including 12 for "professional development"?

If Hastings County teachers are touchy about headlines that appear such as on Dec. 8 ("Teachers Will Defy Wage, Price Guidelines") they have two courses of action open to them.

They can stand up and openly declare their support for OSSTF spokesmen who are spouting such tripe, or voice their opposition to statements made by their federation representatives.

Strike Comment

Anyone For Democracy?

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

I write in the hope of arousing immediate citizen support for those three inside workers at Belleville Post Office who defied the intimidation and enforced the results of their own union executive by returning to work when it became apparent to any reasonable person that the welfare of the nation had to be placed above fractional gain.

I am not prepared to labor notions, many of which have a noble history, but I do know personally many of the workers involved. I read in your columns that there were only five of them — but I do know that if the Postal Office authorities, the police or the general public allow these people to suffer for their open display of civic-mindedness — firm we all deserve the totalitarian rule that is now threatening this country under several guises, including "collective bargaining" and "union solidarity". A fine, hard-won principle is being demeaned by petty leaders motivated by selfish greed, if not by darker intention.

You quote a local union president as threatening that the five workers will be "cut off completely — extradited — dragged as if they didn't exist." Does a union official really wield this kind of power inside Government of Canada structures in Canada? A local Labor Council vice-president is quoted as advising people to "vote to another wicked day which know they are yeah." (He might note that yeahs exist only on rubber flesh.) The union president adds that "we'll take the battle back inside with us." Does this kind of incitement and threat not infringe civil rights as guaranteed to all under the Canadian Bill of Rights?

Who is for democracy? Not the protesters quoted. It is on the public record that, despite the union executive's action in preventing some thousands of its members from voting in the strike plebiscite, a majority of the members still decided to return to work on the terms offered by the Postmaster-General (minus the bonus).

Belleville is still a lovely city of modest size where a man can know his neighbors. I hope that those whose business or private affairs require them to use the Post Office will make it clear to their representatives, comments and peaceful actions and they will not stand by apathetically and permit those concerned few to be victimized in the slightest way for their public-spirited act. Perhaps the city's mayor, as putative leader of the community, might place a motion of commendation before his council. If any complaint or intimidation is now getting should reach the police, brisk action for charges should ensue.

As far as I know, I am the only person who has responded to the latter, fruitless end. In us all hope the greater number of them were merely misused pawns of an executive, diverted, unknowing to the dirge of a distant drummer.

Editor,
The Intelligencer;

I believe that you are aware that the threat of mass, was not to compel those councillors in my next election, and to ask my friends to withdraw support from them. I believe this is my democratic right.

I believe that as individuals these people have a right to any opinion and I will defend that right. But as members of city council they were out of place with their prejudicial remarks.

I not believe that unions hold people to ransom and have no right to set a value on their labor, then perhaps you will remove the place from the front of your paper and accept what is as the best and dedicated as much your employer, as you are mine, should determine to do so.

Please allow me this same freedom to express my freedom from your threats, that you or any other of city council members.

WALTER S. YATEMAN
President CUPW Belleville.

Role of Exercise

Film from President Ford's visit to China shows the emphasis placed there on exercise for the masses — from early morning activity in factory and school to the rigors of table-tennis, Chinese-style, to the varied repertoire of Oriental ballet.

Sport, athletics and recreation as we are accustomed to it here is somewhat different. It lacks the compulsion of what after-all is a state-directed program in China, but we could learn from the latter nevertheless.

Meanwhile, here in Belleville it is good to observe initiatives at city level directed toward improvement of overall recreation facilities locally — as witness Council's move, in conjunction with the recreation arena committee, to lease gym facilities for Procter and Gamble at Sir James Whitney School.

Interesting to see the firm is planning a family recreation program, also the fact the arrangement will be at no cost to the city.

There is evidence too of attention to future needs at the harbor, with word that additional docking space for pleasure craft will be built this winter.

Belleville is keeping pace in these and other areas. It's the kind of progress that will stand the city in good stead in the years ahead.

Christmas Sharing

Christmas is not far off and it is good to see the spirit of this season, in the context of helping others, is very much alive.

We note the activities of the Firefighters and the Students' Association of Loyalist College in providing toys and food for needy families. Then there are the area schools that are involved in similar thoughtful initiatives, not to mention the community-wide Christmas Sharing Program.

Quinte Mall cinema manager Stella Culhane, along with her staff, joined in also with Sunday's cartoon show for which admission was a toy donation.

Christmas is enhanced by the selflessness of these and other citizens who give of themselves in this way. Peace and goodwill may not be universally in evidence in the world just now, but at least they are qualities that do surface in this and other communities throughout our own land.

Dave Barrett Has Charisma Lacking in Canadian Politics

By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau

Thomson News Service

TORONTO — The people of British Columbia must have fun with their elections.

Perhaps they don't think so.

But if they were tied up in one of ours and then compared the two they would realize they have manna.

And in any day and age politically he would have been great.

Today he is outstanding.

He realizes the importance of drama and humor—and of entertainment.

When attacking his opposition he doesn't go into a routine diatribe but says, "They first called me a socialist, then they called me a reactionary . . . and now they call me FAT!"

Then talking about natural gas prices, which he had raised, he says, "Now they are calling me an Arab—what do you think my father and mother feel about that?"

He again, referring to a U.S. senator, he has said, "Let the senator get Texas straightened out before he messes around with us."

What we have seen recently have been the professional documentaries of Premier Davis, the hanging harangues of Bob Nixed and the sophisticated cynicism of Stephen Lewis.

Prior to that, there was the chairman of the board proclamations of John Robarts and the pulpit lectures of Leslie Frost.

Yes, yes.

And politics needs pep.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Dec. 19, 1971

The British battleship Prince of Wales and the battle-cruiser Repulse were sunk 34 years ago today—in 1941—by Japanese torpedoes off the Malay coast. The Prince of Wales had been commissioned earlier the same year. The two warships were trapped by bombers as they sailed to intercept Japanese transports approaching Malaya. Some 2,200 of the 3,000 men aboard were rescued after the sinkings.

Ontario Wineries Will Adopt Uniform Labelling Standard in 1976

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

This is the time of year that traditionally sees a big bulge in sales of Canadian wines.

To some extent, consumers must grope in the dark because of the lack of straightforward product information of the kind that's required by law to be shown on bottle labels in France and some other countries with a highly-developed wine market.

Now there's some help, either on the way or already here, for the confused Canadian consumer.

Early next year, on sale for the big holiday buying period and next extent, and as indication of the type and quality, they will not stand by apathetically and permit those concerned few to be victimized in the slightest way for their public-spirited act. Perhaps the city's mayor, as putative leader of the community, might place a motion of commendation before his council. If any complaint or intimidation is now getting should reach the police, brisk action for charges should ensue.

As far as I know, I am the only person who has responded to the latter, fruitless end. In us all hope the greater number of them were merely misused pawns of an executive, diverted, unknowing to the dirge of a distant drummer.

L.F. HANNON,

Labels will give such information as the minimum aging period and alcohol content, and an indication of the type and quality, they will not stand by apathetically and permit those concerned few to be victimized in the slightest way for their public-spirited act. Perhaps the city's mayor, as putative leader of the community, might place a motion of commendation before his council. If any complaint or intimidation is now getting should reach the police, brisk action for charges should ensue.

As far as I know, I am the only person who has responded to the latter, fruitless end. In us all hope the greater number of them were merely misused pawns of an executive, diverted, unknowing to the dirge of a distant drummer.

and unpretentious guide to the purchase of a product that is believed far too variously and unreliably in most cases.

The author comments are often short and sharp (one wine rates a simple "yuk"), and are summed up in a province-by-province list of best buys.

The guide contains a couple of suggestions for any penniless-cher who wants to carry economy still further: Join or form a wine club, to buy in bulk. Or make your own wine.

Winemakers will find worthwhile advice of a more general nature in another newly-published book, The Canadian Guide To Home Entertaining by Una Abrahamson (Macmillan, 176 pages, $14.95).

Miss Abrahamson, chairman of the Ontario Task Force on Nutrition and Dietary Goals, notes that an imported wine is not necessarily superior to a Canadian wine, nor vice versa.

Her advice is to try a half-bottle of a given vibo—even though it is relatively more expensive than a full bottle—to learn about taste, flavor and degree of sweetness.

There's a valuable section on business entertaining (you don't invite the boss first, and wait after you have been entertained by a superior, it's a delicate matter whether you return the invitation").

Miss Abrahamson's counsel could be a form of unemployment insurance, in view of the ease with which business careers can be ruined at such functions.

An 'Atmosphere of Greed'

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

There is no doubt that Canadian mean business when it comes to fighting inflation. The teachers are calling for a province-wide strike, the doctors are having a day-long affair, Messrs. Davidson and Perrot promise continued trouble in the Post Office, organized labor flatly rejects the government's anti - inflation program, the corporations indicate that they must have a bigger share of the pie, "or else", and the rest of us also have to get "what we have more" in order to pay the price the other guys want.

The government and opposition parties are saying, "They are more interested in taxing profits and arranging to have their pensions reflect the erosion of inflation.

So in an atmosphere of collected greed and uncontrolled drift (alcohol) and inevitable toward total collapse of all that we know and understand.

Where we are headed nobody seems to know and what is worse, nobody seems to care.

It seems to me that most of our problems are a direct result of the failure of the free enterprise or capitalist system, exemplified by Messrs. Mame Moreow and Peking for our present problems. Neither can we blame the Arabs, who after all, only practice the tenets and principles of free enterprise.

And now they are replacing the present government either. Columnist Richard Gwyn suggests that of the great years of the Conservative Diefenbaker government. He reminds us that Mr. Diefenbaker, the Governor of the Bank of Canada and the Liberal government could force the Bank of Canada to inflate. He adds "that opening of the floodgates was where we are now". So we cannot expect help from the Tories, Canada.

Correctional Officer Remanded On Six Charges, Including Assault

MADOC — Peter John Ruskom, 32, of 178 Kent St. in Campbellford was remanded in provincial court here Tuesday to Jan. 20 for a preliminary hearing on six charges, including one of assaulting a police officer.

Ruskom, a correctional officer at Warkworth Institution, is also charged with assault causing bodily harm, resisting arrest, escaping custody, impaired driving and failing to supply a sample of his breath.

Ontario Provincial Police at Madoc say Constable Glen Pawley stopped a pickup truck in Marmora Nov. 4 and was assaulted when he attempted to arrest the driver.

Police say the driver escaped and was arrested about 30 minutes later in the village by Constable Walter Brown after other officers were summoned to assist in the search.

Five Youths Fined on Liquor Charges

MADOC — Five Madoc youths were fined $50 each in provincial court here Tuesday after they pleaded guilty to being on licensed premises while under 18 years of age.

The youths, charged under the Ontario Liquor Licensing Act (OLLA), are: Alex Casselman, 17, Ronald Holmes, 17, John Parks, 18, Dennis Bruce Rooney, 16 and Richard Seers, 17.

Casselman pleaded guilty to an additional charge of being intoxicated in a public place and was fined $35.

A charge of being on licensed premises while under 18 years of age against Scott Alexander Nickle, 17, of Madoc was withdrawn due to a technicality and Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) at Madoc say Nickle will be recharged.

An additional Liquor Control Act charge of having liquor in his possession while under 18 years of age against Rooney was also withdrawn.

The charges followed a raid Nov. 21 at Madoc Hotel at 33 North Durham St. by OPP and liquor law enforcement officers.

Madoc Hotel Ltd. and Carl Spatola, 23, of Madoc, a hotel bartender, was remanded in provincial court here Tuesday to a tentative date of Dec. 23 for trial on OLLA charges laid against them in connection with the raid.

The hotel company is charged with permitting persons under 18 years of age on licensed premises and Spatola is charged with knowingly serving liquor to persons under 18 years of age.

It was incorrectly reported in The Intelligencer late last month that Joseph Rossie, 41, of 147 East Elgin St. in Madoc, hotel owner and manager, had been charged with the offence for which the hotel company is charged and that Rooney's additional charge was having liquor in a place other than his residence.

The story which contained the errors was published in The Nov. 28 edition of the newspaper.

Anna Collen, one of the staff at the Reading'n Greeting Shop, sorts through the large selection of Chrisms cards. Some managers of local card shops say many people are not purchasing Christmas cards this year.

Postal Strike Over, Card Sales May Not Recover

Although mail is moving again across the country, many people are not sending Christmas cards this year. Or, says some managers of local shops selling greeting cards, next year either.

"A lot of people have commented they are not going to bother with Christmas cards anymore," said Ralph Hodgson, manager of Coles Book Store.

"I think this will hurt sales next year too," he said. "People will discover how much money they will save."

Mr. Hodgson said it is too early to judge the impact the strike had on Christmas.

He said cards and calendars are beginning to sell.

A spokesman for Shoppette also said cards are now beginning to sell. She added there is no way of estimating whether they would all sell before Christmas.

The Reading 'n Greeting Shop owner Ernie Colebourne said the bulk of Christmas card sales were usually handled in November.

The postal strike began Oct. 21 and Dec. 2.

Mr. Colebourne said there is only a 40 per cent potential left in selling remaining cards.

"People are not going to buy cards the way they did before," he said. "As a retailer it's up to me to promote business back to the way it was."

Russ Davis, operations supervisors at Sears, said he was not authorized to make any public statements.

The Sears store, located in Quinte Mall, has a section devoted to Christmas cards and wrapping paper.

Meter Decision Delayed

A police proposal to meter parking on both sides of Coleman St. between West Moira and Harriett Streets has been returned — to the police.

City council's traffic committee Monday asked Police Chief Douglas Crosbie for further study of how commercial operations on the street's east side would be affected by such a move.

Adopt an Old Custom: Serve a Holiday Seafood Feast

Many cultures include a special Christmas Eve tradition: an all seafood buffet. Featured several entrees, this may include such exotic fare as octopus or such simple favorites as tuna salad.

Special Tuna Salad

9 oz. tin tuna
one large can pitted black olives
¼ cup salad dressing
one tsp lemon juice
Drain and slice olives. Combine all ingredients and chill at least three hours.

Salmon Brunch Pinwheels

1 can (7¾ oz.) salmon
¼ cup grated Swiss cheese
2 tbsp chopped green onion
2 tbsp chopped stuffed olives
¼ tsp dill weed
¼ tsp pepper
2 tsp lemon juice

Drain salmon, reserving the juice for Parsley Sauce. Flake salmon with a fork and combine with remaining ingredients, except crescent roll dough. Pinch sections of refrigerated rolls together to make one rectangle. Spread with salmon filling. Roll up from long side. Cut into 12 pinwheels. Place pinwheels cut-side down, in buttered baking dish. Bake at 375 degrees F for 20 to 25 minutes or until golden. Serve with Parsley Sauce. Serves four.

Anniversary Celebrated

Alice Bell and Stanley Spafford were married Dec. 1 1915 at the Belleville home of the bride, by the Rev. S.C. Moore of Tabernacle Methodist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Spafford spent the first fifty years of their married life farming on the second concession of Sidney township. They retired to 24 Pine Street in the spring of 1966.

On Sunday, Nov. 30, their daughter Ruth, her husband Leonard VanOsten of Belleville and their son Gordon and his wife Darby of Winnipeg, hosted a luncheon for 30 guests in the Park Room at the Four Seasons Hotel in honor of their parents on their Diamond Anniversary.

Mr. Spafford's sister, Mrs. (Evelyn) Roy Finkle of Stirling, the bridesmaid of sixty years ago, was one of the honored guests. Also in attendance were their four grandchildren from Winnipeg, Jim, Ann, Cathy and Graeme Spafford.

Gordon Spafford proposed the toast to his parents, to which the groom replied. A niece, Nellie Campbell, paid tribute to the guests of honor on behalf of those present.

Prior to the luncheon, many of the guests attended morning service with Mr. and Mrs. Spafford at Tabernacle United Church. Rev. Leslie Dean presented the celebrating couple with hymn books in behalf of the congregation and Georgina Charlton, president of the Tabernacle UCW, gave a copy of The Rambling River by Mary Plumpton.

Mr. and Mrs. Spafford received many cards of congratulations, and floral offerings from their many relatives and friends.

Following the luncheon there was a reception for other friends during the afternoon.

Chummy Women Should Be Discreet

Dear Ann Landers: She is a beautiful woman (30), he is a handsome man (33). They have two lovely children. He is a hard worker, a good father, and generous with his money. They have a lovely apartment and a new car.

Six months ago she decided she was bisexual and became involved in an affair with a woman who lives in the same apartment complex. When the whole business came out in the open she said she was going to get help. But so far she hasn't done it. Meanwhile she makes a dash to her friend's apartment as soon as her husband goes to work. All the neighbors are wise to the arrangement.

Her kids hate their mother's women friend, but I don't think they know yet. Sooner or later they're bound to find out. What will this knowledge do to them? Maybe if the mother sees THAT in print she will mend her ways. Or perhaps her husband will figure out a course of action. Right now he is just waiting. Comment, please.—No Name

Dear N.N.: You write as if you know for certain these women are lovers. Were you there? If it is indeed a lesbian relationship, it will not be terminated by pressure from relatives—not even the distain of her children. I would hope, however, that the women be circumspect, if they are carrying on, no one need know. Lesbians are less visible than male homosexuals because it isn't considered unusual for girls to be very chummy.

Dear Ann Landers: A reader asked what to do about his dog who became very upset during thunderstorms—broke the furniture, etc. You told him to check with his veterinarian and get some tranquilizing pills. I have another suggestion.

A dog's ability to sense an impending storm is much more acute than a human's. By the time the owner notices a storm approaching, the dog is already anxious and upset. A tranquilizer will not take effect until after the storm.

My suggestion is this: Have the owner get a tape recorder for about $20, hook it with a loop, or continuous tape. Record a thunderstorm's sound and fury. Then on a quiet day, play the tape back to the pet at a low volume for about an hour. Repeat the tapes on successive days and increase the volume.

This should have a desensitizing effect on the animal. Sincerely yours—Lawrence M. Fox, D.V.M., River Grove, Illinois.

Dear Doc: Many thanks for the helpful hint. And now, if anyone out there tries it, please let me know how it went.

Dear Ann Landers: You usually advise parents to MYOB when it comes to the weight problems of their children, but my problem is different from that of most mothers who yearn for their daughters to be thin.

Eighteen months ago, our daughter lost a lot of weight by systematically starving herself. She began passing out and having crying jags.

We were told to get her to a psychologist, which we did. She then started to eat again, felt better emotionally and now is 30 pounds overweight, hates the way she looks, but will not go back to the psychologist. She continues to gain. What can I do? —Distressed

Dear D.: Very little. The girl must want to return and let's hope she does soon. The psychologist got her over one hump; now she needs help to pull her back from the opposite extreme.

Chinese Children Take Classes To Retain Cultural Heritage

WINNIPEG (CP) — Every Sunday, about 75 children of Chinese ancestry gather at the Manitoba Academy of Chinese Studies. Their purpose is to retain some degree of cultural heritage while integrating into the mainstream of Canadian society.

Dr. Yantay Tsai, academy secretary, says one of the main reasons the school was founded two years ago was to fill a gap created by the almost total absence of Chinese culture and history in Canadian textbooks. Also behind the school's formation was a growing concern that children born locally were becoming more isolated from their first-or second-generation immigrant parents.

To augment courses on Chinese culture, history and geography, children are instructed in the delicate art of writing and speaking in the dialects of Mandarin and Cantonese. For those without any knowledge of Chinese language, special English-speaking classes are arranged in culture, history and geography.

Len Hew, president of the academy, sees the school as an answer to the federal government's policy of multiculturalism.

"Every group has something to contribute," he said. "This is our contribution."

Dr. Pauline Zillman, the academy's principal, says the classes are aimed at enhancing rather than detracting from traditional Canadian education.

"We don't impose," she said. "We provide a facility and service to the community."

For funds, each child is assessed $5 on a sliding scale that decreases if more than one family member registers.

With the success of the school at pre-adult level, administrators are anticipating introducing classes for parents. A committee is also researching the possibility of compiling a textbook that aims at combining work and exercise books. Primarily directed at the needs of local Chinese, the proposed textbook may be of use nationally, school officials say.

Making It in the Fashion World

TORONTO (CP) — For the past year Lorraine Dubois, 28, a native of Dominica in the West Indies has been designing clothes from her two bedroom apartment.

She admits it takes courage for a young designer to leave a paying job and try it on her own in the tough, competitive world of fashion.

"I wanted to find out if I could support myself by designing," she said. "People started coming to me when they saw something I created and, this encouraged me to go out on my own."

Now she's busy building up a clientele because she plans to open her own boutique next spring.

"I enjoy creating fashions that are regalish, avant-garde not the run-of-the-mill kind," she said. "I want to design clothes at a price most women can afford."

She sews a tailored pantsuit selling for $175 and wants to give her customer the same quality of merchandise and workmanship for half the price.

"It's not that difficult. Adding to the overhead of selling imported fashions are such things as duty and the cost of manufacturers' agents. That's where the buyer's money goes, not for the merchandise."

Lorraine who moved to Toronto in 1966, learned to sew back home. Her mother sewed for her and at 14 she was making her own clothes.

On her arrival in Canada, she worked as a clerk in an accounting department for a couple of years and then left to take a year's course in fashion merchandising.

After graduation, she modelled for a dress manufacturer for four months and then worked for a manufacturers' agent, doing modelling and office work. But her heart was in creating fashion, which is why she quit her job.

Protest Prompts Review Of Ban on Parking

Citizen reaction has sent a proposal on parking restrictions in the East Hill core back to the drawing board.

Extension and changes in no-parking regulations over a six-block residential area was approved by city council's traffic committee a month ago.

By the time the plan — based on a police department survey — reached council a week later protests and a petition had been sent city hall.

The reaction involved the area from William St. to Lingram St.

Council sent the recommendation back to the traffic committee. This week the committee sent the proposal back to the police department.

"I think we'll have to completely review the whole area in light of the submissions," agreed Police Chief Douglas Crosbie.

Quinte Residents Digging Out from Season's First Major Storm

By AL ZARAS
AND CLIFF KENYON

Abandoned cars still block some streets today after Tuesday's a storm dumped up to 13.8 inches of heavy, wet snow on the Quinte area.

Jack Costain, city public works superintendent, said today his department began clearing snow from city primary and secondary arteries at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday.

All available equipment and men are out and plowing is continuing today, he said. Snow removal is scheduled for Thursday night.

"The snow was heavy and hard on equipment. It takes longer to clear," said Mr. Costain.

He called it the worst snowstorm of the winter, adding that it was the first time city equipment have been called out in force.

Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said today many cars were abandoned on city streets. Police did not grant permission for overnight street parking.

He said cars not removed today are subject to removal to facilitate snow clearing.

At CFB Trenton, where a snowfall was recorded 13.8 inches, crews are clearing parking lots and runways. A base spokesman said two flights were delayed 24 hours and non-essential personnel were requested not to come to work until noon today.

A spokesman at Belleville OPP said early today Highway 401 was snowcovered and trucks were travelling about 25 to 30 miles an hour.

Bill Moreau, manager of Central and Checker Taxi, said today cabs were running about an hour behind.

"It was pretty hectic. It's grim," said Mr. Moreau. He said they had 60 cars in operating Tuesday and kept their line busy busy all night getting them out of snow banks and ditches.

Doug Harris at Doug's Esso Towing service said today they are starting to catch up on the backlog of calls. They have three trucks in service.

He said they were busy all night and only accepting local calls except for the 50 ton wrecker working at Highway 401 towing transport trucks.

Several school bus runs in Prince Edward and Hastings Counties were cancelled.

Ambulance Firms Offer Ministry Counter Plan

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Ambulance operators from Belleville, Trenton and Picton say they will "work within the ministry of health's guidelines" for cutbacks and number of vehicles.

During the last year the ministry undertook an intensive study of the ambulance companies in an attempt to reduce costs after officials termed Belleville "a high cost area" for ambulance service.

Mr. Bahr, eastern District representative for the ministry and author of the year-long study on Belleville, said today, "if the study is accepted by the local operators, approximately $100,000 could be saved in the area . . . with the majority of the saving coming from Belleville costs."

Following a closed session meeting of ambulance operators Tuesday, the four companies announced in a joint press release that a collective proposal has been submitted to the ministry of health dealing with all aspects of ambulance service in the area. The companies are LaSalle, City Ambulance, Bushnell Ambulance in Trenton and Bond's Ambulance in Picton.

The operators have also requested another meeting with ministry officials to discuss their counter proposal.

The operators declined further comment until the meeting with the ministry has been held.

Mr. Bahr said the gist of the ministry recommendations on staffing and number of vehicles means reduction of one ambulance from each of three shifts during the day.

Under the recommendation, three ambulances would serve Belleville during the day, two in the evenings and one at night. In the event any of these ambulances is tied up during an extended trip, standby crews will be available.

"It will mean the four services operating more as a unit than as individuals," said Mr. Bahr. "If Picton's ambulance is away from its base, a Belleville ambulance will have to be called in to stand by until the local ambulance returns."

Following the meeting of local operators Tuesday, one official who asked to remain unnamed said "the operators have tentatively agreed it (ministry proposal) could live with and not modifications."

The official said these minor modifications form the text of a "counter proposal" that will be made to ministry officials next Wednesday.

Mr. Bahr said he was happy that local operators had agreed in principal with the study.

He said providing the study is implemented, ambulance operators will have a wider scope in how they handle their budget allocations.

He added a central dispatch system in Belleville General hospital will erase the need for each operator to have his own radio station which will also reduce the over-all cost of ambulance service in the area.

County Officially Ends Financial Role in EMO

Hastings County council Tuesday officially withdrew from participation in the Quinte Emergency Measures Organization (QEMO).

The move came with approval of a bylaw — a sequel to an earlier decision which saw council refuse additional funding to salvage QEMO after senior governments withdrew financial subsidies covering major operating expenses.

QEMO was wound up last summer.

A few weeks ago hopes for reviving some form of emergency measure organization flickered again as the federal government indicated it would pay 75 per cent of such costs.

However, Prince Edward County council opted not to participate.

Hastings' finance committee recommended the bylaw finally rescinding county participation in QEMO — after "taking all factors into consideration."

County council's formal move followed withdrawal earlier by Prince Edward County and Picton making the organization officially defunct, said Angus Duffy former Quinte coordinator.

Some weeks ago Belleville city councillor Stu Metcalfe proposed the formation of a volunteer emergency group.

Neighboring municipalities could "conceivably wish to participate, said Mr. Duffy.

Christmas Treats

Packing 500 pounds of candy into one pound units is just part of the job of Belleville Firefighter's Association to provide Christmas treats for the city's needy children. Those packing include (from left) Kathy Barrett, Anne Marie Gehan, Doug Barrett and Catherine Gehan.

Four to Seek Top County Position

The quarter of candidates announced their bids for county warden — council's leadership post — as council ended its final session of the year Tuesday night.

The contestants:

Reeve Gordon Wilman, of Sidney Township, now in his third year on county council, who unsuccessfully sought the wardership for 1975.

Reeve George Lyons, of Deseronto, five years a county councillor and also a former candidate for the office.

Reeve Cecil Woods, Madoc Township, a veteran of township government since 1958 and six years on county council.

Reeve James Pollock, Rawdon Township, three years on council and chairman of its finance committee.

Electing a new warden is one of the first acts required of council at its annual inaugural session — this year scheduled to start Jan. 13, earlier than usual because of tight budget pressures.

By long tradition the voting is held in closed session. The balloting results are never revealed.

In his end-of-term speech Warden McCrea said the county has ended the year "in pretty good financial shape."

A traditional policy of pay-as-you-go and retiring capital debts by short-term debentures meant county government faces no big accumulated debt, he said.

Sentencing Date Set

Floyd Johnston, 25, of 28 Centre St. in Belleville was remanded in provincial court here Tuesday to Jan. 12 for sentencing after he was found guilty by Judge J. L. Clendening of assaulting causing bodily harm.

Johnston had been on trial for three days on the charge laid in connection with an attack on a 31-year-old Belleville woman Oct. 6.

Outside the meeting he said about 75 per cent of the plan's contents still under review is "just a matter of interpretation and words."

Ministry officials are "nit-picking" over such items, he said. The major remaining problem involved differences over land severances and rezoning for rural residential lots.

The zoning regulations "fit urban situations" and "we don't feel the same regulations should apply to rural land severances."

His committee he said will seek another meeting in Belleville with ministry officials. Failing success, they'll go to the minister. Reeve Browne said he is "very confident" ministerial approval could be obtained before Jan. 15—when council next meets.

"We're just tired and fed up with the bureaucratic control of this province. We want the elected representatives to have more say," said Reeve Browne.

Reeve Gordon Wilman, of council veteran and member of the board, told council he is "disgusted" with ministry officials' response to the plan.

"They told us all along we were developing planning for Hastings County. It's a plan that fits Hastings County as you go along with the recommendations of the civil servants in the department."

"I'm really disgusted with the dictatorial attitude that the civil service seems to have."

Both he and Reeve Browne stressed, however, they did not blame the minister.

Reeve Barbara Allen, of Tweed, said the situation was "completely contrary" to the spirit of co-operation we were led to expect."

'Nit-picking' Delaying County Plan Charges Reeve

Delays in approving Hastings County's official plan was blamed by a county minister Tuesday on "nit-picking" by provincial government bureaucrats.

The plan approved in June 1974—was despatched for review by housing ministry officials 18 months ago.

Now, if the approval process isn't speeded up the issue will be taken to Housing Minister John Rhodes, said Reeve Felix Browne, of Bangor-Wicklow-McClure Township, who is county planning board chairman.

The problem is "strictly a matter of academics" between civil servants and the board, he said.

Only Way to Travel

Susie Boyce enjoys a new kind of transportation during a shopping trip today as her mother, Beverley, pulls the sled along Front Street. Tuesday's storm dropped over 11 inches of snow on the city.

Province Warns County To Cut Spending to Bone

Hastings County council has set its seal to 1976 as a year of fiscal austerity for its county government administration.

At its final session of the year Tuesday, it voted to accept the example of senior government anti-inflation guidelines.

The consensus supported a letter from Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough urging that increases in county spending should follow the upper-cent restraint being exercised by the provincial government. The province in turn is supporting the federal anti-inflation program.

The vote came early in the session which left councillors sharply conscious that local government is facing into a bleak budgetting year.

Mr. McKeough's letter also reminded them that increases in provincial payments to municipalities will be kept to five or six per cent.

Because of the restraints council:

(1) Must meet a week earlier than usual in the New Year so that the process of budget-drafting can be speeded up. It has to approve its 1976 budget by March 31 — a month earlier than this year.

(2) Heard warnings that anti-inflation guidelines could be a major problem in contract negotiations now underway with inside administrative staff at the county buildings and workers at Hastings Manor for the aged in Belleville.

The overview of 1976 financing was a sobering series of cautions that started soon after council began winding down the year's business.

The McKeough letter warned council it should put its local boards and commissions on notice that their 1976 budget demands must be pared to the "maximum extent."

He asked local government to join the province in a "total effort" to "cut spending to the bone".

Carl Bateman, county administrator, presented council with a report that warned "times ahead are going to be trying indeed."

Lineman Recounts Hair-raising Story

BY CLIFF KENYON
Staff Reporter

"It seemed as if my muscles had frozen," an apprentice Ontario Hydro lineman told member of Belleville Kiwanis Club Tuesday.

Ken McAllister of Cornwall was explaining to Rotarians his feelings a year ago when while training as a lineman he was electrocuted when he accidentally touched a 7,200 volt wire.

"It kind of set me back a bit," said Mr. McAllister who was saved by a fellow employee who administered mouth - to - mouth resuitation when the shock victim's breathing stopped.

"I could see and hear everything going on," said Mr. McAllister recalling the scene. He said he couldn't speak or move or breathe but could hear and see and was aware of his surroundings.

Following the accident he said he was in hospital for six weeks, didn't work for six months, and is now a fourth-year lineman apprentice with Ontario Hydro.

Mac McLeod, safety officer for Ontario Hydro Eastern branch, guest speaker at the club's regular meeting, said each of Ontario Hydro's male employees is trained in artificial resuitation.

"It's paid off," said Mr. McLeod saying hydro employees have revived persons other than fellow workers.

He said people should become familiar with methods of artificial resuscitation.

Alarm Box

Tuesday, Dec. 10, 7:42 p.m. — fire caused by steel beams being welded near exhaust fan at Army Navy & Air Force Veterans—The Duke of Edinburgh Unit at 167 Front St., minor damage to a wall.

Officials Balk At Health Council

Hastings County councillors Tuesday again steered clear of immediate participation in evolving a district health council as proposed by the provincial government.

Councillors for the second time in two months withheld a decision on joining a steering committee—this time after hearing from Donald Soulter, ministry co-ordinator in eastern Ontario.

In October, councillors gave a cool reception to the health council proposal—some reeves suggesting it imposed another layer of bureaucracy in local processes.

The same warnings were echoed during Mr. Soulter's presence.

Among its assignments are to overview health-care planning, identifying gaps and overlaps in services and act as a co-ordinator.

Mr. Soulter said health care delivery costs in Ontario are mounting. Five years ago he said it cost $214 per person; that's now up to $355, and by the 1980's could reach $1,000—for a total of $10 billion.

15 Days For Offence

Dean Lang Robinson, 21, of 128 Hastings Dr. in Belleville was sentenced to 15 days in county jail by Judge J. L. Clendenning in provincial court here Tuesday after pleading guilty to driving a motor vehicle while prohibited.

Robinson was arrested Oct. 19. He had been prohibited from driving for 12 months in Canada by Judge Clendenning June 23 when he appeared for driving while disqualified.

Judge Adds Fourth Charge at Hearing

Dennis Craig Moule, 24, of 43 West Lawrence St. in Toronto was committed for trial on two counts of personation, possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking and possession of goods obtained by crime following a preliminary hearing in provincial court here Tuesday.

Moule was originally charged by Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville with one count of personation and both possession charges but after hearing evidence, Judge J. L. Clendenning, in a rare legal move, committed Moule on the second personation count as well in connection with an incident in Toronto Oct. 5.

No date has been set for trial.

Police say the original charges followed a routine traffic check on highway 2 at Bayside Oct. 16

Ottawa To View Increase

A request to permit pay increases for nurses at Hastings Manor — the county home for the aged in Belleville — will be taken to the federal anti-inflation board.

Hastings County councillors were told of the move Tuesday by Reeve Kenneth Smith, personnel committee chairman.

The problem: Traditionally the county pays the nurses the same rates as that achieved by province-wide bargaining with the Ontario Nurses Association, but was not over this year. But the county date for wage adjustments is Jan 1. Federal anti-inflation guidelines are to be made retroactive to October.

"It's a dilemma," said Reeve Smith, his committee will appear to the board for relief — since "we feel this group should be paid the same rate as is paid across the province."

Freeing Hydrants

Bill MacCormack, a Belleville Public Utilities Commission employee, clears the snow away from the hydrant on Bridge Street early today. The crew cleaned a path around all fire hydrants in the city.

Study Reveals New Aircraft Could Be Operated Profitably

OTTAWA (CP) — Studies indicate the Canadian-built, 48-seat DHC-7 aircraft could be operated profitably on the current unprofitable STOL air route between Ottawa and Montreal, says Malcolm Armstrong, a top transport department official.

Mr. Armstrong told the Senate finance committee today that studies by the department suggest the de Havilland DHC-7, or Dash 7, could be operated at a profit of $1 a passenger between the cities.

The current STOL (short takeoff and landing) service on this route uses de Havilland Twin Otters, an 11-seat aircraft. The Service is losing $3 a passenger now he said.

He said the figures are based on regular operating costs and ticket revenue without including cost of building the airports for the two-year demonstration service which began in early 1974.

The larger Dash 7 is considered more economical to run than the small Twin Otter on busy inter-city routes.

Transport department officials say many customers have had to be turned away at peak hours on the Montreal-Ottawa service, operated by Airtransit, and Air Canada subsidiary.

Less fuel is used per passenger in the Dash 7 and its engines are considered more efficient than the Twin Otter's they say.

Technician Finds Way To Preserve Orchids

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A technician at Queen's University has discovered a process that has preserved orchids and other flowers in their natural form for up to three years.

Jack Webb, chief technician of the biology department, was given the job in 1972 of finding a way of preserving orchids so they would retain their color when suspended in a liquid.

Experimenting with various chemicals, he has been able to preserve the color and texture of orchids. Jock the chlorophyll in a leaf to keep it soft and supple, retain the leaves on a conifer twig and preserve a caterpillar without loss of shape or color.

Dr. Michael Bristow, associate professor of biology at Queen's, uses the preserved plants for study.

"Now it's possible to show students the beauty of the thing—the esthetic angle of plant anatomy because (method of preservation) is so simple," Dr. Bristow said. "You dunk the thing in the formula, take it out a day later and it is all there."

Although the plants lose their scent, Mr. Webb said they are so durable enough to be passed from hand to hand and studied minutely in a classroom, then returned to be stored with other objects for further use.

"After three years, there is no deterioration," he said. "I don't know how long the preserved specimens will last. It could be forever—but forever is a very long time."

He said that with a combination of chemicals, a dehydration "process takes place. The treatment "holds the chain of carbons in the plant instead of what usually happens—a breakdown."

Work experience for that first job

Ontario CAREER Action

Program

More than half of the unemployed in the Province are young people. Because of this, the Ontario Government has created a work-experience program, with a living allowance, that is designed to help young job seekers find gainful employment.

To be eligible, you must be at least 16 years old, but less than 25 years of age, and you must be unemployed, but actively seeking employment. You must not now be receiving full-time formal education.

Assistance includes on-the-job training plus an allowance of $100 per week up to a maximum of 52 weeks. The aim is to provide the guidance and experience necessary for employment in private business or industry. The Ontario Government and Canada Manpower will assist trainees in their search for employment.

To apply, fill out an application form at your local Canada Manpower Centre. Final selection of applicants and allocation of training assignments will be made by the Government of Ontario.

The first program begins January, 1976. Apply soon. Further information about the program is available at your Canada Manpower Centre.

The Ontario Career Action Program is administered by the Ontario Ministry of Colleges and Universities in cooperation with the Ontario Youth Secretariat.

1975 - a Year of Triumph For Alberta's Lougheed

EDMONTON (CP) — Albertans gave an overwhelming vote of confidence to Premier Peter Lougheed in 1975, providing the mandate he said was needed to deal with Ottawa on energy issues, and received a commitment that he will not leave the province to enter federal politics in 1976.

It was a year of glittering personal triumph for the 47-year-old Progressive Conservative premier, as his party won re-election by taking 69 of 75 legislature seats in the March general election.

And it was a dismal year of political humiliation for the one-time eighty Social Credit party ousted from power by the Lougheed Conservatives in 1971 after 36 consecutive years of governing the province. Social Credit, troubled by internal problems, was only four seats and party spokesmen readily conceded that a major overhaul is needed if the party is to survive.

Energy matters, which have occupied so much of Mr. Lougheed's time since 1971, remained in the forefront. Alberta joined with the governments of Ontario and Canada to pump in funds to save the massive Syncrude Canada Ltd. oil-sands project in northeastern Alberta.

The province, planning for the day when non-renewable energy resources run out, took steps to expand petrochemical and processing industries and appeared to be entering a new stage of co-operation, rather than confrontation with Ottawa on energy.

Mr. Lougheed received a larger mandate in the election than he sought. Stating that he wanted to go to the April energy conference with "the full confidence of the people of Alberta," the premier said he would consider a gain of one seat by 50 as a strong mandate to negotiate higher energy prices.

Under increasing pressure from federal Conservatives to run for the national leadership in 1976, Mr. Lougheed flatly turned down a series of overtures. "I consider myself fully committed to completing the job I was elected to do, in guiding Alberta, as premier, through the difficult transition period of the '70s."

Mr. Lougheed came to widespread national attention in 1973 and 1974 during the often bellicose struggle with Ottawa over oil and natural gas. He fought vigorously to raise prices, saying producers needed incentives to find new supplies, and challenged what he considered to be federal attempts to take control from the province of resources.

The energy conference and subsequent negotiations resulted in oil prices rising to $8 a barrel from $6.50, with federal commitments to eventually move up to international levels. Natural gas climbed to an average wellhead price of 97 cents per thousand cubic feet, a sixfold increase from the prices in existence when the Conservatives took office.

Price increases plus Ottawa's decision to allow exploration companies to deduct on federal income tax part of the royalty payments made to the province brought certainty and "stability" to the resource industry, the premier said.

And instead of the unfriendly spirit of recent years when Alberta temporarily broke off energy talks with Ottawa and secured the federal government's vindication pricing agreements, Mr. Lougheed talked about the two governments "working cooperatively in concert in the best interest of Canadians."

The mood of co-operation was seen when the Syncrude operation ran into financial problems and the three-company consortium threatened to slow construction unless more money was found. Recognizing the urgent need to develop energy sources to fill the gap when conventional supplies are depleted, Ottawa put $700 million into the project, Alberta $200 million and Ontario $100 million.

Proposals for more than 20 petrochemical plants, mostly based in central and southern Alberta and costing billions of dollars were formulated in 1975 as the province announced intentions for a world-scale petrochemical industry.

One of the largest proposals is a $1.5-billion plant in the Red Deer region that would use Alberta natural gas to produce ethylene — the chief ingredient in a wide range of plastic products.

"Instead of continuing to ship gas down the pipeline to Ontario, we will start to process these resources here in Alberta," the premier said. With major petrochemical developments, "our young people will not have to leave the province to find jobs in the future."

Shuts Shop

LUTON, England (CP) — A witchcraft shop owned by Bernie Ratcliffe, 24, was the object of prayers that it would close by Rev. David Rudall and his Bartitt Bible study group. Rudall insists that the prayers helped in closing the shop which was selling books on witchcraft and black magic and was a blot on the town." But Ratcliffe says he finally had found an ideal shop in Whitby after three years of searching.

Salvation Army Spread Westward with Evangelism

Written for CP
By LESLIE K. TARR

"Send more officers over to help us. Disarmament of the Salvation boiling over. The whole Northwest a blaze of salvation."

That crisp, colorful cosmos nique was sent from Winnipeg to Toronto to report The Salvation Army's entry into the Canadian West in 1886. Just four years earlier, the Army had stormed into Canada to commence its red-hot crusade.

From all parts of the country they sent back to headquarters the startling reports. "Two lasses put the devil to flight. Everybody on the march and sound on their knees," was the graphic dispatch from Vancouver in 1887.

By that year, The Salvation Army had spread from coast to coast in an unprecedented five years of whirlwind evangelism.

Although its growth in recent years has not been so spectacular, The Salvation Army still is very much on the march. In 1981, the country showed 16,400 Salvationists. By 1971, that had increased to 18,000. The Army has 302 citadels or congregations across Canada.

As its name suggests, The Salvation Army sees the spiritual life as warfare. When converted, the Christian is to become an active soldier of Christ who wages battle on every front.

Fervently evangelistic, The Salvation Army majored on reaching those outside the church. To the horror of conventional churches, in the early decades, they marched out to win those who never entered the door of a church. A Maritime officer vividly expressed that aim as the Army laid siege to Saint John, N.B.:

"General Booth has sent us out to catch fish on the Halifax Line. When sending us out he did not say, 'Go fish in a Baptist pool and catch a deacon, or a Methodist pool and catch a class leader, or a Presbyterian pool and catch an elder; but go fish in the taverns, theatres, gambling dens and catch some drunkard. That is why The Salvation Army has come to Saint John, and God helping us we shall do it!!"

Most people today recognize and respect the Army's evangelistic fervor. Not so in those early days.

In the first three years in Canada, 669 of its followers were imprisoned. In its first five years, Army meeting places in Montreal, Kingston, Thorold, and London were put to the flames.

Some employers dismissed workers who professed conversion and enrolled in the Army. Irate parents disowned children who took that step.

Doom even has been a constant foe. Again, in October of this year, an international conference of Salvation Army Commissioners and Territorial Commanders released a statement reaffirming that all soldiers were to abstain from alcohol. The battle against alcohol, however, does not consist of a series of lower crusades. Salvation Army Harbor Light centres across Canadian cities have been instrumental in assisting thousands on the road to sobriety. Started in 1883, they express Christian compassion in practical terms.

Such social service is seen at the other side of the coin of evangelism. Ten Salvation Army hospitals in Canada, have nine half-way houses, and homes for unmarried mothers are other expressions of Christian compassion in show relief.

Since its inception, The Salvation Army has been concerned for prisoners. In major Canadian cities, Army officers are assigned to full-time court duty and prison chaplaincy.

Every member of The Salvation Army is expected to be an active soldier for God. In the local corps, he or she will find many service opportunities: community service, Christian education, youth work, band, visitation teams.

Officers of The Salvation Army (the equivalent of ministers) are trained in the two colleges in Toronto and St. John's, Nfld. Men and women work side by side, and married women assume the same rank as their husbands. One woman Evangeline Booth, daughter of the founder, became a general and served as international leader.

A Canadian, General Clarence Wiseman, heads the international Salvation Army. Elected in 1976, he is the first Canadian to reach that rank.

The October world conference at which General Wiseman presided, left no doubt that The Salvation Army was committed to bold evangelism. The conference statement announcing the 1976 "Share Your Faith" campaign stated that it was hoped that the campaign would "commence with renewed consecration of individual Salvationists, and lead to the winning of many for Christ."

You can fairly hear the beat of the drum!

Minister Claims His Own People Are Misunderstood

RICHMOND, B.C. (CP) — Rev. Tom Eldon says his parishioners are widely misunderstood.

The United Church minister with the Aviation Chaplaincy Ministry at Vancouver International Airport where he holds counselling sessions with groups of individuals.

Mr. Eldon said the general public has fantasies about the people who keep the world on the wing 24 hours a day but that reality is one-one repulsion for stewardesses and the staging image of jet pilots just don't fit reality."

"People here have the same problems as other segments of the population," he said.

The public did not realize the sacrifice flight crews made to keep the world flying around the world in safety.

"It's a lonely job which puts great stress on people," Mr. Eldon said. "They are away from home and can't get involved in the community pursuits that the nine-to-five guy can.

"They can't join service clubs, lodges, sports club or anything like that because they are away so often. So they tend to do things like sailing, golf or anything they can do without belonging to an organization.

"After a while there creeps in a feeling of isolation and it takes pretty strong people to cope with it."

Mr. Eldon tries to ease the load and sometimes provides his help with no compensation.

In September, there was some bell tightening so he had to manage without pay.

But the work is still there, he said. "I'm as busy as ever."

Resch Has Islanders Flying

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Goalie Glenn Resch of New York Islanders figures the only way to catch Philadelphia Flyers is to win almost every game you play.

Lately, Resch has been living by that formula. The youngster recorded his second shutout and third win in a row Tuesday as the Islanders blanked Minnesota North Stars 6-0 in a National Hockey League game.

The Islanders couldn't do much else but win those three games. The only goal he has given up was in the first period of a 4-1 win over St. Louis Blues last week.

"We're playing well together," Resch said. "We've got three lines flying and it's good because if we're going to make a run at Philadelphia (the hockey Cup champions) this is the kind of hockey we've got to play.

"We have to get like Philly and lose maybe once in every 10 games."

In Tuesday's other NHL games, Atlanta Flames crushed Washington Capitals 7-1, Kansas City Scouts edged Pittsburgh Penguins 3-2 and Vancouver Canucks dropped St. Louis 5-2.

Resch, who blanked Buffalo Sabres 3-0 on Sunday night, had an easy time with the struggling North Stars, who managed only 22 shots on goal.

"I started out saying I wouldn't allow more than a goal," said Resch. "But as I got nearer and nearer the shutout, I really wanted it."

Bryan Trottier, Clark Gillies, Andre St. Laurent, Lorne Henning and Gary Howatt had a goal each for the Islanders.

Eddie Westfall of the Islanders pulled a muscle in his right biceps in the second period and had to be taken out of the game. The extent of the injury was not known.

Tom Lysiak scored two goals against the Capitals to help the Flames reach the .500 mark for the first time this season. They have 13 wins, 13 losses and two ties.

"It's a lot easier to come home against a team like Washington than against, say, Montreal," said Flames coach Fred Ahern. "We're scoring and that's encouraging."

The Flames returned home after a long road trip in which they won three of four games to improve their record to .500 swap from home while continuing at home with a 5-7-2 mark.

Only 6,177 Kansas City fans were on hand to see Jean-Guy Lagace score a short-handed goal in the third period to give the Scouts their win. Randy Rota and Simon Nolet scored the other Kansas City goals.

Chris Oddleifson scored twice for Vancouver in the second period to give the Canucks late a 4-2 lead. With the win, Vancouver ties the St. Louis Blues for the Smythe Division.

Young Howes Produce

Dad Spectator As Sons Click

By NEIL CAMPBELL
The Canadian Press

Having dad in street clothes seems to be doing wonders for son Mark, who apparently have ended a season-long scoring slump while Gordie sits out a two-game suspension.

Mark came up with his second two-goal game of his hitch — a suspension Tuesday night, sparring Houston Aeros to a 6-4 win over Cincinnati Stingers.

The four goals also doubled this year's goal production for Mark, a 36-goal scorer last year. He now has nine for this year. Even brother Marty, a lowscoring defenseman, chipped in with a goal against the Stingers.

In Tuesday's other games, Minnesota Fighting Saints stopped Toronto Toros 3-2, Calgary Cowboys upset Quebec Nordiques 4-1 and Denver Spurs defeated Cleveland Crusaders 6-3.

Gordie was handed a two game suspension after drawing a game misconduct for protesting too vigorously a high-sticking call against Gordie in a fight game against Winnipeg.

He later admitted using his elbow to punctuate his remarks to referee Bruce Ancelovici. The suspension was the first of Gordie's 20-year career. The one game suspension handed goalie Ron Grahame for another incident in the same game will appear to impair his reflexes against Cincinnati.

The Stingers had an edge in the plays Tuesday because the Aeros's keep the Aeros in the game.

Mark Howe's second goal, with less than five minutes to play broke a 44 tie. Andre Hinse, Rich Preston and Terry Ruskowski were the other Aeros scorers.

Rookie goalie Dave Talarya had another impressive outing for Cincinnati, almost in spite of the Stingers. Coach Bobby Baun said he had the players before the game he felt responsible for the Aeros's success Tuesday night, sparring Houston Aeros to a 6-4 win over Cincinnati Stingers.

Marlies Thrashed by Fincups

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Petes defeated Oshawa Generals 4-2 and London Knights stayed within four points of Hamilton by defeating Kitchener Rangers 7-4. The Knights and the Fincups are scheduled to meet Friday in a game at London.

At Hamilton, Toronto scored first but the Fincups replied with 10 consecutive goals before the Marlboros got their second score late in the third period.

Hamilton's Joe Contini had two goals and four assists. Archie King had two goals and Eric Seiling scored once and assisted on three others before 1,961 spectators.

John Smrke and Cary Parelli scored for the Marlboros who trailed 3-1 after the first period and 7-4 after the second.

There were 13 penalties, including two fighting majors to each team and a game misconduct to Rob Mierkalns of Hamilton.

The Fincups outshot Toronto 35-29.

League play resumes tonight with St. Catharines at Sault Ste. Marie.

In London, Jim MacRae and Rick McIntyre each scored twice to lead the Knights. Other goals went to Yves Sentlund, Dan Eastman and Randy Doyle.

Clay Watts, Kevin Street, Dan Djakiakiov and Red Laurence replied for the Rangers.

London held period leads of 3-1 and 5-3, outshooting the visitors 38-30 before 1,950 spectators.

At Peterborough, the Petes led 1-0 after the first period and scored three goals in the second to lead 4-1 after 40 minutes of play.

Toronto Club Seeks Damages

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Marlboro juniors are seeking damages for the loss of John Tonelli for the final 24 seasons of his contract with the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A League.

In a statement of claim filed with the Supreme Court of Ontario, the Toronto Marlboro Hockey Club is seeking damages from Tonelli, agent Gus Badali, Gus Badali Inc., Houston Aeros and the World Hockey Association.

The Marlboros allege Tonelli breached his contract last season when he signed a three-year contract with the Aeros. The junior club wants compensation for loss of Tonelli's services for services rendered to the player.

If the civil suit succeeds, the club will seek a permanent injunction that will prevent Tonelli from playing professional hockey for the duration of his junior contract without the consent of the Marlboros.

Last week, the Supreme Court of Ontario rejected a Marlboro application for a preliminary injunction to keep Tonelli from playing for Houston.

Moscow Selects Down Voyageurs

HALIFAX (CP) — Moscow Selects came from behind in the third period to defeat Nova Scotia Voyageurs of the American Hockey League 4-2 Tuesday night.

Vladimir Deviatov scored twice for Moscow, and Alexander Kulikov and Vladimir Bednov added singles. Pierre Mondou scored both Nova Scotia goals on power plays.

Nova Scotia fired 42 shots at Moscow goalie Mikhail Vasetsnikov, compared to only 22 shots on Ed Walsh in the Nova Scotia net.

The Voyageurs led 1-0 at the end of the first and 2-1 at the end of the second period. The Selects scored three unanswered goals in the third, including one into an empty net.

It was the first in a series of exhibition games in Canada for the Selects, but the Voyageurs were the only professionals they will meet.

The Selects were heeded up by a number of players from the Russian International team including Alexander Kulikov, chekov, Alexander Filipov, Vladimir Shalamov and Vladimir Vikov and Sergei Kotov.

Campbell Hands Out Suspension

MONTREAL (CP) — Detroit Red Wings goaltender Jim Rutherford was given a four-game suspension Tuesday by president Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League as the result of a match penalty received Monday during a game at Vancouver.

Roberto was given the penalty by referee Bryan Lewis for deliberate injury after he struck Don Levee of the Canucks in the throat with his stick. Campbell suspended Roberto indefinitely after the incident was reported and the right winger missed Detroit's last two games.

To complete the suspension sentence, Roberto will miss the Red Wings' next two games — tonight when Pittsburgh Penguins visit Detroit and Friday night when his team visits Washington.

In addition to losing pay for the game suspension, Rutherford must pay the $200 fine that goes with a match penalty. Alex Delvecchio, chairman of the department is looking into the incident.

Meanwhile, Detroit's last two games.

Baltimore Clips Springfield 4-2

BALTIMORE (AP) — Dennis Giannini scored two goals as Baltimore Clippers defeated Springfield Indians 4-2 in the only American Hockey League game Tuesday night.

The Indians opened the scoring just 1:23 into the game as Murray Saint scored his 11th goal of the season. But Giannini scored for the Clippers one minute later.

Baltimore outshot Springfield 14-4 in the middle period. Springfield goalie Terry Richardson made several outstanding saves, however, limiting the Clippers to one goal in second goal.

Baltimore's Bob Craig got what proved to be the game winner in the third period as Springfield rallied on a goal by Hugh Harvey. The Clippers' Bill Lesuk came with 38 seconds remaining as defenceman Ray Cleavewater slid the puck into an empty net.

Richardson finished with 13 saves while his counterpart, Bob Sneddon, had 24 stops. The win was the record in a row for Baltimore while Springfield suffered its fourth consecutive loss.

The Wanderer Is Back

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association may wind up with five goaltenders if they are able to sign a prodigal Gilles Gratton.

Gratton, who quit St. Louis Blues of the National Hockey League last week, is expected to return to the Toros as soon as he clears waivers in the NHL.

The Toros had released him from a five-year contract at the end of last season to join the Blues after a series of spats with management of the Toronto team.

If they sign him, the Toros will have Mario Viyn, who has been the regular for most of this season, rookie Dave Tataryn and veterans Les Binkley, Jim Shaw, who has been injured.

Tataryn, up from Whitby Warriors of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series on a trial basis, has been playing too well to send back down. He had 26 saves in Tuesday's 3-3 loss to Minnesota North Stars.

Bill Veeck Has Inside Track on White Sox

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Bill Veeck offers $10.5 million for the Chicago White Sox today and American League owners are expected to welcome the onetime P.T. Barnum of baseball back into their exclusive club.

"We've got all the money we need," Veeck said after arriving here shortly after noon the Tuesday night.

Asked if he was confident that the owners will approve his purchase of the team, Veeck said: "I'd be stupid to come all the way down here if I was pessimistic."

The welcome mat wasn't always extended to Veeck, who once shocked the game's conservative owners with his exploding scoreboards, midget batters, bullpen nurseries for children and other stunts.

At the same time that the American League found out that Veeck had met its condition for $1.2 million more in working capital over his previous offer, the National League discussed a $10 million dollar bid for the financially-distressed San Francisco Giants.

And while the leagues tried to settle the future of their franchises, the trading went on. Three deals were concluded Tuesday, bringing to five the number of transactions completed since baseball people began congregating here Saturday.

Cleveland Indians made two trades Tuesday, purchasing catcher Ray Fosse from Oakland A's for an undisclosed sum and sending catcher John Ellis to Texas Rangers for two youngsters, pitcher Stan Thomas and rookie catcher Ron Pruitt.

Last Wednesday Veeck made his bid to regain the White Sox, a team he owned from 1959 through 1980, giving up the franchise for health reasons. The American League owners told him to get another $1.2 million.

Veeck has the additional cash, supplied by W. Clement Stone, the president of combined Insurance Co. of America in Chicago, an associate of Veeck's for the worth $200 million.

As for the Giants, a Beverly Hills, Calif., mortgage banking firm made the latest offer to bail out owner Horace Stoneham, recuperating in San Francisco from a recent operation.

Eric R. Jones, president of the firm, said the Giants had indicated acceptance of the offer — $12 million more than previously dangled by other interests.

On Paper, Analysts Rate as Top Notch Team

The opinion of a Hockey Night In Canada or La Soirée de Hockey analyst is well worth listening to — they speak with a combined experience encompassing literally thousands of goals scored, assists earned and stiff body checks given or received. Except that they lack a goaltender they make an almost unbeatable All-Star team.

On defence HNIC's team would have to make do with Bob Goldham and Babe Pratt — no problem there. While they have nobody in the nets they'd have the puck so often they might not need anybody. If they did they could rely on defenceman Goldham who stopped more pucks than many a goalie in his day.

There are many awards and honors that have been won by HNIC's All-Stars and four of them, Beliveau, Pratt, Moore and Meeker, have already been inducted into hockey's Hall of Fame.

Beliveau has won the Hart trophy as the NHL's Most Valuable Player on two occasions, while Richard and Pratt each won it once.

The Art Ross trophy as the league's leading point-getter went to Moore twice, in 1958 and '59 and to Beliveau in 1964. Richard led the league in goal scoring on five occasions, Beliveau twice and Moore once.

Amazing Meeker was the only Hockey Night In Canada All-Star to win the Calder trophy, awarded to the NHL's top rookie.

Ferguson, who'd be the team's policeman, led the league in penalties in 1966-67 with 177 minutes and Richard held the dubious honor in 1952-53 with 112 minutes.

Beliveau and Richard were almost automatic 1st and 2nd All-Star team selections, while Moore, Pratt, Goldham and Marshall were all chosen at least once.

The colorful and enthusiastic Pratt is Hockey Night In Canada's analyst on all Vancouver home games while the irrepressible Meeker and the quiet-spoken, astute Goldham analyse how things happen in Toronto home games. Beliveau, Richard, Ferguson, Moore, Marshall and Tremblay share in both the English and French language telecasts from Montreal.

They were All-Stars on the ice and now they're doing an all-star job behind the microphones as Hockey Night In Canada's analysts.

Racers Get Oiler For Draft Choice

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indianapolis Racers have acquired right winger Blair McDonald from Edmonton Oilers in exchange for a draft choice, the World Hockey Association team said Tuesday. McDonald, 22, 5-foot-11 and 185 pounds, scored 22 goals in his rookie season with the Oilers last year and 21 in his rookie year. This season he has seven goals and five assists.

WILL BE QUESTIONED

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Tannen, a defensive back for New York Jets, will be questioned by National Football League investigators who are looking into the gambling at rests of the owner of a Gainesville, Fla., boutique in which the player has a minority interest. Tannen is listed as vice-president and director of Tuesday Morning Inc. The owner of the store, Ira Vernon, and five other persons were arrested during the weekend in Florida on charges of "operating an illegal interstate gambling business."

PLAYER BANNED

LONDON (Reuter) — Englan d soccer international Francis Lee of league champion Derby County was banned for four matches and fined $200 by an English Football Association disciplinary commission Tuesday after being found guilty of a charge of bringing the game into disrepute. Norman Hunter of Leeds United, also an England international, was cleared of all blame. Lee and Hunter had fought in a Nov. 1 game.

Lions, Jim's Play Anyway

With their Ontario Minor Hockey Association league games postponed Tuesday, Belleville Jim's Pizzeria Juveniles and Lions Major Midgets put ice time at Memorial Arena to good use, hooking up in an exhibition match.

Three-goal efforts by Ray Skelly and Gord Male led the Juveniles to an 8-4 victory. Tony Bennett and Mark Foster notched singles.

The teams were all even at 3-3 heading for the third period.

In an exhibition contest, the Rollin's Pewees Majors topped Wellington 8-2. Stu Emerson and D'Arcy Moscher scored twice each and Bryson Lamble, Brian Williams, Neil McEwen and Steve Molaski each potted singles.

Price of Popularity

King Clancy, a bit at any affair, paid the price for his popularity Tuesday night at Warkworth where he signed countless autographs following his light-hearted lecture.

Once a King, Always a King

WARKWORTH — The snow Tuesday night was so heavy that visibility was poor and driving was next to impossible. For Frank (King) Clancy, vice-president of the NHL Toronto Maple Leafs, the night meant something special and the 80-mile trip from Toronto to Warkworth in the driving snow was little problem for the occasion — it was the Annual Sports Dinner and awards presentations at Warkworth Institution, which Clancy has attended for several years now as the guest of honour.

"I wouldn't have missed tonight for anything," he said during one of his light-hearted addresses to the gathering of about 140 inmates and guests. "I feel like part of the gang here now."

"But I miss a lot of the faces tonight that I knew a year ago and two years ago," he said, as he mentioned some of the personal acquaintances he had developed with the inmates over the years.

It was also a night for the inmates to remember Clancy, as they presented him with a plaque of recognition for the time he has devoted to them over the years. A similar plaque, given him by the inmates a couple of years ago, still hangs in his office at Maple Leaf Gardens, and he professed pride at the memories it brings as well as the comments he receives from his daily clientele concerning it.

The star of the evening on the inmate's side of the dinner, was Louis Lougree, herald as the institution's all-around superstar. Lougree was long an achievement during the past sports season, and was presented trophies as captain of the winning major league softball team, best major league pitcher in the playoffs, and as the Athlete of the Day at the Summer Olympics held at the institution.

Jack Schrubb, director of the Junior A Peterborough Petes was also present at the dinner, and presented the inmates with tickets to see his hockey club in action.

And Stan Obodiac, public relations director of Maple Leaf Gardens, mentioned that he would be pleased to take Clancy to next year's dinner, should he be available at the time.

"And, God willing," quipped Clancy emphatically, "whether you want me or not, I'll be back too."

More Than Sinuses Clogged in Gas House

Congestion is a key word in winter and Chuckwagon Foods is making sure it applies to the Gas House Hockey League. Tuesday night, the caterers completed the first half of their regular schedule with a 6-3 victory over Jim's Pizzeria to move within one point of first place Bob's Sports.

In other GHHL contests, Bayview Orchards dumped Procter and Gamble 6-1 and Bel-Con Engineering nipped a shorthanded Rollin's Lumber 3-1.

The victory gives Chuckwagon 16 points on eight wins, identical to the pace set by the Yardmen, and just off the mark of Bob's, which has eight wins and a tie in their first 18 games.

Steve Trudeve scored twice for Bayview and added an assist in leading the Orchards' team to their fifth win of the season. Dave Langtell, Wayne Plavelle, Hyalie Bryant and Ken Bertrand scored once each.

Ron McIntyre replied for Procter and Gamble.

Bill Burley and Rob Foster were the marksmen for Bel-Con and Mike Jones tallied the lone goal for Rollins.

Queens Hit Gridiron

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Star says three starting quarterbacks in the National Football League, none identified, are homosexual or bisexual.

The newspaper, in the first of a four-part series on gay athletes, says it conducted interpsychologists and members of the gay community across the United States during the last three months.

The newspaper listed among its findings that:

—"So intense is the anti-gay public pressure that many male athletes who prefer homosexual relationships maintain fronts as married men with children."

—The percentage of male homosexuals in sport probably is close to the same five per cent as in society at large.

—Up to 20 per cent of women athletes, including several tennis and golf stars, are lesbians, compared to five per cent in society at large.

—Gay athletes, male and female, feel that public knowledge of their homosexuality would destroy their playing careers and eliminate any outside income from endorsements or business.

Belleville bowlers Jack Canning and Bea Hunt show the way in the Carling-O'Keefe fivepin bowling rolloff after the first two 10-game legs of the competition.

When the rolloff resumes Sunday at Belleville Bowl-O-Drome, Canning and Hunt will carry comfortable leads into the final 10-game series.

Canning came out of the 10-game set in Trenton, Sunday, with a 20-game total pinfall of 5,475, an average of 273. His total in the first 10 games rolled Novembver 30 at Brunswick Belleville Bowl, was 2,666.

Bea Hunt's 20-game total reads 5,169. She has put together 10-game efforts of 2,600 and 2,500.

Runnerup to Bea in the women's section is Belleville's Marg Rutlan who has a total of 4,904. Madeline Jones, also of Belleville, is third with 4,568.

Passing and Moving the Puck

Aiter putting the emphasis on skating, it's time to devote time to another of hockey's basic skills — PASSING.

A complete player will know how to give and receive a pass properly. Passing the puck involves the same motion used in taking a wrist shot. It's essential not to slap the puck but to sweep it across the ice to the recipient of the pass. Generally, again similar to the wrist shot, when passing you start with the puck slightly behind you and sweep it.

Before you pass the puck, make certain you have your head up and are looking at your target. Keeping your head up is also wise because it removes the possibility of an opponent checking you hard with his body. Many players are hurt because they are hit with solid body checks when they keep their eyes on the puck.

Once all the steps are done and the pass is delivered, make certain it's a nine flat pass — unless you have to flip the puck to avoid an interception or opposing player. It's not safe to make a soft pass because it leads to easy interceptions.

A quick review of passing the puck goes something like this: 1) Keep your head up at all times; 2) Pick your target; 3) Sweep a hard pass to the target like you would taking a wrist shot; 4) Follow the play up ice.

The major problem we find with youngsters is they hold their sticks too hard when receiving a pass. Once the puck hits your stick, cushion the puck by giving with the stick just a little bit. If you don't, the puck will glance off the stick.

The pass receiver should always keep his stick on the ice and offer a target to his teammate. If the pass is flipped into the air, use your glove and bat the puck down to the stick. DON'T try to bat it out of the air.

Bobby Clarke of Philadelphia Flyers is one of the better passers in the NHL which explains one of the reasons he had 89 assists last season. Watch him at work sometimes.

Passing the puck and receiving the pass are easy to practise. In workouts, pick a teammate and skate the length of the ice passing the puck back and forth. Learn to receive and give your passes on your backhand because it too is a valuable skill. Don't forget, keep your head up.

OTTAWA (CP) — Gloucester Rangers went on the most one-sided scoring spree of the Central Junior Hockey League season Tuesday, beating Nepean Raiders 14 1.

It was no contest from the outset as the Rangers outshot the Raiders 45-22 and held 6-0 and 8-1 period leads.

Louis Lorite scored four times and Kevin Benson and Steve Dawe three times each while Mark Campbell, Mario Lortie, Dan Anderson and Junior B Claude Saumure scored single goals.

Billy Neil was the lone scorer for Nepean, which had only 12 players for the game, including two goalies.

Backs Are Vulnerable

WASHINGTON (AP) — Running backs and defensive cornerbacks are the most likely players to be injured in National Football League games, a private study reveals.

The study, done for the NFL by the Stanford Research Institute, also shows that players on offensive teams are injured more than their defensive counterparts.

The study shows that linebackers have a higher injury average injury rate and it says that members of special teams handling kicks sustain more serious injuries in terms of recovery rates than do players on the regular offensive and defensive units.

The study confirms that knees continue to sustain more injuries than any other part of the body. It also says younger and more inexperienced players consistently sustain a higher proportion of injuries.

Toppazzini A Sharp Sabre

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Mark Toppazzini scored four goals and assisted on two to lead Welland Sabres to a 8-6 victory over Niagara Falls Flyers in the only Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League game Tuesday.

Select Committe Approves Amendment for Store Hours

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government's bill to limit Sunday retail operations was approved by a select committee Tuesday with several amendments, including one that the selection process be used earlier some doubts on the legislation's constitutionality.

The doubtful amendment, proposed by the New Democratic Party member of the committee, changed an amendment proposed by Solicitor-General John MacBeth, the bill's sponsor.

Mr. MacBeth proposed a change to allow some leeway for merchants whose religious sabbaths are Saturday.

His measure would have excluded from the bill small stores that have been closed for 12 hours preceding Sunday. They would have to close from 12 p.m. on Friday. The traditional Jewish sabbath is observed from sundown Friday.

However, the NDP amendment inserted the words "for religious reason" as a condition of closing.

Mr. MacBeth said he feels the words might form the basis for a challenge of the measure on a constitutional basis.

He said religious matters traditionally have come under the jurisdiction of the federal government, a tradition upheld by the Supreme Court of Canada.

The minister said he does not want to say outright the change makes the bill ultra vires, or outside the province's jurisdiction.

"But if I were in practice I'd say that clause would give me a place to hang my hat in a court case."

Another NDP amendment removed a clause that would have allowed the cabinet to exempt businesses from the bill by simple regulation.

As it now stands, the bill will force most retail stores to close on Sundays and eight other holidays: New Year's Day; Good Friday; Dominion Day; Labor Day; Christmas Day; Victoria Day; Thanksgiving Day and Boxing Day.

Small stores of less than 2,400 square feet employing three or fewer employees are exempt, as are small stores selling antiques, handicrafts, nursery stocks and flowers, pets and fresh fruit and vegetables in season.

Gasoline stations also are exempt.

The NDP members failed in an attempt to set a minimum fine under the legislation. The maximum fine is set at $10,000.

The bill must go back to the legislature and, if approved there, goes into effect Jan. 1.

Ontario Removes Fortified Wines

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has removed fortified wines from some provincial liquor outlets because of abuses, Sidney Handleman, consumer and commercial relations minister, said Tuesday.

The minister told the legislature that the government is aware of the problem outlined by Jim Foulds (NDP—Port Arthur) who said fortified wines are used in some parts of Ontario as a "cheap good."

Fortified wines are kept under the counter in Kenora liquor outlets and sold to native people who come in for liquor, he said. Such wines have an alcohol content of at least 14 per cent.

Mr. Handleman said fortified wines accounted for 67 per cent of the wine market in 1969. The percentage in 1974 was 38.1 per cent.

The government will monitor the "very delicate situation" raised by Mr. Foulds, the minister said. He said he soon will reveal the areas where stores no longer stock such wines.

The discussion on fortified wines took place during consideration of legislation allowing Ontario wine producers to use grain alcohol as a fortifier instead of higher-priced, foreign sugar.

Mr. Handleman said this legislation would allow Ontario wines to be more competitive with foreign products.

Labor Minister Optimistic Over Talks

TORONTO (CP) — Labor Minister Bette Stephenson said Tuesday she is optimistic that negotiations will resume between labor and management in Ontario's pulp and paper industry.

Dr. Stephenson said in an interview that she met Tuesday with representatives of the Canadian Paperworkers Union and the presidents of three paper companies.

She said the four-hour meeting was useful and she will meet both sides again Saturday.

About 11,000 paperworkers have been on strike since last summer.

Last week, the legislature suspended regular business to discuss the issue which is damaging to communities where paper mills represent the main employer.

The minister said she is optimistic that progress can be made to settle the strike.

Fan Arrested

BRENTFORD, England (CP) — Town chairman Dan Tana says he arrested a Watford fan recently for chanting obscenities during a sporting event. Tana said he felt embarrassed for his wife, children and guests as he went into the crowd and told the man concerned that he was applying citizen's arrest. The police subsequently took the fan away. Tana says he wants the public to know that Brentford directors will not stand this sort of language.

Lovers Hit

LONDON (CP) — Two sweethearts were run over recently as they lay making love in the northwest suburbs of this city. They were knocked unconscious but recovered. The motorist was fined $200 for drunk driving and banned from driving for a year.

Cottagers Take Education Board To Court Over Ban on Students

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for an Ontario cottagers' group said Tuesday it is planning to take the Simcoe County board of education to court over its decision to bar Metropolitan Toronto students who want to go to school in the county.

More than 85 students have asked to attend Simcoe schools during the Metro high school teachers' strike, while living at their parents' cottages.

Gordon McWhinney, president of the Federation of Ontario Cottagers Association, said in an interview that cottage owners pay education taxes and should be allowed to send their children to the schools they help pay for.

John Gillies, information officer for the ministry of education, said the board must accept the students if the parents are paying taxes.

Jack Ramsay, director of education for Simcoe County, said the issue never has been tested and "we're not sure if it's illegal. That's a question for the courts to decide."

Meanwhile, negotiators for 8,000 striking Metropolitan Toronto high school teachers were asked Tuesday to consider changes in the "shaping of their proposal as well as the number." said Montreal lawyer Stanley Hartt, one of the three mediators.

Mr. Hartt said the shaping of the proposal might include length of contract, dates when pay raises would become effective and what salary classifications would receive greater or lesser increases.

Another mediator, William Dickie, Ontario's assistant deputy minister of labor, said a settlement might be reached this week. The strike, which has disrupted classes for 140,000 students, enters its 21st teaching day today.

Teachers have rejected the school board's offer of a 29.3-per-cent salary increase and have requested a 41.9-per-cent increase over two years, a full cost-of-living increase and a $750 lump sum payment. The federal anti-inflation board has ruled that the school board's offer was excessive.

On Monday, George Tetley, chairman of the Metropolitan Toronto school board, said Monday that the board will not make transfer payments to other districts which accept Toronto students during the strike.

Infrequent Reports Hurt Big-game Management

KENTVILLE, N.S. (CP)—The simple act of not reporting a legitimate kill may have far reaching effects on wildlife populations, says a big-game biologist with the provincial government.

Art Patton has nothing but criticism for hunters who have not taken more interest in the wildlife resource they hunt annually.

"A discouragingly low 24 per cent of the 1974 deer hunters cared enough about their hunting" to return a card reporting their kill, says Mr. Patton, and this makes him an angry man.

"With 76-per-cent disinterest among those directly involved in the consumptive use of our wildlife resources, it seems probable that anti-hunting groups, joining forces with those having vested interests in developing valuable wildlife habitat for other uses, could in the near future so alter the Nova Scotia environment that wildlife management, wildlife and hunting would be left space only in history books."

The game biologist and his colleagues consider data provided on the report cards by hunters as important and even essential in their research involving wildlife.

Mr. Patton says that if only one-quarter of the hunters are interested enough in the resource to provide the data, then the knowledge will only be one-quarter as great and the management based on it one-quarter as valid as it should be.

If this is to be the attitude of the hunter, says the biologist, then the resource, the hunter and his fellow man would be "better off if he spent his licence fee money on an evening of bowling instead."

Mr. Patton stressed that the knowledge and the needs of the wildlife resource can only be obtained through the gathering and study of facts about a wide variety of aspects of the animals involved.

The management, therefore, was only as good as the quantity and quality of these facts, and a major source of the facts was the hunter.

Hunters had access to more information concerning a greater number of animals than was available anywhere else, and their data brought together in one single compilation could be the single greatest volume of knowledge available on a given population.

Device Bugs

NEW YORK (AP) — Fleet Owner magazine says that an air-ground electronic system is expected to be locating and tracking stolen trucks and freight within a year. The device which is the size of two cigarette packs laid end to end, is effective over a 50-mile range and works as long as it is not completely surrounded by metal. Key areas of use will include valuable items such as furs, television sets and appliances.

Agriculture Aided

BUDAPEST (AP) — Hungary has signed a long-term credit agreement to provide North Vietnam with aid and equipment to improve communications and agriculture, the Hungarian news agency MTI says.

Almost Fired

SOFIA (CP) — Police dog Tchoko was almost retired from duty when he lost four teeth while trying to stop a car in which a suspect was escaping. But now he is back on duty in the Bulgarian capital with four chromium-cobalt teeth made specially for him by a leading dental laboratory.

Beginners Play

NEW YORK (AP) — Thirty-four rookies gained starting positions in the National Football League this season among 208 first-year players. Among the starters this fall was Atlanta's quarterback Steve Bartkowski, the NFL number one draft choice.

Company May Appeal

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — Attorneys for Reserve Mining Co. are expected to appeal a judge's order that they pay $100,000 toward emergency water filtration facilities. The order was issued when the court determined the company was responsible for discharge of taconite tailings found in the water supply of six cities on Lake Superior.

Judge Convinced

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (AP) — Paul Vanderklaat charged with speeding, argued that the limited air that powered a thunderstorm affects a speed radar unit. He said a thunderstorm struck in the area 15 minutes after he received the ticket. Municipal Judge Raymond F. Hunter said that static electricity in the air could bend the otherwise straight radar beam and result in a false reading. He found Vanderklaat innocent.

Detecting Lies

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Lie detector tests are being used by some businesses here to help screen job applicants. Small businessmen are using the test because of being hurt by employee thefts, Mel Cheney, operator of a lie detector company, said his clients are with service stations, janitorial services, convenience stores, truck stops, restaurants, inventory services and liquor stores.

Death Defined

CHICAGO (AP) — Illinois new law defining death says it is "the irreversible cessation of total brain function according to the usual and customary standards of medicine." The Association of Illinois Transplant Surgeons supported the bill. Dr. Frank P. Stuart, chairman of the association, said that some physicians feared lawsuits if they discontinued ventilatory support even for a patient whose brain was totally dead.

Be Wary of Telephone Solicitations Warn OPP

Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) advise residents to be wary of telephone solicitations for funds and donations for needy people at Christmas.

In a news release issued Tuesday, Chief Insp. Fred R. Blucher, OPP community services branch director, said the OPP anti-rackets branch is deluged with enquiries from citizens "in regard to previous — wide telephone solicitations for funds or requests for donations to various charities."

"With the Christmas season approaching, the main solicitation now is for Christmas parties for the needy or handicapped children," he noted.

"Solicitors are requesting funds from the public for advertising in Christmas party programs or for the purchase of tickets that are in be given to the underprivileged or handicapped children," he elaborated.

Insp. Blucher commented although "participation in these schemes must be by individual choice — a very small portion of the gross collections ever go any further than the fund raiser's pocket."

Driver Faces Charge After Friday Mishap

GLEN MILLER — Campbell Gilchrist, 26, of 11 King St. in Frankford is charged with careless driving in connection with a one-car accident late Friday on Highway 33, ¼ mile north of this hamlet.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville released complete details of the mishap Tuesday which sent Gilchrist and two of his three passengers to Trenton Memorial Hospital where they are listed in satisfactory condition with assorted injuries. The third passenger was treated and released for minor injuries.

Police say a 1975 — model Chevrolet Chevelle was southbound when it failed to negotiate a left-hand curve, crossed the west shoulder and struck two telephone poles, two trees and a guidepost in its flight.

Constable Garnet Brown estimated $4,000 damage to the car, $400 damage to the poles and $15 damage to the guidepost in the 11 p.m. accident.

Murray Has Best Corps

Trenton's Murray Centennial Majorettes were awarded best majorette corps in the parade following the Santa Claus Parade in Picton Saturday.

The 36-member corps was incorrectly named in the parade committee's prize list as the Trenton Majorette Corps.

Louisville Bus Drivers Still Uneasy Over Busing

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (CP) — A heavy rain pelted out of the early morning darkness, gusting winds scattered the sodden autumn leaves across the glistening pavement and bus driver Nancy Simpson was uneasy.

Not terrified, not terribly troubled, she said. Just nervous.

Nancy Simpson is one of dozens of drivers who operate the buses in Louisville and surrounding Jefferson County which carry youngsters to schools and distribute them in ways intended to create a racial balance in classrooms.

"Desegregation the court calls it. Child crueltv is what it really is," says Mrs. Simpson, gliding her bus along the twisting streets of a gracious subdivision, making the first pickup shortly after 6 a.m.

When the schools opened in September and court-ordered busing on a large scale came to Louisville for the first time, the city became, along with Boston, a hotbed of rioting, fighting and angry protest.

It's calmer now but the tensions remain. They were more evident than usual on Mrs. Simpson's Monday morning run.

The previous Friday a vicious fight had broken out at Sallie Phillips Durrett high school between a small group of white students and several blacks and quickly spread to engulf more than 100 youngsters.

Mrs. Simpson, her bus full, now was driving to Durrett to deposit her white passengers, where they would later transfer to another bus for a 15-mile drive to one of the city's predominantly black slums for classes.

"Once there's been a flareup like this, everybody gets disturbed," she said, "because there's always a real danger the thing will explode again.

"I'm mostly worried about the kids but the drivers are in a bad spot, too. For a while we had armed guards on the buses because we were being stoned, shot at and forced off the road. We've cursed out as traitors and I sure don't want to spread it around my (white) neighborhood that I'm a driver. It doesn't make you any friends."

Debbie Hall, a white 14-year-old, said that out of six friends she usually meets here before being bused out to another school, only two have turned up today.

"It's the same all over," she says and the bus drivers nod their agreement. "Some kids are really scared to come out, some pretend they're afraid just to get the day off and there are still some white kids (authorities say less than 10 per cent of the total) whose parents won't let them go to school as long as there's busing."

Debbie says Friday's fight was vicious. "I just stood and watched but I saw enough to know the newspapers didn't report hardly any of it. Kids had knives and hatpins and I even saw one with a can opener."

On the 15-mile trip from Duval junior high to Durrett, 15-year-old Teddy Jones, a black ninth-grader, alternated between dozing and working frantically to finish some homework.

"I don't quite know about busing," he says. "I got a good school now, good teachers—well, some of them and a good cafeteria.

"But how would you like to get up at five o'clock every day? How would you like that? And the bus was fun at first but, wow, it gets pretty tiresome. Still I've made some friends. I like a few of the white kids I've met . . ."

"And one of them is his girl," yelled a giggling 14-year-old black girl across the aisle.

Then becoming deadly serious, Sandra Wilson remarked: "But it isn't going to work. Busing. It just isn't going to work because the grown-ups don't want it to work. If they'd leave us alone I think maybe we'd be able to get along. But they won't."

All over this sprawling city, the grown-ups, mainly the white ones, have made unmistakeably clear their determination to see that forced busing fails.

In the windows of garages, hardware stores, saloons, drug stores and homes are signs saying: "We oppose school busing."

Wilma Jones is a middle-aged white woman who describes herself as "an inactive member" of the racist Ku Klux Klan and an active participant in concerned citizens, the leading anti-busing organization in the city.

"We haven't even started to fight," she says. "We won't be told how to rear our children by some idiot in Washington who can afford to send his kids to a white private school. Just look around you, you'll see even the gas stations won't service the school buses. That's how much support busing has."

Raise Limited

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — The board of directors of the Perth County Children's Aid Society has limited staff pay increases to 10 per cent this year, in keeping with the federal wage guidelines. The society workers will not receive any added benefits this year but have been given an increase of two cents a mile in their expenses. The board has set a 1976 budget of $496,174.

Learn By Writing

SASKATOON (CP) — The first correspondence course in nursing to be offered at a Canadian university will start in January. The course, a half-class in preventive health care, was prepared in the college of nursing at University of Saskatchewan and will be given through the university's department of correspondence courses.

EDMONTON (CP) — Lt.-Gov. Ralph Steinhauer and his wife Isobel were among 48 Albertans invested into the Order of St. John on Nov. 29. The lieutenant-governor was admitted into the sovereign order with the grade of knight and his wife an officer sister.

Toronto Reduces Rinks

TORONTO (CP) — The city executive decided Tuesday to reduce the number of outdoor skating rinks this year to 28 pleasure rinks and 21 hockey rinks from 143 natural rinks last winter.

City council, which recommended that funds be made available for rinks at all of last year's locations at the request of local residents, was to vote on the item today.

Launches Program

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Transit Commission approved a $79,300-a-year program Tuesday to help employees with personal problems, including alcoholism.

Commissioner Karl Majlette said the plan was paternalistic and there already are cases where the union and supervisors allow men out on runs when they have been drinking.

Commission chairman Gordon Hurlburt said drinking during working hours is grounds for firing drivers. He said the ban has been enforced.

Denmark Objects

BRUSSELS (CP) — The European Economic Community (EEC) gave the stamp of approval Tuesday night to a contractual link with Canada, despite a point of objection raised by Denmark.

A Canadian spokesman said the Common Market commission of ministers approved the idea in principle and instructed an EEC committee to iron out Danish objections.

Reserves Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reserves of industrialized countries increased by $2.7 billion during October, the International Monetary Fund reported Tuesday. The December issue of the fund's monthly publication said total international reserves of industrial countries rose to $121.3 billion at the end of October from $118.6 billion at the end of September.

Demands Answer

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis asked in the legislature Tuesday why minutes of meetings of Crown corporations such as the Ontario Housing Corporation (OHC) are kept secret.

Reports Loss

MONTREAL (CP) — Reader's Digest Association (Canada) Ltd. has reported an unaudited net loss of $35,654 or 3.7 cents a share for the quarter ending Sept. 30, compared to net income of $287,607 or 29.8 cents a share in the same period last year. The company said sales revenue improved by about $212,000, but increased operating costs of about $967,000 more than offset the gain.

Seeks Aid

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Independent Business and the Canadian Feed Manufacturers Association added themselves Tuesday to a growing list or organizations seeking federal financial assistance for metric conversion.

Trade Goes Up

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Trade between Canada and Japan has increased to 10 times the level it was 10 years ago, M. H. Miki, president of Nissan Automobile Co. (Canada) Ltd., said Monday. He said that in 1975, the estimated volume of Canadian export to and import from Japan will make his country Canada's second-largest trading partner. Canada does more trading with the U.S.

Delays Action

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's proposed home warranty program will not be introduced until spring, Sidney Handleman, minister of consumer and commercial relations, said Tuesday. He said the delay is necessary because of the shortness of the current legislature session. He also said the province is waiting to see whether Ottawa brings in a home warranty program.

Urges Celling

TORONTO (CP) — The Liberal minority on a committee studying Ontario Hydro says Jan. 1 Hydro rate increases should be limited to 10 per cent. The NDP and Conservatives on the committee argue that an increase of 22 per cent in the wholesale or bulk rate for Hydro is necessary to protect the utility's financial integrity. Ontario Hydro had asked for a 25-per-cent increase. A report containing the committee's recommendations was to have gone to the legislature Tuesday but will be delayed to allow Liberal committee members more time to discuss it.

No Admittance

OTTAWA (CP) — The Progressive Conservative external affairs critic said Tuesday members of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) should not be admitted to Canada unless their leader renounces terrorism and accepts the existance of the state of Israel.

No Pretext

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday that federal wage-and-price guides should not serve as a pretext for avoiding collective bargaining in the pulp and paper industry.

Sets Fee

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — It will cost a $500 licence fee to operate a body-rub parlor here in 1975, city council has decided. Council decided Monday to impose the fee under new Ontario legislation giving municipalities control over the business.

Use of French Causes Commons Disturbance

OTTAWA (CP) — The sixth morning dispute over use of French in Quebec airspace erupted again in the Commons Tuesday with the government under attack from its own supporters.

Pierre De Bane, Liberal MP for Matane challenged in the Commons Transport minister Otto Lang's explanation for the suspension of two Montreal air traffic controllers and later promised to fight until greater use of French is permitted.

Several other Quebec Social Credit and Liberal MPs joined Mr. De Bane in tough questioning of Mr. Lang on the suspension.

Loblaws Price Freeze is actually a self-imposed price ceiling on all products covered by the Price - Freeze program. Where cost decreases are received from our suppliers Loblaws will continue to pass these decreases through to our customers.

Price - Freeze books listing prices in effect as of Friday, November 21st, 1975 are posted in all Loblaws stores at the courtesy desk to enable you to check the actual Freeze Ceiling Price.

Loblaws will continue to offer weekly advertised specials as usual during the 60 day Price - Freeze Period — on food, non-food and general merchandise, as well as meat and produce.

Following the effective period of time for all advertised specials as indicated in our advertisements, these prices will be returned to a level not higher at which they were frozen on November 21st. - excluding fresh meat and produce, which remain subject to normal market fluctuations.

Air Canada Challenges Parts of Estey Report

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada is "not necessarily in agreement" with all the conclusions of the Estey report released in the House of Commons Monday, the airline's acting chairman, Pierre Taschereau, said in a news release Tuesday.

The report, prepared by Chief Justice Willard Estey of the Ontario Supreme Court, said the publicly-owned airline acted with "unequal disregard" of its ordinary rules of business" in some financial dealings. It also was critical of several top executives.

Mr. Taschereau said the airline's board of directors would give "the most careful consideration" to recommendations which fall within its jurisdiction.

He said criticisms in the report "involve only isolated instances of personal judgment and faulty managerial communications," adding that these should be viewed in "the total context of the airline's administration."

Mr. Taschereau said the inquiry "found no evidence whatsoever of personal dishonesty or any criminal action on the part of any Air Canada employee."

He was named temporary replacement for Yves Pratte who resigned from his position as chairman and chief executive officer two weeks ago because of what he called a lack of support for Air Canada management by the federal government.

Guideline Bill Gets Approval in Principle

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's anti-inflation bill cleared two parliamentary hurdles Tuesday when it received approval in principle in the Senate and then was approved by the Senate banking committee.

Final-reading third-reading debate in the Senate begins today on the legislation establishing the program of selective wage and price controls.

After third - reading approval, the bill needs only royal assent to become law.

In approving the bill, the banking committee defeated an amendment which would have banished the Senate in a Commons review of the program after 18 months.

Several committee members expressed anger that Senate approval is not required in the review provision. The program would be terminated if the Commons approved a motion to end it.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said he agreed Senate approval should have been required and said such a provision would be included in future legislation

However, he asked the senators not to amend the bill, thus sending it back to the Commons and delaying full implementation of the anti-inflation program.

Earlier, Mr. Macdonald told the committee that employees who normally get Christmas bonuses won't be restricted by the program.

Lawyer Argues No Need To Disqualify Crowe

OTTAWA (CP) — A lawyer for the National Energy Board argued Tuesday that a previous affiliation by board chairman Marshall Crowe with a pipeline company should not disqualify him from taking part in current hearings on a northern pipeline.

Hyman Soloway told the Federal Court that under a section of legislation which set up the board, Mr. Crowe is required to gather information on such energy projects as a northern natural gas pipeline.

The fact he obtained the information as a director of one or two companies competing for the right to build the pipeline should not prevent him from ruling in the case.

The question the court faces is whether, as a result of his past association, Mr. Crowe would not be able to judge the pipeline hearing in "a fair and unprejudiced" manner, he said.

The case involves a challenge to Mr. Crowe's participation by three public interest groups on the basis that his previous affiliations make him biased towards the need for a pipeline and towards one of the two pipeline proposals.

Mr. Crowe was a director of Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd. from 1972 to 1973, representing the Crown-owned Canada Development Corp., of which he was president.

Both Arctic Gas and its rival, Foothills Pipeline Ltd., say they have no objection to Mr. Crowe heading the board panel hearing the case.

Canadian Arctic Resources Committee—one of the three public interest groups—also argued in its brief to the court that Mr. Crowe might be biased because of his involvement in pipeline planning while he was deputy secretary to the federal cabinet.

Papers Need Pertim

TORONTO (CP) — Scarborough Board of Control has recommended that newspapers here be required to have permits and pay a fee for placing boxes on borough road allowances. Marlow Newby, Toronto Star's circulation administration manager, says the company agrees in principle to a fee provided if it is reasonable. Another city borough charges newspapers $150 a year regardless of the number of vending boxes they have.

CITY OF BELLEVILLE — LOCAL IMPROVEMENT NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE THAT:

1. The Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville intends to construct as a local improvement the following storm sewer and asphalt road, complete with curb and gutters, and intends to specially assess a part of the cost upon the land abutting the work and the balance against the Corporation at large as follows:

STREET	FROM	TO	ESTIMATED COST	CORPORATION'S SHARE	OWNER'S SHARE	ESTIMATED COST PER FOOT FRONTAGE	ESTIMATED ANNUAL COST PER FOOT FRONTAGE
Sidney Street	Tracey Street	Approx 570 feet north of the north street line of Bell Boulevard	$304,584.86	$226,069.72	$78,515.14	$24.98	$4.24

50 ft. x $24.98 — $1,249.00
If paid over a period of 10 years at 11% per annum, the annual cost would be:
50 ft. x $4.24 — $212.00.

2. The Special Assessment is to be paid in 10 annual instalments.
3. Application will be made by the Corporation to the Ontario Municipal Board for its approval of the undertaking of the said work and any owner may, within 21 days after the first publication of the Notice, file with the Clerk of the municipality his objection to the said work being undertaken.
4. The said Board may approve the said work being undertaken, but before doing so may appoint a time and place when any objection to the said work will be considered.

MEMO FROM HELEN GAGEN
THE TURKEY STORY, 1975

Turkey is a Christmas-dinner must in the majority of Canadian homes. So you'll want to know the facts about availability and price this year.

It's expected that there will be an adequate supply of both Grade A and Grade B turkeys. But because prices are higher than last year you might consider buying a smaller bird this year, and make it go further by using a satisfying sausage or chestnut stuffing. Or try a Grade B instead of Grade A. You'll find Grade B turkeys when properly basted, excellent in flavour, nutritious and tender.

Before making a decision, remember that larger birds provide more meat per pound than smaller ones. If you opt for a large turkey, see that every last bit of it is used in imaginative leftovers - down to and including the bones in soup.

Oddities in the News

Santa's Helpers Replaced

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States government Santa Claus, who incurred the wrath of women bikers last year when he put two mini-skirted volunteers to work collecting money for the poor, is back at his post.

But this time, he is accompanied by Mrs. Claus, clad in a floor-length ensemble.

"I volunteered," said Lee Roberts. "I knew Santa had had trouble last year." With a wink, she asked to be addressed as Ms.

The Santa roaming the halls of the department of health, education and welfare collecting donations is her husband, Russ, of Roberta.

PARIS (AP) — George Marchais, French Communist party leader, said on nationwide television Tuesday that French Communists will "never agree to decisions concerning . . . the future of our people and our country being made elsewhere than in Moscow."

He hastily corrected himself with ". . . in Paris."

FORTALEZA, Brazil (AP) — Cosmo Vidal da Silva, 22, and Hozena Barroso Lima, 71, were married Tuesday in this northern port city.

"I am absolutely certain Cosmo is not marrying me to gain anything; I am retired and earn little," said the bride, a great-grandmother twice widowed.

The groom said: "I am marrying Hozena because I love her, because I haven't met anyone as good as she. I will be glad to have any children she can give me."

Library May Charge For Use of Gallery

Olive Delaney, head librarian at Corby Public Library, has proposed the library's board of directors investigate the possibility of requesting a commission on future money-making arts shows in its galleries.

Miss Delaney said at a board meeting Tuesday a small charge would cover expenses of operating the gallery.

The Belleville Biennial Art Show, organized by Dave Brockelsby, now is under way in the library's upper and lower galleries.

Mr. Brockelsby said Tuesday he had previously arranged to receive a 20-per-cent commission from the artists on any art work sold as a result of the exhibition.

He said this agreement was made with artists before the show last Thursday.

The show, which includes works by international artists opened to the public amidst protests from five Quinte area potters and one Belleville artist who eventually withdrew their work due to what they termed poor display.

Mr. Brockelsby said he had underestimated the amount of work involved in organizing a show of this calibre.

He said the intent behind all art exhibitions is to sell the work. Mr. Brockelsby said he has invested $850 of his own money to organize the show. His original budget was set at $300.

Scottish Review Worth Battling Snowstorm

By EUGENE LANG

In nearly three decades of attending musical functions in Belleville and area Mother Nature's strongest offspring, the weather, has never prevented this reviewer from being on time for the opening curtain. But Tuesday the strong grip of Winter and a dead battery won. Results in brief, the Belleville Collegiate Institute auditorium was finally reached at intermission.

What did meet the eyes was a fairly good-sized crowd who were present to see and hear Scotland on Parade, a group of extremely talented young performers who are just finishing their second transcontinental tour of Canada and the U.S.A.

Once getting settled in the brittle hard seat of rearing twenty vintage, the storm was soon forgotten due to the colorful dancing and colloquial singing of our friends from the land of the thistle and the heather. The ethnic sounds of Scotch music is different from that of any other land and has an intrigue of aural reception that only those from the Celtic country can truly reveal. And reveal they did in the various numbers, whether it be the unforgettable line of Robbie Burns, either in gladness or sadness, or the updated ditties that were spliced in with spicy tanginess.

The intricate sword dance brought out the traditional aspect while the bouncy reels gave flavor to the rural side of Scottish life. The pacing was quick, the patter by Host Alastair McDonald bucolic, and the singing by soloists and ensembles most pleasing in Gaelic utterances. And those pipers — tingling.

All in all an excellent evening of enjoyable entertainment.

Board Starts Gallery Committee

The Art Gallery committee has been re-activated at Corby Public Library.

Originally, the committee was organized to submit recommendations to the library board about cultural events after meetings scheduled to take place twice a year.

The committee folded when the Delaney wing was added to the main building of the library moving the art gallery to the top floor from the basement.

Its renewed committee will consist of an art education representative and representatives from the Belleville Art Association, Visual Arts Committee, professional and craftsmen groups and members of the library board.

Head librarian Olive Delaney said the move is a-lein with cultural groups in Belleville.

The committee is scheduled to meet early next year.

Positive TB Tests Need Follow-up

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Recently my husband and I took a series of skin tests. Among them was a TB skin test. This was the first experience for either of us with this test, and we both reacted positively.

Now we wonder if we should have chest X-rays. We have been told it is unnecessary.

We wonder if you would agree with this in a case like ours.— Mrs. M.R.S.

I believe an x-ray of the chest should be done, not only because of the positive TB skin test reaction, but because it could reveal other problems that can occur at your age.

It is not unusual for oldsters to produce a positive skin test. Such results mean only that your system has at some time in the past been invaded by the TB germ. It does not necessarily mean you have or ever had active tuberculosis.

A follow-up x-ray is a prudent precaution both you and your husband should take.

It's been found that while a sizable percentage of the adult population reacts positively tests, especially in concerned urban areas) a relatively small segment has the active disease. TB statistics represent one of our stories. In 1900 the death rate was on the order of 200 for each 100,000 of population. The latest statistics show it has fallen to less than 3 deaths per 100,000.

Incidentally, if there was a sputum examination made in the course of the series of tests you and your husband had, this might have included one for the presence of the disease germs in sputum. Check on this, but ask your doctor to have an x-ray taken, just to be on the safe side.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a freshman (a boy) in high school, and I want to become a doctor. Although my height (5 feet) is not pertaining to my health, I (hopefully) hope that you could give me some advice.

I have read many books on doctors and their roles in society. I have considered being a volunteer in a local hospital, but I don't think they would accept me. I'm 14. What should I do?—N.T.

Don't let most of the hospital volunteer programs are more or less female oriented, although I can see no reason why an interested young man like yourself should be barred from any such program.

There are some programs geared to teenage volunteer work, and you'd have to check with your local hospitals to see if they have any. Age limits do vary, but your age may work against you, so you may have to bide your time in this.

Meanwhile, you should keep your nose in your school books, and tailor your academic program toward the biological sciences. You should also be prepared for a long and somewhat unrelenting academic course followed by a period of internship, adding up to from seven to ten years in all after high school.

I think that your ambition is commendable one, and I hope you fulfill it.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am facing surgery for eye cataracts. Please tell me why this operation does not leave a person close blind.—C.R.

Well, the fact is that without the eye glasses such a person would be "almost blind" for details, although he could see light. Where the cataracts form is in the lenses of eyes, which is why vision becomes so bad and gradually diminishes to nothing. Without the cataract operation you would be practically blind beyond the help of any artificial lenses. With the operation, eyeglasses or contact lenses, good vision is possible.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have what has been diagnosed as a hammer toe. It is on the toe next to my great toe. I've been told surgery may be needed if there any other method of treatment you can tell me about?—Mrs. R.W.

Hammer toe usually involves the second toe (the one next to the great toe), as in your case. The toe is flexed downward at the joint acquires a humped appearance, making it difficult to find comfort for a cramped toe.

You can be born with it or it can result from the wearing of shoes that are too tight, footwear that forces the fleing mentioned above can result in hammer toe.

If treated early the deformity can be corrected, either through use of proper shoes or through manipulative therapy. There are special splints that have been helpful in such therapy, the good footwear to undue the affected toe.

In advance cases surgery can loosen the toe joint. Amputation is not needed in most cases, and it would be an after-effect. There may be a need for minor adjustments in walking for the first week or so after surgery.

Whether surgery is the answer for you will depend on factors you do not go into in your letter. Your physician could better judge whether any of the other treatments would be effective for you.

Opening lead—♠ 5

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Back in the late '30s, Walter Herbert, the conductor of the New Orleans symphony and a fine bridge player, proposed the Herbert convention. It was hands such as the one one shown by that gave Walter his idea. South opens two hearts and North makes the bust response of two notrump.

If South jumps to four hearts and West does not open a spade, South will be held to six tricks. He will score his honors in rubber bridge. If South raises to three notrump he will be sure of his contract if East holds the ace of spades. If some other suit is led, or if the defence can't take five spade tricks. But the way the cards lie, East leads a spade and three notrumps goes down.

The Herbert convention provides that the next suit is the negative response to a strong two bid. North bids two spades and South can bid three notrump and make it against any lead.

If you do play strong two bids and want to improve your results a little, you can adopt the convention. However, you had better make sure that you don't forget it.

Ask the Jacobys

An Ohio reader wants to know about the penalty for down four tricks doubled when the vulnerability is.

It is 700, consisting of 100 for the first trick and 200 for each subsequent trick.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: We are planning our first trip to Florida's west coast and would like a brief description of the main resort areas and average cost of a return trip by car.

Mrs. Gordon Kingston, Ontario.

ANSWER: Depends on the higher price of gas the return trip for an average family car will cost from $120-$150 for fuel alone. All U.S. highways are free, but toll-road expressways have a 55 mile-an-hour speed limit. It will probably take you three or four days to reach the Florida west coast. Tampa Bay is driving 500 miles a day which is the maximum that most people can handle bills for a returning trip will run about $100.00. The cost of your meals will depend on your eating habits. You could pack a lunch for the first day which will save some money. If you have been eating in restaurants before you'll know how expensive food is. When you get to Florida it is wise to get an efficiency unit at your motel. It doesn't cost much more and it will save you from getting up early every morning and lining up for breakfast as well as for dinner. Most are very simple to prepare in Florida because of their fresh fruit and vegetables. In most food plans they have enough for meals for two which enter to the thousands of retired citizens that flock there every winter.

Ormond and Daytona Beach are the first large resorts you'll arrive at on the east coast of Florida. The beach is 23 miles long, 500 feet wide and made up of gleaming white sand and every inch of it is free to the public. There are over 300 motels near the beach, many with efficiency units, where you can cook your own meals. Also there are lovely shopping plazas nearby. Marineland is just 35 miles north of Daytona Beach which has six daily performances of porpoises and whales. This is located on the ocean highway A1A and is very enjoyable. Open daily 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Stock car races, dog races, the alligator dancing, shuffleboard water skiing, swimming, and fishing provide lots of entertainment in Ormond and Daytona Beach. You'll find great pleasure and exercise just walking for miles along this beautiful ocean beach.

Fort Lauderdale is 120 miles south of Daytona and the temperature, and ocean is much warmer. This also has a beautiful six mile stretch of public beach and more miles of canals than Venice. There are very expensive and also very reasonable motels and hotels of all popular resort. Boating is a way of life here. Some 15,000 motels, yachts and 10,000 more boats visit each year, using the inland coastal Waterway from the north. Fort Lauderdale has the second most populous Jetlife, next to Miami Beach, among the east coast resorts, and it is only 25 miles north of Miami Beach making the attractions there readily available.

Miami Beach is a narrow strip of sand jutting into the ocean with Biscayne Bay on one side and the Atlantic ocean on the other. There is an awesome array of glitzing high-rise hotels and condominiums towering over the beaches. This is a before resort where many wealthy holidayers vacation and is not suitable in the winter for anyone on a budget. It attracts over 2 million tourists annually and is definitely no place to escape humanity. It offers excellent shopping, horse racing by day and dog racing at night and a large array of other attractions. Nearby is the Seaquarium, Monkey Jungle, Parrot Jungle Gardens and Hialeah Park which is one of the world's most beautiful horseracing tracks. Noted for its rare coconut palms and formal gardens. Many tropical birds, including 400 flamingoes, may be seen on the park lake. Thoroughbred racing is held from January through mid-March. The Park is open daily 9:30 to 5 p.m. Crandon Park on Key Biscayne is 1,000 acres of tropical spendor. It's 25 miles public beach is like an ocean swimming. It also has tennis facilities and a 25 acre zoo. Hotels on the ocean range from $25 a day and more in the winter but you can get this expensive accommodation a short walk from the beach. There are many big-name motel chains which will cost about $20.00 for a night's stay. Key West, the great asset is that Miami Beach has the warmest temperature and water in Florida. The most expensive hotels are in Fort Lauderdale and Miami is after the first of April when rates are cut drastically. Drive along the highway A1A which is the ocean highway along the coast, for all the above places.

Macdonell Argues Spending In Shambles

OTTAWA (CP) — Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell said Monday the federal treasury board is doing an inadequate job in monitoring government spending with the result that financial management procedures throughout the government are in a shambles.

A 313-page supplement to the auditor-general's annual report tabled Monday contains a broad indictment of federal financial procedures.

"The study leads to one clear conclusion," says the bulky report. "The present state of the financial management and control systems of departments and agencies of the government of Canada is significantly below acceptable standards of quality and effectiveness."

As with previous auditor-general's reports, this one is sprinkled with examples of waste and mismanagement. But the emphasis is on ways to improve the system.

The key recommendation is for a strong central agency to provide more effective direction. Currently, responsibility for financial management is spread among the treasury board, finance and the supply and service departments.

The central agency should be the treasury board. But if necessary, a special central monitoring agency could be established.

"What we're basically saying to treasury board is 'Look, this is your job. Why don't you do your job?'" Mr. Macdonell explained later.

The 177-page main report—the third brought down by Mr. Macdonell—covers the fiscal year ended March 31. During that time, government spending was $26.08 billion.

Findings of the supplementary study, initiated in 1974, were presented to the department in late summer. In some cases, improvements already have started and will be closely watched by Mr. Macdonell.

Minister Complains About Imperial Bank Dividends

TORONTO (CP) — A minister from Kilcoher complained Tuesday about the "niggardly dividend" paid by the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, and told the bank's shareholder meeting that the bank, instead of dumping $50 million from undivided profits into the rest account, should have given a bonus dividend of 10 cents and increased quarterly dividends by two cents.

He said increased dividends would help boost the stock market price of Bank of Commerce shares, which he said is below that of shares of other major banks.

Bank of Commerce dividends were increased in fiscal 1973 to $1.18 from $1.11 last year while earnings rose to $134 million from $101 million.

Bank Chairman Page Wadsworth told Mr. Eydt his suggestion would be discussed by the bank's board of directors. However, he said the bank had to retain earnings to improve the capital base essential to the bank's continued growth. The rent account now totals $500 million.

In answer to Mr. Eydt's question on how much the bank gave to charity last year, Mr. Wadsworth said total donations to charities, universities and other groups totalled in excess of $1.5 million. He added the board of directors had recently set up a committee to study the issue of donations.

Rev. Paul Eydt, pastor of the Imperial Bank of Commerce this year when profits were so high.

Quebec Steel Company Outlines Austerity Plan

MONTREAL (CP) — In the face of a record deficit, Sidbec-Dosco Ltd.—Quebec's government-owned steel company—has announced an austerity program.

A company spokesman said the 1975 deficit—Sidbec's fifth since its creation seven years ago—would fall between $18 million and $20 million.

Sidbec president Jean-Paul Gignac said the board of directors has decided on budget cuts that will affect plant maintenance services, administrative costs and capital expenditures.

Guideline Exceptions Unfair Says Manager

TORONTO (CP) — Page Wadsworth, chairman of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, said Tuesday the government's anti-inflation program is unfair, but granting exceptions and special provisions will only make it less fair.

He told the bank's annual meeting that price and wage controls are necessary to jolt the country into recognizing inflation as a grave threat and it now is the responsibility of everyone to support the program.

"If we have any doubts as to what our attitude should be, let us take one moment and ask ourselves: "Are we prepared to accept the consequences of the economic course Canada has been following for the last several years?"

The bank announced earlier that its balance of revenue or earnings for fiscal 1975 increased about 33 per cent to $134 million from $101 million last year. International earnings increased to $21 million from $8 million last year, a gain of 147 per cent.

Plan Increases

TORONTO (CP) — When the United Church of Canada general council discussed planning for 1977 pay increases for members of the staff and personnel committee, it came out in the minutes that the increase should not be related to total salary "but to the cost of living increases."

Avison Will Head Unity Bank of Canada

TORONTO (CP) — T. Ted Avison, 62, came out of retirement to take over as president of the financially-troubled Unity Bank of Canada because he could not turn down a challenge.

"I did not want to back away from challenge," Mr. Avison said in an interview, adding he probably would not have stayed retired anyway because "I'm not that type of guy."

He had been in retirement six months, after almost 40 years as an investment specialist, when he accepted the challenge of Unity, the only chartered bank in Canada that is losing money.

Unity recently reported a loss of $607,000 for the fiscal year ended Oct. 31, 1975, compared with a deficit of $672,000 for the previous year. In the wake of the red ink, R. B. Higgins, president since Unity's inception in 1972, resigned.

B.C. Liberals Campaign to Hold 'Balance of Power' Against NDP

VICTORIA (CP) — When the Dec. 11 British Columbia election was called, Gordon Gibson faced the task of fighting the campaign with only a little over a month of experience as the province's Liberal leader.

The 36-year-old fledgling leader was given 32 days to pump some life into the riddled and fragmented group he inherited and at the same time assure himself of election in his North Vancouver-Capilano riding.

Mr. Gibson will be up against Social Credit candidate Ron Abbott, the North Vancouver district mayor, whom the Liberal beat by only 57 votes in a February, 1971, byelection.

Since that election, the boyish-faced Liberal leader has earned a great deal of respect as speaker, debater and political personality.

But the question is, can the youthful Mr. Gibson, a dabbler in federal politics, put his talents together in order to improve his party's image as a credifable alternative to the New Democratic or Social Credit parties.

This is a chore in itself in light of the beating the party took earlier this year—losing three of its seven MLAs and switching party leaders so close to an election.

A rift in the party over support of a unity movement in the interests of defeating the NDP government broke wide open in May when the three MLAs, Dr. Pat McGeer and Gordon Gibson, both representing Vancouver-Point Grey, and Allan Williams, West Vancouver-Howe Sound, left to sit as independents.

They said they had a basic difference of opinion with David Anderson, the Liberal leader then, over the matter which eventually led to Mr. Anderson resigning. He and Mr. Gibson remained the only Liberals in the last legislature.

Mr. Gibson was chosen leader Sept. 28 and the next day the three independents, each well respected, announced they were joining the Social Credit party.

Mr. Gibson is faced with the task of convincing others not to follow their lead and vote Social Credit.

The Liberal leader said in an interview the party wounds have healed and now there is solidarity.

He said the main theme he is pushing in the election campaign—that it is time for a minority government in B.C. with the Liberals forming the balance of power—is also encouraging for candidates and party members.

"It makes the point that voting Liberal can effect some consequential results this time around, even though we won't form the government or even the opposition," he said, "but maybe the balance of power.

"A Liberal vote can have some impact."

Mr. Gibson has his roots in provincial politics as his father is Gordon Gibson, the millionaire lumberman and former Liberal MLA who was a bitter opponent of W. A. C. Bennett, former Social Credit premier.

But he also had a taste of federal politics as a member of Prime Minister Trudeau's staff and a former executive in federal department.

He was born in Vancouver in 1937 and graduated from University of British Columbia in 1959 with an honors degree in mathematics and physics and then received his master of business administration from Harvard University in 1961.

Mr. Gibson said he is pleased with the way the campaign is going and confident his party can substantially increase its support above the 1972 election level when its share of the popular vote dropped to an all-time low of 16.4 per cent.

"I see no coming out of this election with a much stronger party, beholden to no one.

"After the election the NDP will owe a debt to labor, and Social Credit will owe something to big business but the Liberals will only owe the bank," he said, referring to the party's skimpy financial status.

"Also, he said, the party has been a little too establishment-based, but as a result of the Liberals' approach during the campaign will appeal to a broader group of people.

Mr. Gibson said the only issues in the election have been broad political ones, such as whether the NDP should be returned, the relative merits of the leaders of the two parties and the value of a minority government.

When the election is over, it will be the leadership issue which will be seen to be the most important in the campaign, he added.

Britain Faces Tough New Year's Resolution

LONDON (CP) — The British government faces the economy of 1976 with a single-minded New Year's resolution: Stop the juggernaut of inflation with an armory of wage and price controls.

Britain, whatever its reputation for strident unions and labor strife, now enjoys a strength that has so far eluded the Canadian government in the fight against inflation.

Here, unlike Canada, the big union battalions are staunchly riding with the government in support of strict limits on pay increases.

It took months of backroom bargaining for Prime Minister Harold Wilson to get union backing for the pay-restraint strategy launched last July. That support, confirmed in union and Labor party conventions, gives Britain its best chance in years to beat inflation.

All agree it will be a tough battle, with inflation in this country now running at twice the Canadian rate. The attack is already costing Britain heavily—more than a million people out of work, with health, schools and the other government services suffering under spending cuts.

And it leaves unresolved Britain's most serious long-range economic problem: an industrial plant left obsolete and inefficient by years of inadequate investment.

Still, Wilson's austerity program has won union support that Prime Minister Trudeau might envy.

The unions have agreed voluntarily to limit increases in weekly pay to £6 ($12.60). Those earning the equivalent of $17,850 or more a year are not to get any increase until at least next August.

By then, the government says, yearly inflation should be cut from a current rate of more than 25 per cent to about 10 per cent.

Penalties for violation of the limits will be levied against employers, not workers.

Under a price-control program inherited by the Labor government from its Conservative predecessor, prices will be permitted to rise just enough to give firms the cash needed to invest in new equipment, to make British industry competitive in world markets.

So far, the government says, the plan is working. More than two million workers have settled pay claims at 4-6 or less since August. No claim has been reported to have exceeded the limit.

Wilson will need all his persuasive powers to keep the strategy going through next year. With prices rising faster than wages, he will come under increasing pressure to relent as living standards for most people start to fall early in 1976.

But his pact with the unions has kindled a flicker of optimism in an economy long beset by gloom.

Helping to fuel those hopes, the first barrels of North Sea oil started to flow in 1975 by ship and pipeline into British refineries.

Britain has been among the countries worst affected by the five-fold increase in world oil prices in the last two years. That rise, however, has made the costly North Sea crude worth exploiting.

The government hopes Britain can be self-sufficient in oil by 1980. That will reduce its balance-of-payments deficit by easing the need for imported oil. It will also help pay off the loans Britain has taken out in the last several years to keep its battered economy solvent.

Doubts about Britain's international credit rating have been a factor in the fall in value of the pound sterling.

In terms of Canadian funds, the pound has fallen this year to about $2.10 from about $2.40. That makes imports from abroad more expensive. But it also makes British exports cheaper in other countries.

And selling more abroad is what the government hopes will lead Britain out of its current recession.

For that reason, Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey has been urging the United States, Japan, and Britain's partners in the European Economic Community to keep up their inflationary policies—increasing demand in their markets for British exports.

Britain desperately needs the money. Hospitals, housing, public transport and the big nationalized industries all must spend millions in the next few years to produce tolerable living standards and healthy businesses.

But Britain's big economic question for 1976 remains: Can a resurgence in world trade and the government's wage policy develop enough momentum to prevent a new inflation spiral when the inevitable wage claims begin again?

Review Board Rejects Postal Contract, Cabinet Now to Decide

OTTAWA (CP) — With postal unrest simmering once more, cabinet is likely to look closely today at a federal anti-inflation board decision to turn down a pay award that ended a six-week postal strike last week.

Board Chairman Jean-Luc Pepin said Wednesday night the pay settlement—giving inside postal workers a 38-per-cent pay boost over 30 months—could not be allowed.

"We have decided that this agreement is too high for the standards before us," he told reporters shortly before addressing a dinner meeting at the National Press Club.

The decision sent shock-waves through official Ottawa and brought reactions of anger and disbelief from postal union officials across the country.

Mr. Pepin said the government has retained authority to "second-guess us in many ways." There may be "other wider considerations" for cabinet to look at than simply keeping within the prescribed wage and price controls imposed Oct. 14.

The development came just as cabinet is considering detailed spending curbs for the fiscal year beginning in April. Changes were announced in programs for relocating workers by the manpower department Wednesday, but they will produce relatively minor savings.

Proposals circulated within government and still to be approved by cabinet include abolishing such programs as Opportunities for Youth and the Local Initiatives Program. Many departments and agencies will be required to trim man-year requests as part of a general belt-tightening.

The spending restraints may fall heavily on particular areas, but over-all outlays by the government will not be reduced. Only the rate of spending increase will be restrained.

The anti-inflation board wants the government and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) to resume bargaining. If that fails as expected, then the issue goes to cabinet. Mr. Pepin refused to say by how much the settlement exceeds what the board considers acceptable.

He said "the gap is too wide" between the basic, first-year raise of 10 per cent permitted by the federal program and the award of about 38 per cent—more than 20 per cent in the first year—to the 22,000 CUPW members.

Union leaders disagreed. Marcel Perreault, Montreal local president, said it was "completely ridiculous, absolutely inconceivable" that the workers would agree to bargain for a lower salary.

The Montreal local voted heavily against the offer that was agreed on nationally by a narrow margin last week.

CUPW headquarters in Ottawa refused any comment. Union President Joe Davidson and chief negotiator Jean-Claude Parrot were advised of the board's decision at a meeting Wednesday morning.

There was strong support for allowing the settlement from Prime Minister Trudeau, Treasury Board President Jean Chrétien and Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey.

Price Index Jumps .9 Per Cent in Nov.

OTTAWA (CP) — The cost of living continued to rise steeply in November, mainly because of higher prices for shelter, transportation and food, Statistics Canada reported today.

The consumer price index rose nine-tenths of one per cent in November, the same as the jump recorded in October. There had been a one-month pause in September, when the index rose only two-tenths of one per cent, following a chain of successive sharp monthly rises during the summer.

The November figures come as the anti-inflation board is rushing to develop its price monitoring system and is under continuing criticism from union leaders and others that it doesn't be effective in controlling prices. The board has already turned down several proposed wage increases, including the postal workers' contract, because they exceeded rises allowed by the anti-inflation program.

Higher shelter costs, including increased prices for both owned and rented housing, accounted for about one-third of the monthly rise, a similar impact was attributed to higher transportation costs, including 1976 model car prices which were up 3.4 per cent from year-end 1975 model prices.

Higher gasoline and heating fuel prices in Ontario, which rose about five cents a gallon when a freeze on the items expired Nov. 15, also were cited in the shelter and transportation increases. A similar freeze expired at the same time in Manitoba, but the agency did not mention it as a factor in the over-all rises.

Food prices were up again in November, producing a level 11.3 per cent above November, 1974. The over-all food cost rise was attributed to higher prices for fresh vegetables, canned salmon, coffee, restaurant meals, beef and poultry, although pork and sugar prices were down.

The over-all index was at 144.1 in November, up from 142.8 in October. The index base was 100 in 1971.

In the 12 months to November, the index has risen 10.4 per cent.

Trenton Firefighters May Lower Demands

BY JERRY BROWN
Staff Reporter

TRENTON—Town firefighters say they will revise their 1976 salary demands more in line with the federal government's guidelines, says Capt. Dennis Smith, spokesman for the group, Wednesday.

The review of salary demands will begin when the arbitration settlement is not reached during next weeks negotiation session involving the 1975 contract said the firefighter.

"Negotiations for the municipality and the firefighters have been embroiled in a dispute set which was prompted by a report given to council recommending the town implement a volunteer fire brigade if the associated salary demands were not modified.

"The figures presented to council in that report were misleading," said Capt. Smith.

"They indicated we were asking for more than $18,000 when that figure only applied to captains' salaries" said the firefighter.

Captain Smith said the figures were also based upon a projected settlement of the 1975 contract, which is still pending.

"All the firefighters want is a salary comparable to wages paid to firemen in similar sized municipalities," said Capt. Smith. "The average settlement for a first class firefighter in Ontario, among the 40 associations who have settled contracts, was $14,272," he said.

Aubrey Sharp, Trenton town clerk, the official who presented the report to council said he was working with the only figures available.

"We based our salary analysis on facts currently presented by the firefighters to the town," said Mr. Sharp. "These were presented by the association as their 1975 and 1976 demands and we based our final figures on them," said the town clerk.

"We prepared the report to present the facts about the cost of fire protection, effects of the salary demands on the taxpayer and other employee negotiations," said Mr. Sharp. "The report was to outline alternatives to council if costs rose to the extent that the municipality and taxpayers were not prepared to accept them," said the administrator.

"After the arbitration award is set down for the 1975 contract, it would be best if we talked and settled all our differences," said Mr. Sharp and Capt. Smith.

Seven-up Removed Here Over Lead Levels

By CLIFF KENYON
Staff Reporter

Soft drink cans of Seven-Up, Diet Seven-Up and Schweppes are being removed from store shelves in Belleville as a precautionary measure after tests revealed the drinks may have an unacceptable lead level.

"There's no danger whatever," sales manager for Misener Beverages Ltd., local distributor of Seven-Up and Diet Seven-Up, said today.

Several brands of canned soft drinks marketed in Ontario and Quebec by Seven-Up Ltd., were recalled earlier this week after tests revealed possible higher than permissible lead levels apparently resulting from the solder used in manufacture of the cans.

"It's not the product's failure but the can," said the Misener spokesman.

Keith Perry, Belleville sales manager for Coca Cola Ltd., local distributor of Schweppes, said the product is being removed from stores.

Indians May Vote Prohibition Off Land

KENORA, Ont. (CP) — Residents of the Grassy Narrows Indian Reserve in this northwestern Ontario community are in vote within 30 days on whether to do away with the long-standing prohibition against alcoholic beverages on their land.

Band Chief Bill Fobister said Wednesday he personally favors making possession of liquor legal on the reserve and even speculated about the possibility of a local tavern or retail liquor outlet sometime in the future.

Legal consumption of alcoholic beverages, he said, would eliminate bootlegging and also do away with the expensive taxicab rides some persons make to Kenora to obtain liquor.

About 120 band members will be eligible to vote in the referendum. Band regulations limit voting to those over the age of 21.

Unclean Restaurants Should Be Publicized Says Health Official

BY ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Eating establishments found in violation of accepted levels of cleanliness should be publicized as a caution to customers, says Trenton representative Peter Aziz of the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Board of Health.

Mr. Aziz queried Lloyd A. Elenton, chief public health inspector for the counties health unit, at Wednesday's board meeting here on the possibility of telling the public an eating establishment has been inspected and found below standard.

He also suggested the public should be notified once an offending establishment has upgraded itself.

Mr. Ellenton rejected the argument, saying there is no eating establishment in Ontario which does not violate at least one health standard set forth by either the federal or provincial governments.

He said the extent of substandard conditions in any establishment is "all a matter of degree" and assured the board if he found any establishment as substandard as Mr. Aziz suggests, he would close it and placard the premises.

Mr. Ellenton asked Mr. Aziz if schools, commercial establishments and private dwellings also be publicized.

The board took no action on Mr. Aziz's suggestion which was the second attempt by a board member to broach the subject.

In its October meeting, the board voted down a proposal by Barbara Allen, reeve of Tweed village, which would have initiated an investigation into a policy of criteria for grading restaurants as cleanliness.

Reeve Allen said it would make it competitive for restaurants to quickly upgrade their facilities.

She had taken exception to an admission by Mr. Ellenton that there is sometimes a three-week period between warning letters sent to offending restaurants and followup inspections by health unit staff.

Mr. Ellenton has assured the board the presence of bacteria is not a factor in the two counties restaurants. He said many problems which have arisen in the past have involved build-ups of grease.

Clarke Rollins, long-time Conservative representative in the Ontario legislature for Hastings County, will not contest the next provincial election.

Queen's Park Should Pay Cost of Care

The provincial government should pay the full cost of maintaining unmanageable children under Children's Aid Society (CAS) supervision, according to Hastings County council Tuesday.

The problem, aired twice in county council earlier this year, was re-iterated in a resolution from Durham Region — and supported by Hastings councillors.

Under previous legislation such children were sent to training schools with the province paying the total cost.

Now, the repeal of such legislation will place them under CAS care — with the government paying 80 per cent of the cost. Thus the province would make a "substantial" saving — at the expense of municipal taxes, Durham complained.

It called for support to petition the province to pay the full cost involved.

Hotel Profits Down

Four Seasons Hotels Ltd. report despite $19.9 million in revenue in 1975 compared with $17.4 million during the corresponding period last year, net earnings fell to $1.1 million from last year's $1.2 million.

Isadore Sharp, president, says share earnings fell from 23.8 cents a share last year to a current 20.8 cents.

Four Seasons also reported construction on two downtown Toronto properties will begin in mid 1976. The two projects are a luxury hotel on Bloor Sid. and a commercial-retail-residential centre on the old Granite Club site on St. Clair Ave. West.

Salary Negotiations Complicate Guidelines

Implementation by the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit of future specific constraints in provincial ministry of health spending in 1976 will be complicated by negotiations between the counties board of health and its 30 nurses of Local 21 of the Ontario Nurses' Association (ONA)

The two sides signed a one-year contract in June this year which expires on March 1, 1976.

At the time of the contract announcement, ONA local vice-president Marsha Olinski told The Intelligencer although the new pact brought health unit nurses almost in line with salaries of nurses at Belleville General Hospital, her members again would fall behind Kaiser after last July when hospital nurses province-wide received a new contract.

In a notice to the counties board of health released at the board meeting Wednesday here, deputy health minister S.W. Martin said it is ministry policy to accept the costs of collective agreements and other written contracts in effect at midnight Oct. 13.

"No allowance will be made for actions take subsequent to the Oct. 13 deadline but which may have been dated to be effective prior to this date," he advised.

Mr. Martin explained once specific spending guidelines, to be released in early 1976, have been established and an appropriate technical paper issued, "suitable retroactive adjustments may be made."

However, he noted, "necessary negotiations relative to collective bargaining agreements should proceed, bearing in mind that funding will only be available within federal guidelines."

In addition, senior staff and department heads' salaries will only be recognized to the level approved by the health ministry as at Oct. 13, the effective date of the federal salary and wage guidelines, Mr. Martin said.

These positions affected are: medical officer of health, associate and assistant medical officer of health, dental director, business administrator and heads of both nursing and inspection services.

Mr. Martin added, "where the salaries of those senior staff at the low end of the scale fall behind the salaries of those subordinates who have similar qualifications, the ministry will be prepared to entertain appeals from these funding provisions."

Even Counter Rare

When Ruth Denton opened her craft shop, The Old Stone House, in her home at Warings' Corners she opted to preserve the atmosphere of the 14-room farm house. Her sales counter where she wrapped parcels for customers at today's shop opening was taken from an old general store in Milford and refinished as a unique sales desk.

Snowmobilers Hamper Snow Removal Says Commissioner

TRENTON — Muncipal work crews thought they had the night, Tuesday to clear away a 23 — centimeter snowfall but snowmobilers made it a dangerous job, said Arie Hoornweg, commissioner of public works.

The snowmobilers were running up and down the streets during the first major snowfall of the season and plow drivers, even though they are perched high above the ground in the machines cab, had great difficulty seeing the smaller vehicles, said Mr. Hoornweg.

"The drivers said they were constantly afraid of running over one of the snowmobiles because the plows are very hard to manoeuvre quickly," said the commissioner. "If one of the plows were to run over a snowmobile it would turn the driver and the machine to mincemeat," he said.

The snowmobilers, some who were reported operating throughout the night, were breaking the law, said a spokesman for the police department.

"Snowmobiles use is restricted to between the hours of 8 a.m. — 11 p.m. Monday — Thursday and 8 a.m. — 12 p.m., Friday, Saturday and Sunday," said Staff Sgt. Steenberg, of the Trenton police force.

The machines are also restricted from operating on some of the major streets in town unless the owner is proceeding from his home to an unrestricted artery, said the officer.

Ellenton On Committee

Lloyd A. Ellenton, chief public health inspector for the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit, has been invited by the Kingston office of the provincial ministry of the environment to sit on a committee studying a recycling program in connection with waste management.

Mr. Ellenton received approval from the counties board of health Wednesday to attend committee meetings in Kingston.

Century Stone House Offers Look into Past

By MARG HAYLOCK

PICTON — From washstands to winowares The Old Stone House at Warings Corners today offered customers a unique gift line during its Christmas opening.

The craft shop opened in the home of Ruth Denton just west of Picton features antiques, wrought iron work, ceramics and bric-a-brac.

As a bonus for customers who arrive to browse in the boutique there is free "atmosphere" complimentary of the Old Stone House.

In the shop, original beams of the house built about 135 years ago recall Prince Edward's past.

The highly polished wooden sales counter has a history of its own as it was discovered by Mrs. Denton in an old general store in Milford.

A door leading from the shop to another part of the house was salvaged from an Athol Township school house.

A set of wooden steps originally outdoors at the Waring house have been refinished and brought indoors for use in the craft shop.

Mrs. Denton, who hopes to carry "one of a kind" gift items at The Old Stone House, says that her stock will include many items on consignment from local crafts persons.

Already the shop offers a colorful line of ceramics by Marne Brown of Unionville and several attractive washstands refinished to lend a special look to any decor.

A focal point in the boutique is a winnower refinished to provide a coffee table ideal for conversation or tea.

Mrs. Denton also carries a jewellery line in her shop and a ring display suggests the perfect accent for holiday dresses.

The Old Stone House will be open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. except on Tuesdays and Wednesdays when Mrs. Denton plans buying trips.

She observed Wednesday that response to her shop from local crafts persons has been excellent. Many are eager to offer their work on consignment.

The Old Stone House will remain open all year around as a display case for Prince Edward County crafts and unusual items discovered by Mrs. Denton.

Ministry Revises Cost of Supplying Water

By AL ZASAS
Staff Reporter

FRANKFORD—The Ontario environment ministry has revised upwards to $66,000 the cost of laying a water main from Frankford to Pitcher's Sideroad, where nine homeowners have lived with polluted wells for the last three months.

Last week, Gordon Thom, ministry industrial abatement section officer estimated construction costs at $40,000, excluding safety valves, hydrants and engineering fees.

Wednesday he estimated costs at $66,000 — or about $20 a linear foot over a quarter of a mile along the Stockdale Road west from Frankford.

And that figure, he said, could rise by 50 per cent depending on the ease with which a six or eight inch main could be laid.

Mr. Thom said the construction costs would have to be met by homeowners along the road. For an individual homeowner, the cost will decrease as the number of users increases.

Potentially, the cost of laying the main could be shared by about 40 property owners along Hastings County Rd. 8, the number who signed a petition requesting Sidney Township to investigate provision of water.

The petition was sparked by nine homeowners clustered around Pitcher's Sideroad who have not had drinkable water since late summer. As a solution to the problem, homeowner spokesman Rose Olasusky suggested a main Sc Frankford from Frankford to the homes.

On top of the shared $66,000 cost, said Mr. Thom, homeowners would pay a minimum of $200 for servicing and connection of feeder lines from the main to their homes.

"I hope it's a fairly accurate figure," he said, referring to the latest cost estimate. "I don't think it's going to get any cheaper."

It will be up to county road residents to decide whether to opt for main installation, taking into account the possibility they will not get a dependable supply of water from Frankford.

Both village officials and ministry spokesmen have said Frankford must cope with inadequate water supplies during summer peak demand periods.

Mr. Thom said that even if the homeowners west of Frankford decide for installation, the village and the ministry must still decide if the water can be spared.

OPP Warn Of Winter Hazards

Constable Don Kuzyk, community services officer for Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) at Belleville, advises operators of motor vehicles that driving habits must be tempered to cope with ice and snow conditions during winter months.

Constable Kuzyk calls for defensive driving — in other words, drive with caution and measure speed to conditions.

"Don't press one," he comments. "If it gets to be tough going, turn back or seek refuge."

Drivers should attempt to keep to main roads when possible and always carry extra gasoline, he says. In addition, the car radio should be tuned to a local station for weather reports.

Constable Kuzyk notes each car should contain a winter travel kit in its trunk and some of the following items should even be carried for city driving:

— shovel, axe or hatchet, sand, ice scraper and brush, tow chain, booster cables, flashlight, road maps, compass, extra gasoline, warning light or road flares, matches, extra clothing and footwear, fire extinguisher and first aid kit.

And should a driver find his car so stuck in snow or immobile on ice that he cannot free it himself, Constable Kuzyk offers the following suggestions:

— Don't panic. Avoid overexertion and exposure. Shivering and bitter cold can kill."

— "Stay in your car. You won't get lost and you'll have shelter. Keep fresh air in your car. Open a side window."

— "Run your motor sparingly. Beware of exhaust fumes.

— "Put out warning light or flares. Put on the dome light. Drape one of bedclothes may run your battery down."

— "Exercise your hands and legs vigorously. Keep moving and don't fall asleep. Keep watch for traffic or searchers."

Jury Likes Courthouse

PICTON — A grand jury report submitted Tuesday to Judge Wilfrid S. Lane has recommended retention of the old jail at the rear of the courthouse as "a historical landmark for future generations to tour or observe."

The jury's report noted that the new registry office opened behind the jail is modern and equipped to serve county needs.

Changes in the court house including renovations in the small jury room were recommended.

The report suggested the jury room should be enlarged and panelled. Carpeting should be added and new chairs and tables purchased. An old table in the jury room was classified as an antique to be kept in the building.

It was observed that waste baskets are missing in the court room and blinds should be replaced. Also, the main floor should be carpeted and two existing fluoleum ramps improved.

It was suggested that the judges' room adjacent to the court room should be painted and a framed picture should be added to the decor.

So Much for Economies

$5 Million for Anti-Inflation Board and More for Other Projects on Way

By RICHARD JACKSON

Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA — Remember — it was only some six weeks ago — how Prime Minister Trudeau and Finance Minister Macdonald told us what a neat and tidy, inexpensive and unbureaucratic little operation the new Anti-Inflation Board was going to be?

It wouldn't need a staff of more than 200 to monitor wages and prices, they said, and so the cost to the taxpayers would be, well, if not exactly peanuts, then minimal.

And wasn't the government itself going to show the way in how to exert some of self-control? You bet!

No sir, it wasn't going to ask the taxpayers to do anything it wasn't prepared to do itself.

So what has happened since the proclamation of the bright new federal law adawing?

Well, the feds have slipped their big fat, greedy hand into your shrinking pocket again to pick out another $1.800 million.

That is how they cut back — by spending million more, and this squandermania, already running something like $30 billion, isn't finished yet for this year. Treasury Board President Chrétien has warned that there is still another multi-million-dollar spending demand to come.

Mr. Chretien has tried rationalizing that there is little can be done — and forget the promises of six weeks ago — about government spending this year.

But just wait until the government's new financial year begins next March! There, he promises, you will see some economies.

Except that Prime Minister Trudeau, with a sort of helpless shrug has been asking for somebody to tell him where spending can be trimmed.

But figures running into the billions are of such enormity as to be almost beyond comprehension.

So let's get down to the small change.

Like the $5 million the government is going to be spending from now to March — about $1 million a month — to run that nice, tidy, little, supposedly inexpensive Anti-Inflation Board operation.

How come $5 million? And that's just start-up money, with more to come in the government's final spending spree for the year.

Well, because the Board seems to be going the way of all bureaucracies.

It has already begun empire-building.

From an initial two appointees — the effectiveness of former Trudeau cabinet minister Jean-Luc Pepin and the top-speaker former Food Prices Review Board boss Beryl Plumptre — the Board already is over 200 strong and going for 300-plus.

For once the wage and price control legislation is through Parliament and the Board is in business, the staff and cost will soar so fast that no one in charge, at this stage, is willing even to guess how the bottom line will read.

But $5 million is only start-up money.

The Board's self-projected growth is all down there on a complex organization chart that looks like a mobile gone mad.

From the top pin drop 44 attachments.

Each represents a division. So each will require a director and staff.

There are, for example, divisions for "word processing," for "public participation," for "early warning," and the one you'll likely be hearing about most, for "compensation."

This division, says its director, will "provide the interface between the Board and all sectors of the economy relating to compensation."

Translation from the bureaucratese: It will monitor all wage and price increases and report to the Board on violations of control guidelines.

The Board then will order rollbacks on threat of fines and imprisonment.

Like all self-respecting empires in the process of building the Board, of course, has its Information Division.

Its assignment is to inculate the previously skeptical masses — Jean-Luc and Beryl Plumptre are not exactly the stars of vulgar media.

"All inquiries," the ukase has been laid down, "must go through the Information Division."

And in the any atypical bureaucracy, the Board already has a spokesman, a liaison link with the Prime Minister's office . . . known as the Anti-Inflation Secretariat.

Assignment: to "co-ordinate" the Cabinet and the Board in the "Attack on Inflation."

Planning for 1995!

The Anti-Inflation Board's efforts of the moment, plus those of an equally balky government long on talk and short on action, will be as extinct as any dinosaur — by 1995 anyway and, inevitably, a good deal sooner.

Why 1995? Because Bruce Willson, a former gas comapny president and now prime construction contractor for the Syncrude plant in Alberta, says if the oil industry gets what it wants, the annual cost of heating an average-sized home in Ontario with natural gas will increase to $2,000 twenty years from now compared with $200 in 1972.

Mr. Willson, alluding to a $70 billion windfall for the oil and natural gas industry, from the rising well-head prices, says the money should be used to secure Canada's future in oil and gas, rather than enriching the federal and Alberta governments and the oil companies.

This makes sense in light of the pressing need for uncovering new reserves, and especially as there is word that exploration has slowed in the past three years. Equally there is a need for universal public acceptance of fuel saving concepts.

At the level of the average homeholder though, and with an eye to the economic controls supposedly now coming into effect, it is that figure of $2,000 a year to heat a home 20 years from now which wrankles. Using this as a general economic indicator, how should the average person due to retire at that point plan for such an inflated future?

"I'm against injustice — and hang anybody who says otherwise."

The Office Party

The office party is a phenomenon of these pre-Christmas days. It's a ritual many would not miss. For others though it can be another, given the press of people, the babel of loosened tongues and the retribution of the morning after, if not tragedy of one kind or another on the night itself.

Christmas of course has its undercurrent of social upset, even in the midst of the joy and happiness which at best it brings to many people. There is loneliness for the single person; the single parent, the widow, the widower, the elderly, the person separated from family and friends. There are as many variations of it as there are manifestations of unloward behavior.

Would you believe too, tears shed . . . and broken marriages? That, from a conversation in which a woman who obviously takes the subject seriously was lamenting office parties where the husband or wife is excluded.

Factor number one then: the office party confined only to those who work in the establishment.

But isn't there another side to it, especially in these days of supposed openness in marriage and social relationships generally. Such occasions offer one evening in the year, at the very least, when husbands and wives can get out on their own without necessarily impairing the relationship and perhaps even improving it. Certainly the marriage that can stand this kind of brief separation is stronger than many.

Why Christmas, as a religious holiday, is made the occasion by many for aberrant behavior of course is something else. Office parties are not necessarily in this category, but it appears this is a time for heightened tensions on occasions supposedly aimed at reducing them.

Arab Lands Differing Approach on Israel

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

While we in the West continue to hold a monolithic view that all Arab nations are more or less the same, Islamic societies are not strongly as quite different from each other.

Nothing does this as firmly in the modern Middle East as to see where each Arab nation stands on the ongoing crisis with Israel, a common denominator is that all Arab nations are officially opposed to the Israeli state in one form or another.

But not all of them believe, as do the Palestinian Liberation Organization that Israel must wither away, such a move paving the way for a totally new Jewish and Arab structure of nations in Palestine.

Jordan does not feel this way as far as we can tell, nor does Saudi Arabia, which lies to the east on North Africa's Mediterranean rim.

Where socialist Algeria and authoritarian Libya are fiercely anti-Israeli, one suspects the Moroccan kingdom of Hassan II, often concerned with carving out its North African role, pays lip service to the Arab hatred of Israelis.

Closer to Israel, indeed her enemy on the Golan Heights is socialist and Soviet-oriented Syria, implacable enemy of the Jewish state, a nation which Dr. Kissinger could not beat to any kind of agreement with the Israelis.

This fall Syrian President Hafez al-Assad celebrates five years in power, a former air force officer who has flown Soviet MiG jets and is a veteran of the earlier Arab-Israeli wars.

In the earlier peregrinations of Henry Kissinger between Tel Aviv, Cairo, Geneva and Damascus, the ancient Syrian capital city, President al-Assad remained opposed, determinedly so for kind of deal over the Golan Heights, again under Israeli control. Like the one worked out between Egypt's President Sadat over the Sinai Peninsula and the Suez Canal.

Indeed the controlled Syrian papers taking orders from President al-Assad, have been harsh critics of fellow Arab leader Sadat for making the Sinai deal with Kissinger and the Israelis.

The Syrians do not make this move out of any kind of victory over the Golan Heights where rooms of the fiercest tank battles since World War II took place during the 1973 Yom Kippur war.

Syrian losses were high and their Soviet armor, though tough and stark against the already harsh environment of the Golan region, was wasted by the Israeli tank units.

But the Syrians were not defeated. Unlike the Egyptians in all but the last Arab-Israeli war, the Syrians always have been resourceful and determined warriors.

Prior to the 1967 Six-Day War when the Golan Heights were under Syrian rule, they regularly and ruthlessly shelled the settlements in the Israeli lowlands and villages with artillery placed on the heights.

Domestically the Assad dictatorship has made strides in modernizing one of the world's oldest continuing societies, sweeping away ancient living quarters of the long-gone era of Turkish rule, permitting limited entry of foreign firms into a rigid socialist state.

Not an oil-producing state, Syria has been helped by her oil-producing Arab neighbors who are supplying her with about 700 million per annum in petroleum products reputedly at less than cost.

For an indefinite future period we can expect no give-and-take whatsoever between Israelis and Syrians.

Christmas: Other Side Of Coin

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Christmas comes but once a year — to most heavens. Once each year we become concerned that the poor have enough to eat — that their children have toys like other kids and we brief every with brotherly love. The other 364 days we enjoy the dog-eat-dog routine.

As the hypocrisy of the season gets near its climax we spend money like water — money we never seem to have the rest of the year. We decorate our houses with lights and mean about the high cost of energy. We cry out against the moneylenders and draw heavily upon their services. We talk about law and order and spend time getting drunk. We talk about morals and lost standards and throw them out the window with that great Christmas tradition — the office party (mere families are broken up at this time than the rest of the year put together).

Policemen scrape up the remains of the revellers from the roads, hospitals make room and the usual, politicians send us wishes with hand over heart and, on the surface, the world seems a nice place to live in.

Ask 99 out of a 100 what they are celebrating, and they will hesitate. Some will tell you it has something to do with the church; others more knowledgeable, will tell you it's to do with Jesus Christ. Shopkeepers will tell you it's to do with profits as they stand grinning next to the tinkling till. Those who have to work will grumble and tell you it's a nuisance but it's "double time".

Domestically the Post Office people we send and receive Christmas greetings from people who they remember and would sooner forget. We run around like a world in turmoil and greet each other with "Merry Christmas" or "Happy New Year". It means about as much as "Good morning" or "How are you? Care?"

Asked the only people who know what it is all about are the kids, who most of them have heard of Jesus Christ, but they have heard of Santa Claus.

"Merry Christmas".

Speed Curb 'Con Job?'

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

It would appear that the Ontario Government is once again doing a con job on the people, passing legislation to reduce the speed limits on our highways. They are telling us that in the U.S., 16 per cent less accidents occurred on their highways from 1973 - 1974, because of the lowering of the national speed limit to 55 M.P.H.

What they are not telling us is that, by New York government officials' estimates, miles driven in this period dropped 6 per cent. This drop was not because of the oil embargo forced on that country by the Arab nations. Oil company estimates (of miles driven) were that people drove 7 per cent less, because of the gas shortage. Even if this estimate is high, why did the number of accidents drop only 16 per cent.

I think if the people making such idiotic laws would stop sitting on their brains they would see through these transparent statistics, as many people do.

Economist Envisages a $7.7 Billion National Deficit

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

When you combine the latest government's report on foolish spending of public money, and the Estey inquiry report on Air Canada's mismanagement you have a picture of a public sector that's nearly out of control.

Examples of bad management can be found in virtually every aspect of public service — in broadcasting, in railways, in the post office, everywhere.

The federal government is currently running a budget deficit of about $1-billion a month, twice the rate of a year ago.

One private economist, G. Lloyd Lipsey, head of Fry Mills Spence Ltd., has calculated a federal budget deficit of $7.7-billion in the fiscal year ending March 31, by straight-line extrapolation of the results of the seven months starting last April.

Extending the extrapolation to the next fiscal year gives a budget deficit of $14-billion.

Mr. Sharp notes that federal government expenditures have roughly doubled, after adjusting for the inclusion of old age pensions, since the election of the 1972 fiscal year.

"The system is much deeper than one of expenditures," says John B. Aird, who resigned his Senate seat a year ago to become chairman of the Institute for Research on Public Policy.

"I think it has to do with the structure of the entire system, with the creation of departments, with boards, councils and committees, the creation of studies, the use of consultants — the whole complicated frustrating scene."

Expansion of the bureaucracy is by no means confined to the federal level.

The latest Statistics Canada report shows that in only three months this year (April, May, June) the provincial governments increased their employee totals by an amazing 6.8 per cent, to 340,000 (British Columbia keeps such data secret).

The Ontario government announced in October, 1974, that it planned to freeze its civil service at between 68,000 and 69,000. Within six months, the figure had grown to 71,000.

"Government," it seems there's a kind of competition among politicians and political parties to invent new needs and problems and then to offer the remedies—and these remedies require even more civil servants to apply them," says Mr. Aird.

His suggestion is that deposed ministers be given the power to fire.

If unnecessary jobs were eliminated and the essential work included, the remaining public servants "would find themselves with more, and more important tasks; giving better value for their money and regaining their lost pride," he adds.

The Institute of Public Research, founded in 1972 as a so-called think tank supported jointly by governments and the private sector, has given first priority to a study of the unprecedented growth of the civil service.

(Other areas of research are to include population trends, civil disobedience, and conflicts in relationships among the three levels of government).

Despite the institute's anti-bureaucratic stance, Mr. Aird is optimistic enough to expect the cooperation of governments. They want to be shown how to cope with a problem that has unsalvageable, liberal control, he suggests.

Current headlines show what happens when politicians whether in the city of New York, the state of Connecticut, or the Government of the United Kingdom—authorize vast expansion of financial assistance programs without adequate planning to raise the money to pay the bills.

CP News Roundup

Chargex Holders Be Alert

TORONTO (CP) — Holders of Chargex and Mastercharge cards should discuss interest charges appearing on their bills with the issuing bank, Sidney Handleman, minister of consumer and commercial relations, said in a statement Wednesday.

The minister said many people found they were being charged interest through the postal strike although they did not receive statements.

Mr. Handleman said the banks concerned had told him they are reprogramming of their computers to adjust interest charges would be monumental.

However, he said, they are willing to discuss the charges with customers and, where appropriate, adjust them.

Garbage Collects

NEW YORK (Reuter) — An estimated 50,000 tons of garbage was clogging the pavement and creating fire and health hazards Wednesday in the 10th day of a garbage collectors' strike. A sanitation department spokesman said that of 4,500 urgent calls from merchants for garbage collection, about 850 were considered emergencies and city crews hauled the garbage away. One restaurant was burning incense to overcome odors.

United Cancels

WASHINGTON (AP) — United Airlines, the largest U.S. air carrier, cancelled all scheduled flights through Dec. 24 following the indefinite suspension of talks with striking Machinists Union representatives Wednesday, a United spokesman said. The shutdown raises the possibility that many holiday travellers in the U.S. will find airline seating difficult to obtain during the peak holiday season.

Son Enters Politics

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's younger son, Sanjay, joined the top hierarchy of India's governing Congress party Wednesday, marking his formal entry into politics. The 28-year-old former automobile designer, named to the executive committee of the party's youth wing, has emerged as a close adviser to his mother since she proclaimed a national emergency June 26, arrested most of her leading opponents and imposed press censorship.

Present Brief

TORONTO (CP) — Representatives of the Ontario Institute of Agrologists asked the provincial government Wednesday to preserve valuable farmland for food production. The institute met with the government's resources development policy group and presented a brief. When it is essential to use farmland for other purposes, the government should require users to prove their needs cannot be met elsewhere the brief stated. It said Ontario will need 22 million acres of farmland by the year 2000 to feed an estimated 12 million people. As of 1971, there were 10.9 million acres of farmland in the province.

Causes Deaths'

MONTREAL (CP) — Asbestosis, asbestos-related cancer or other asbestos-related diseases caused the deaths of 15 of 18 asbestos workers who died between 1967 and 1974, a former factory doctor said Wednesday.

In testimony before a public hearing into health conditions in the asbestos industry, Dr. Philippe Landry, a pulmonary specialist now in private practice, said that during the same years he had examined 454 company employees.

May Be Elected

NAIROBI (AP) — Most Rev. Archbishop Edward W. Scott, Primate of the Anglican Church of Canada, is expected to be elected moderator of the World Council of Churches' policy-making central committee, it was learned Wednesday.

In the post, he would occupy what is considered the most influential presiding role in the internationalist body of 286 Protestant, Anglican, Orthodox and Old Catholic denominations.

Archbishop Scott, a decisive and even-handed churchman, has been pressed by church representatives from various parts of the world to take the job. He at first was distinctly to do so because of obligations in his home church.

Insurance Crime

TORONTO (CP) — The president of Insurance Crime Prevention Bureau said Wednesday that insurance-related crime costs about $100 million a year, of which auto and commercial vehicle theft are a significant factor.

A. M. McFadyen said in an interview that insurance-related crime is growing at a frightening pace, and most total losses are in fire, theft and property insurance coverages.

Some insurance companies feel they have more to fear from arson in the years ahead than changing technology," he said.

Seek Reduction

TORONTO (CP) — The provincial government is prepared to seek a reduction in the price of cars in Canada as part of a review of the Canada-United States auto pact, Claude Bennett, minister of industry and tourism, told the legislature Wednesday.

Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis asked Mr. Bennett if he was prepared to argue that the price of automobiles in Canada be lowered to U.S. levels.

The minister replied that that had been the aim of the pact signed in 1965.

Mr. Bennett said the federal government has set up a study group to carry out a review of the car industry and his ministry will play a major part in it as the industry is chiefly in this province.

Leger Cancels Party

OTTAWA (CP) — Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger has cancelled the traditional New Year's Day levee at Government House in favor of a less formal event Jan. 3 which will see women invited for the first time.

A Government House spokesman said Wednesday the gathering also will be attended by Mme. Leger.

"We are trying to see if this new approach is popular with people," said the spokesman. "We felt that Jan. 18 was more practical for most people because many have commitments on Jan. 1.

The name levee comes from the French word lever, meaning to rise and is an offshoot of a French tradition by which adult men performed the French king first thing in the morning while he was rising.

Beirut Ceasefire Met With Fierce Fighting

BEIRUT (CP) — Gunmen in the streets here greeted news of the latest ceasefire today with one of the fiercest onslaughts in Lebanon's eight-month-old civil war.

Moslems and Christians fought in the city's skyscrapers following the collapse of the Lebanese Army's first major intervention in the conflict.

Explosions joined the city throughout the night and into the morning.

Minutes after Premier Rashid Karami announced the truce Wednesday night—adding that he wished people a "quiet night"—the city was rocked by rocket and machine-gun fire.

The hardest fighting was reported around the Starco office building, where gunmen of the right-wing Christian Phalange party repelled Moslems trying to cut their supply line to Phalangists in the 500-room Holiday Inn.

The leftist Moslems also laid siege to the 25-storey Holiday Inn, where Christian gunmen were firing down on them.

"The Holiday Inn is practically ours," said Moslem leader Abu Abed. "If the state does not intervene today, it will inevitably fall completely into our hands."

An 850-man army commando force sent into the hotel district Monday was holed up in the Phoenicia International Hotel and other buildings near the Starco Centre. They gave up in an attempt to root Moslem gunmen out of the ruins of the seaside St. Georges Hotel.

Newspapers and the government radio said the fighting was the worst since hostilities erupted last April. Moslem leaders said 22 persons were killed and more than 70 wounded during the night, raising the toll since Saturday night to at least 200 dead. But police were unable to enter most combat zones because of the fighting, and there was no official casualty count.

Interior Minister Chamoun said Wednesday night that a synagogue in the Wadi Abu Jamil district was looted earlier in the day. Most of the several hundred Jewish residents in the district left their homes after fighting began earlier this year.

Ministers Will Approve U.S. Troop Withdrawal

BRUSSELS (AP) — Foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) are expected to approve State Secretary Henry Kissinger's proposal to withdraw 1,000 U.S. tactical nuclear warheads from West Germany in return for Soviet withdrawal of 1,700 tanks and 40,000 troops from central Europe.

Kissinger, who arrived early today for the annual winter meeting of NATO countries, suggested the move last June as a way of getting progress in the reduction-of-forces negotiations with the Soviets in Vienna, now in their second year without any concrete results.

At that time, West Germany opposed the proposal, although thousands of nuclear warheads would remain in the U.S. arsenals in Germany.

There was no indication when the proposal will be put to the Russians at the Vienna talks.

During the NATO meeting, Kissinger was to confer separately with the Greek and Turkish foreign ministers about the unsettled Cyprus situation which has weakened the alliance's eastern flank and increased pressures on the U.S. to reduce its military presence in Greece and Turkey.

B.C. Voters Go to Polls Today

VICTORIA (CP) — British Columbia voters were to choose a government today following a whirlwind 36-day campaign which many expected would polarize the turbulent political scene.

Awaiting the verdict were Premier Dave Barrett, head of the province's first New Democratic Party government for the last three years, his major opponent, Social Credit Leader Bill Bennett, Liberal Leader Gordon Gibson and Progressive Conservative Leader Scott Wallace.

The Social Credit party, whose 20-year-reign under W. A. C. Bennett, Bill's father, was ended by Mr. Barrett in 1972, mounted an all-out campaign as the unity party to defeat the NDP.

After Bill Bennett, a 43-year-old millionaire businessman from the Okanagan city of Kelowna, succeeded his father in 1973 as party leader and member of the legislature for Okanagan South, the party attracted one Conservative member of the legislature to its fold and, just this fall, three Vancouver-area Liberal MLAs.

The Social Credit candidates based new law policy promises and dwelled almost entirely on alleged mismanagement of the provincial economy by the NDP. They said the Social Credit party would get the province rolling again so that increased government revenues could pay for programs instituted by the NDP.

Mr. Barrett, 45, a Vancouver-born and United States-educated social worker once fired by the Social Credit government for his outspoken criticisms, has held the spotlight for his party almost by himself.

He has travelled the province seeking a second term to fight inflation and to ensure that federal guidelines — and wage freezes result in fair application within B.C.

Mr. Barrett's NDP had 37 seats at dissolution, Social Credit 11, Liberals 2, Progressive Conservatives 1 and one seat was vacant.

After the 1972 election, which Social Credit went into holding 28 of the 55 seats, the NDP won 38, Social Credit slipped to 10, Liberals held 5 and Progressive Conservatives 2.

B.C. traditionally has seen about a 70-per-cent turnout for elections, which amounts to more than a million votes cast of the 1,860,548 eligible voters.

There were 221 candidates, down five from 1972, in the province's first, late-fall election since 1920.

Most of the province was expected to be cloudy all day, with some spotted sunny periods and occasional snow flurries.

Temperatures dropped to -20 overnight in some interior ridings but were above freezing in the heavily populated Vancouver area.

Election officials cautioned that the advance poll, down eight per cent this year, could not be used as an indicator.

Lang Will Deal with Airspace Controversy

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Otto Lang said Wednesday he hopes to deal with the controversy over use of French in Quebec airspace in several steps.

He said in the Commons the government does not plan to wait until solutions to all aspects of the language problem are worked out before acting.

He was replying to Serge Joyal (L—Montreal Maisonneuve-Rosemont), one of several Quebec MPs who protested earlier this week the suspension of two Montreal air traffic controllers for speaking French in the Dorval airport control room.

Mr. Lang did not elaborate on how he plans to act in the bilingualism dispute.

Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa said Tuesday he would make representations to the federal transport department about suspension of the two controllers. But Mr. Lang said outside the Commons on Wednesday that the premier has not yet approached him.

Stelco's Coke Ovens Under Study

TORONTO (CP) — Labor Minister Bette Stephenson said Wednesday she will investigate monitoring and safety procedures in regard to coke ovens at Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. (Stelco) in Hamilton.

Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis told the legislature that a government study group found there were significant differences in procedures between Stelco and Dominion Foundries and Steel Ltd., also of Hamilton.

The NDP leader said a good record of coal-tar exposure levels was kept at coke ovens at Dominion Foundries but not at Stelco.

Dr. Stephenson said she will report back to the legislature after her investigation.

Youth Help Needy

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Operation SIGN, Service in God's Name, is the honoree for a youth program sponsored by the 41st International Eucharistic Congress, a worldwide spiritual assembly of Roman Catholics and other Christians. The young people plan to visit seminaries, stage food collection drives, labor inner-city children and help fulfill both physical and spiritual hungers in the world.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE with Major Hoople

Rooming Houses Now In Rent Legislation

TORONTO (CP) — Rooming houses will be included in Ontario's rent review legislation under an amendment supported Wednesday by the NDP and the Liberals.

The two parties combined to defeat the government side 57 to 31 on the amendment. The move means that between 200,000 and 300,000 rooming house units will be included under the legislation, housing ministry officials said.

Housing Minister John Rhodes said outside the legislature that he does not believe rooming houses should be covered, adding that it may be difficult to include them in the review process.

He also said the government will have to hire between 425 and 450 rent-review officers to administer the legislation, at an estimated cost of $10 million.

An amendment by the NDP allowing local municipalities to administer their own rent review process with the housing minister's permission was also approved over government opposition.

But an NDP amendment lowering the maximum rent increase from last July 29 to Jan. 1, 1976, to six per cent from eight per cent was defeated by the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives.

Ed Good (L—Waterloo North), who proposed the inclusion of rooming houses, said roomers may be exploited unless protected under the legislation.

Housing Minister Rhodes said including rooming houses would create chaos in administering the legislation. Since rooming houses are usually rented by the week without leases, a rent review officer may end up dealing with the same room several times during a short period of time.

He said the amendment allowing municipalities to establish their own review administration with the minister's permission permits him some discretion.

Method Used

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — The warm dry climate here is being used to create a wastewater treatment plant that employs solar evaporation to achieve absolute zero discharge. This completely eliminates pollution from process waters used in making chemicals. Process water is collected and pumped into an evaporation pond, where the liquid waste materials are oxidized to carbon dioxide. The hot climate evaporates the water from the pond and leaves only minute quantities of solids behind.

Fruitbelt Plans Major Campaign

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Tender Fruit Institute is to begin a major promotional program for canned peaches, pears, plums and cherries produced in Ontario, a spokesman said Wednesday.

Doug Williams, chairman of the institute, told the annual meeting of the Niagara Peninsula Fruit and Vegetable Growers' Association that a promotion program is necessary to clear inventories in preparation for the 1976 processing season.

He told growers they should maintain projected plantings of 43,000 new peach trees during 1976 and 1977. This will raise the harvest of clingstone peaches to 15,000 tons a year, he said.

Mr. Williams also said grape growers should profit from a vineyard conversion program announced recently by Premier William Davis. It will provide provincial loans to encourage growers to replace labrusca grape vineyards with French hybrid vines to meet market demand for drier types of table wines.

Drinking in School Is Problem: Principal

TORONTO (CP) — Student drinking is not a problem unless it is done inside a school, a secondary school principal said Wednesday at an inquest into the death of a 15-year-old boy who attended his school.

"If a student goes out for lunch, has a drink and doesn't disrupt classes or his own work when he comes back, then it isn't a problem," testified Kenneth Hills, principal of Bathurst High school in Toronto.

He told the inquest investigating the Oct. 19 death of John Nobenheim of Toronto, who died after a drinking session with friends, that principals are aware there is an increase in drinking among the young.

But Mr. Hills said drinking does not become a problem in school until it "disrupts the school program."

Alberta Introduces Rent Control Laws

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government introduced rent control legislation Wednesday, limiting landlords to rent increases totalling 19 per cent between next Jan. 1 and June 30, 1977.

Landlords will be allowed to increase rents by 10 per cent after Jan. 1 and by a further nine per cent after Dec. 31 1976.

Increases above those levels will have to be justified before a rent regulation officer whose decision can be appealed to a rent regulation board.

New construction is exempt from the legislation, said Graham Harle, consumer and corporate affairs minister. In order to encourage construction of more rental accommodation, A moratorium on conversion of rental accommodation to condominiums was declared.

Mr. Harle told reporters Alberta law requires 90 days notice of rent increases so increases announced to tenants from about last Oct. 1 will be controlled by the bill.

The controls apply to the accommodation being rented, not to the tenant, and landlords will be asked to provide a base rent as of next Dec. 31 on which the 19-per-cent immediate increase will apply.

Woman Charged With Immorality

TORONTO (CP) — William George Sylvester, 36, of Woodbridge, Ont., whose wife has pleaded guilty to 11 charges of procuring children and taking part in acts of sexual immorality, said Wednesday in county court that his wife's life is in danger because of published reports about his case.

Sylvester has pleaded not guilty to 10 morals charges, some of them involving children.

She was charged with, among other things, participating in acts of sexual imporality endangering the morals of children, procuring a child to have illegit sexual relations with her husband and four other persons, keeping a common bawdy house, conspiring to commit acts of indecent assault and gross indecency.

Sylvester told Judge Harry Waisberg following a court recess that satisfactory arrangements to protect his wife have been made. Earlier, he had said he would plead guilty to the charges against him in order to protect his wife. But he did not change his plea.

Sgt. Evan Kelly of York regional police testified that when the Sylvesters were arrested June 3 on a charge of gross indecency, Sylvester said he thought the government had made it legal to perform the act.

Sylvester also said he took some of the pictures in a photograph album seized by police, Sgt. Kelly said.

Det.-Sgt. Robert McCausland testified that Sylvester said an upstairs room in a farmhouse was used for spanking and whipping. He said Sylvester showed no emotion over allegations made by the children.

Exhibits ranging from black knee-length boots to an electric shock machine were entered as evidence.

Imperial Doesn't Follow Estimates

TORONTO (CP) — Imperial Oil Ltd. said Wednesday that Ontario government studies may have "substantially" overestimated the economic effects of higher petroleum prices.

Imperial, in a brief to the provincial inquiry on petroleum pricing, said a study done for Imperial concluded that rates of real growth, job creation and inflation are not significantly affected by shifts in the relative price of crude oil and petroleum products.

"On this basis, Imperial suggests that the Ontario government studies may substantially over-estimate the economic effects of higher petroleum prices."

The brief said Ontario studies had concluded that an increase of $1.50 in the wellhead price of a barrel of crude—to $8 from $6.50—would lead to the loss of 11,000 jobs a year later.

"However, a comparable study commissioned by Imperial Oil put the job loss figure for all Canada at 4,500."

Ontario has also estimated, the brief said, that the implementation of all the energy measures in the June 1975 federal budget would result in the loss of 19,700 jobs to the province.

But a study by the Conference Board in Canada, which covered the deflationary impact of the budget measures, energy and non-energy, "estimated the loss for all Canada at 14,000."

Imperial's study also concluded "that the main deflationary impact of higher oil prices results from an increase in the government cash position which is not offset by any policy response."

Ann Landers

Beware of Fads When Naming Your Baby

Dear Ann Landers: Many parents lack consideration when they name their newborn infants. Will you allow me to give your readers some guidelines? Their children will be grateful all the days of their lives.

1. Don't choose a name just because it is popular at the moment. Last year, from over 400 "Tawny" or "Candy" will be too of seven or eight in be class with the same name.

2. Choose a first name that goes well with the last name. If your family name starts with "N," don't give your little girl a first name ending with "N" because a name like Marilyn Nash will come out sounding like "Marilyn Ash."

3. Don't name your child for a TV celebity, movie star or sports figure. In five years the star may be forgotten and you'll be sorry.

4. Don't combine your husband's first name wit ha feminine ending and invent some "cute" ler "Michelle" or "Jolnette." In later years the poor kid will be asked, "Is that one name or two?" "What was your mother's maiden name?" "Would you please spell that name again?"

5. Don't let your husband talk you into naming the baby "Hunter" or some such just because the name has been in the family for a long time. It's not worth it.—Made My Mistaken And I'm Sorry

Dear Sorry: Thanks for an interesting bit of advice. Too bad you didn't sign your name—or let us know what you did to your children that prompted you to write.

Dear Ann Landers: The letter from the teenager who's father called him belittling names brought back some heartbreaking memories of my youth. Now that I'm an adult maybe I can say a word to help other young people through some trying times.

I was a tall girl for my age. My dad took delight in calling me "The Big Ox" or "The Long Drink of Water." I also had a crooked tooth in front. He never lost a chance to call it to the attention of a new friend by asking, "How do you like our snaggle-tooth witch?"

Because of my father's cruel less belittling (Mom called it "teasing a little") I grew up self-conscious and shy. It wasn't until I left home for college that I realized I was far from ugly and not much taller than most girls my age. Although I still have moments of insecurity (I'm now in my 60s) I've come to realize that my father did this to compensate for his own feelings of inadequacy.

Name-callers have their own private hang-ups. When young people understand this it can help them feel less bitter.—Receiving End

Dear Receiving: Your letter contained almost all the advice I was prepared to give. I'd like to add one more thought, however. Most parents who are unable to show affection to their children were denied affection by their own parents. Sense it takes therapy to break the chain. In the absence of professional help, just understanding can perform miracles.

Dear Ann Landers: For several years we have enjoyed eating our sleeves and neckties before they married. In this way we were able to meet the new in-laws and families. Recently we were told "Forget the fancy dinner party, just add the cost to the price of the gift."

We were shocked and hurt. What should we do?—FWL

Dear FWL: Forget the fancy dinner party and give exactly prior to that tasteless suggestion.

Doris Clark Begins New Career

HAMILTON (CP) — Sisters, Doris and Pearl Clark's most recent joint venture is Preparation For Retirement, a course begun by Pearl five years ago at the Mohawk College of Applied Arts and Technology, with Doris as volunteer assistant.

The Clark sisters may talk retirement, but don't believe in it. Pearl, 74, once said: "There's really no such thing . . . if you continue saying you're like."

Doris, 63, says she is "taking a flyer" in giving up writing a daily newspaper column to take over the retirement course. "I've reduced my income terrifically because I see something that needs doing."

She says the message of the course at Mohawk is the philosophy of aging. "Growing old is no job for a sissy," she said. "You have to face a body that is not as strong as it was. You can't call on strength as much; you have energy but you have to take care to husband it out."

Doris said at the last session her asked students what they'd like to do that they had never had a chance to do during their working lives.

One man wanted to build a house, another wanted to learn to play the organ and a woman said she'd like to be a barmaid.

College authorities let each of them know there were courses at Mohawk they could take to fulfill their ambitions. A construction course for the man who wanted to build a house; piano lessons for the would-be organist; training in waiting on table and a gourmet cooking course for the would-be barmaid.

"I feel I should be telling the whole country that old people are an asset and a resource," Doris said. "A person's learning ability decreases very little after 30."

Pearl retired officially 12 years ago when she gave up her job as an account executive in a Toronto advertising agency. Since then she has had as many as four jobs going at the same time: A column she used to write as health and beauty editor for the Farmer's Advocate (a weekly publication in 1963); management counselling; direct mail business, a syndicated column on aging called Coming of Age, which she wrote for 10 weekly newspapers.

Doris has found knowledge acquired in one job frequently leads to a new line of work.

A Master of Social Work degree, plus experience in different social work agencies, before 14 years ago to write Successful Living, a daily newspaper column which at its peak appeared in 23 newspapers across Canada. Dear Doris, another advice column she continues to write for some weeklies, at one point appeared in 100 of them in the United States and Canada.

Doris travelled across the country selling the columns to the newspapers herself. Her experience in the selling game was gathered in the years before the Second World War when Pearl started manufacturing Mary Miles tinned food specialties.

Doris would go out with the crate of tinned soups, sandwich spreads, and chili con carne in the back of the car. She travelled throughout Ontario, leaving samples with specialty grocery stores.

The business grew but had to be sold during the war when it became impossible to get enough tin for the containers.

Now, Pearl and Doris are looking ahead to future activities.

Doris keeps three different people busy doing such things as answering letters about her column, she has been receiving about 10,000 letters a year; and Pearl employs two people to take care of her mail and do other secretarial work.

People are realizing how important it is that everyone be encouraged to use his later years to best advantage, said Doris who is planning to write articles on gerontology.

Both women want to take courses in gerontology and perhaps one day train teachers who will go out and give courses in the subject.

ALL IN THE FAMILY by Isabel Huggan

End-of-the-Year Clutter-clearing

One of my really worthwhile end-of-year rituals is throwing things out . . . cleaning up the house, clearing out my head, getting rid of useless clutter.

Into my mental wastebasket go all the things that have bugged me during the past 12 months, so that I can start the new year afresh.

Reviewing some of my beefs and gripes before I toss them out, I find that many are complaints about other people's thoughtlessness.

For example, there's the habit of arriving at a theatre after a performance has started. It's annoying enough at the movies, but it's really inexcusable at a "live" play.

Recently at the Pinnacle Playhouse, I watched 16 people enter during the first 15 minutes of the play.

In that small theatre, even a minor disruption affects the entire audience. I hate to think of the distraction it is to the actors, who must continue through the opening and closing of doors, shuffling of feet, creaking of seats and rustle of coats being shed.

What is really shocking is that this kind of late-coming is not unusual. According to Doreen Kitchen of the Belleville Theatre Guild, it's a problem that seems to be getting worse with each play.

Speaking of theatre, some thing else that really bugs me is the crackling and rattling of cellophane bags of candy at the movies. I never know who to be maddest at — the noisy gobblers, or the theatre owners for selling "noisy" sweets.

On the subject of food, let me tell you about the people I've really got it in for, the ones who crowd into express lanes at the supermarket with more than eight items in their basket. Maybe they have only a few more than they should, but it's enough to slow down the line and make my blood boil.

Still on shopping, there's one sort of consumer I could cheerfully throttle: the dawdler.

Surely you've met this type. At the supermarket you can give a good sharp thrust with your shopping cart to could-these dreamers along. But in a department store, when you're trying to hurry, you're helpless among the crowds of rambling, slow-footed browsers who block your way no matter where you turn.

Of course, if you're in a hurry, you can guarantee that the clerk who should be serving you will smile right through you and turn to customers on either side. Any pettiness on your part "But I was here first!" will be met by frigid stares all round until you slink away or demurely accept being last.

Really, I'm going to try to forget about people like these . . . and the drivers who don't switch on their direction signals until three feet from the intersection . . . and the ones who smoke in elevators and small offices . . . and the ones who . . .

Yes, I'm going to start January afresh, with none of these grievances tagging along. Between now and New Year's, however, I think I'll amuse myself by devising suitable, imaginary punishments for thoughtless people.

Latecomers to the theatre? I've got it!

How about having them tell jokes, on stage, while the theatre fills slowly with crowds of people muttering "Excuse me! Excuse me!"

Even better, they could be seated at the aisle end of a row of 50 seats, that would fill up after the movie had begun by one person after another at intervals of 2 minute, all insisting that the sitter stand up to let them pass.

What would be suitable for loud candy bag sniffers? Any ideas?

Amuse yourself by playing judge and dreaming up some punishments that fit the crimes . . . I'll come up with any good ones, send them in to All in the Family, before the end of the year!

Make Your Own Christmas Wreath

One of the great decorating discoveries of the season, according to Mary Minielly, is creating wreaths and ornaments of dough.

Mrs. Minielly got the dough recipe from Claire Gorrey, who had clipped it from the Toronto Star. What surprised Mrs. Minielly, and her husband Hugh who assisted her, was how easy the whole process is.

The directions for the lovable dough, and for making a wreath to hang on a door, window or mantel, are as follows:

two cups flour
½ cup salt
one cup hot water
one tsp. instant tea or dry mustard

Mix dry ingredients together in a bowl, and add hot water all at once. Mix with a spoon and then with your hands.

Turn dough out on a floured pastry board, and knead thoroughly for about 10 minutes. When the dough is smooth and the right consistency to make shapes with, you can begin creating the wreath. Remember that the dough doesn't expand.

To make a wreath you'll need three batches of dough. Roll out one batch into a coil, and shape into a ring with a six-inch diameter centre. Moisten the ends of the coil with a little water so that it forms a firm bond where they join.

Place on a large cookie sheet. Cut a 15-inch length of strong wire and fold it three times, twist it together and bend it, then insert into the loop of the wreath as a hanger. Use a drinking straw to punch two holes through the wreath at the bottom, so that ribbon can fasten there once it is baked.

Use the remaining dough to shape fruits — apples, pears, berries — and nuts, holly leaves and flowers. Use a sharp knife to cut out leaf shapes, use your hands to form all other items. Insert whole cloves in the ends of fruit where a stem would be. Moisten items to attach.

To keep bubbles from forming, prick a number of small holes in the large pieces with a darning needle.

Bake in a 300-degree oven for four hours or until dry and hard. When it has cooled completely, glaze with two coats of urethane varnish, or if you prefer, paint with acrylic paints.

Mary Minielly, fastening bow on dough wreath.

PRESBYTERIAN WOMEN

The regular November meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Women's Group (Tweed) was held at the home of the president, Vivian Butterill.

A reading was given by the president to open the meeting.

Margaret Morton read the Scripture from Philippians and gave a reading "My Friend" and offered a prayer.

"Free Will" offerings were given in place of having a bazaar this year, and will be received by the treasurer Margaret Morton.

A bale of good used clothing was packed and sent to the Kenora Fellowship Centre.

Mrs. Butterill thanked those who helped decorate the church table for Thanksgiving and also helped pack the bale. She also thanked Edith Griffin for her "special" evening at the Salvation Army's "House League" meeting.

A motion was approved to give a donation to the "Echo". Candy bags will be packed and given to the children at the Christmas Concert and regular pot luck supper, which will be held in the Church Hall on December 12 at 6 p.m.

A hymn was sung, and a vote of thanks was given to the hostess and also to Mrs. Griffin for the bountiful and delicious lunch served.

RIVER VALLEY

The Christmas meeting of the River Valley Women's Institute was held at the center with Marie Donohoe as hostess. The program was arranged by Gladys Conley and Gayle Grills. Edith McCaw displayed her collection of international dolls, and Lois Hoard gave a vocal selection.

Couple Visits Bolivian Foster Child

Mr and Mrs. Raymond Richardson, Warkworth, last summer visited "their" child sponsored through the Foster Parents Plan in La Paz, Bolivia.

Waisy Cerda, who is four-and-one-half, is the foster son of a Brighton woman, Dianna Everson. Waisy lives with his mother, and 18-month-old brother in a one-room mud brick house in the slum area in the extreme heights of the city. Like others, the house is precariously perched in an area where mud slides could sweep the homes away.

A recipient family for only a few months, the Cerdas, who were deserted by the husband and father according to the Foster Parents Plan, have been able to purchase shoes, food and milk. Mrs. Cerda earns a living selling food on commission.

The Richardsons brought back slides of La Paz and the Cerda family to show to Mrs. Everson, along with two gifts from Mrs. Cerda.

Mrs Richardson, who teaches at Quinte Secondary School, said that she was impressed with the ability of Mrs. Cerda to cope with limited facilities in the nine by 15 foot home. She explained that in spite of the cold — it snowed the day they visited — there was no form of heating except a wood cook stove.

Besides medical care, the Foster Parents Plan provides community co-operatives for member families as well as a monthly cash grant of $8 to allow the family to buy food and other things they previously could not afford.

Mr. and Mrs. Richardson with Waisy.

Bulloch Rallies Support Against Taxation Laws

TORONTO (CP) — When John Bulloch was teaching business and finance in colleges here, he used to mark his students' papers and otherwise catch up with his reading in the bathtub.

One day when he was immersed in suds and a 1969 federal government white paper on taxation, indignation overcame him when he saw what the government planned to do about the report of Kenneth Carter, a chartered accountant who had recommended radical changes in the tax structure after a five-year royal commission investigation.

"They had butchered Carter," Mr. Bulloch says now.

His feelings were so strong that he promptly quit his job at Ryerson Polytechnical Institute to fight the federal proposals and the upshot today is the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, a 30,000-member cross-Canada body with a staff of 70 dedicated to leaning on governments on behalf of the small businessman.

Mr. Bulloch's first move was to organize what he called the Canadian Council for Fair Taxation and stage a shirtsleeve series of public rallies around the country, during which he raised $150,000 to fight the government's tax reform bill.

Out of that grew the present federation, of which he is president.

"What the government did in 1969," he said in an interview, "was to conclude that Carter's tax proposals for the mining, oil and insurance businesses were too high. They found themselves a billion dollar short, so they took it out of middle-class industry.

"The big companies were to get taxed effectively at about five, 10, 15 per cent and they were going to tax small business at 50 per cent.

"We got them to roll back the tax and now the effective rate on small business is about 35 per cent, where it was before."

"But," he added, "we're still involved in trying to clean up the original tax bill, which is so complex that only a handful of people in Canada understand it."

Mr. Bulloch, a personable and articulate man of 34 with a quick-on-the trigger mind, comes by his crusading spirit naturally.

His father, John Sr., is a religious fundamentalist from Northern Ireland with strong views on politics. He heads a prosperous family tailoring firm and gets his ideas into clothing advertisements that are reflished by commissioners "religion, politics and suits," says the son.

The younger Bulloch is an officer in the firm but devotes most time to his federation, either in its building where a staff of 30 operates, getting around the country to meet members or jetting abroad to see what's going on with small business elsewhere.

"I hardly take any speaking engagements now," Mr. Bulloch said. "I used to yell and scream when we were getting started—and sometimes members tell me I still should—but I'm try to make myself scarce so people won't get the idea this is a one-man organization. We're building up a speakers' bureau of about 20 people.

"The point is, we're listened to today. We can pick up a phone, call a cabinet minister and get a meeting any time."

Mr. Bulloch says the federation's strength derives from the fact that all its pressures on governments are based on the majority views of owner-managers of businesses—that's the criterion for membership—2,000 of whom are interviewed personally each week and all of whom are polled regularly on public issues.

The firms run in size from those with fewer than 15 employees to a small percentage employing more than 100. All must be Canadian-owned, and no branch plants are admitted. Fees range up to $500 a year, and Mr. Bulloch says proudly that many members voluntarily pay more than their assessment.

"We'll have 50,000 members by 1977," he said, "and right now we have more resources than the two major political parties put together."

One big reason for the growth of the federation, he said, is that the independents are the one group that has never been consulted on public policy—'and' that's why the economy is in such a screwed-up mess.

"The policy-makers have been talking to an elite, very small group of around 100 companies instead of the ones that provide the bulk of the employment in this country," Mr. Bulloch said.

What does he think of the federal anti-inflation program?

Mr. Bulloch said 50 per cent of federation members are for it, 40 against and two undecided.

"The leaning toward support is really because of the hammer they've been taking from employers as the result of big pay settlements in the public service, and there's no doubt in my mind that the reason for the program was to clamp down on the public service," he said.

"What we're concerned about," he added, "is that—a three-year program will be very difficult to unwind. We have to make sure Canada doesn't move permanently into a controlled society, and we are going to be watching this closely during the control period.

"I think the Liberals are worried about it, too. As a matter of fact, the federal government already has a committee studying how to get out."

"The danger of a three-year program," Mr. Bulloch said, "is that it will push us into other types of controls that haven't even been debated—export and foreign exchange controls—involving a horrendous bureaucracy.

He predicted Canada will have export control, calling for a permit to send goods out of the country, within 1½ years and exchange control before that.

"Another danger of a three-year program," he said, "is that the economy will be so regimented that it will be hard to get out. Usually, the rule is, easy to get in, hard to get out.

"It was only hard to get in in this case because we're so stubborn; we didn't put a freeze in first. And the reason they didn't put a freeze in is because they didn't want it to look like they were following Stanfield.

"I kind of feel sorry for them because they had to do something they didn't really want to do. Without a freeze, everyone thinks everyone else is getting a better deal and it's chaos.

Average House Price Rises

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Real Estate Association (CREA) says the average selling price of a house in Canada increased to $45,296 during the first nine months of this year from $40,858 in the corresponding 1974 period.

The total value of all transactions increased to $5.07 billion from $3.45 billion, the CREA said a survey showed.

Property listings, processed through the multiple listing systems of real estate boards, increased 26 per cent during the latest period. Completed sales were 22 per cent higher.

Most properties processed are houses and the majority are resale homes, the association said. There are about seven million housing units in Canada.

The CREA said British Columbia has the most expensive housing market with prices increasing 16.6 per cent to $49,668. Vancouver continues to be the most expensive city for housing with an average selling price of $54,974.

Saskatchewan and Manitoba are the cheapest areas for housing. The average price in both provinces during the latest period was $31,910.

Prices in Saskatchewan increased 28.9 per cent and prices in Manitoba increased 21.3 per cent over the 1974 period, the association said.

It said Regina is the cheapest place to buy property. The average price of a property this year was $33,208.

Smaller urban centres in the Atlantic and Prairie provinces show price increases below that the national average, the CREA said.

T. B. Jackson, CREA executive vice-president, said the real estate market is stable in most regions of Canada.

He said the 10.6-per-cent increase in real estate prices this year is the same as the rise in the cost-of-living index during the same period.

MPP Says Ontario's Strength Based on North's Resources

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's prosperity is based on natural resources in the north, Bob Bain (NDP-Timiskaming) said Tuesday.

Mr. Bain said in the legislature, during estimates debate on the secretariat for resources development, that prosperity comes from the forests, mines and farms of Northern Ontario.

But the north does not get a fair share in return from the province, he said. He said Donald Irvine, secretary for resources development, only has 19 staff members, including a chauffeur.

"Your ministry can't have much importance in the light of the government otherwise it would have much more support staff and be doing a much better job," he said.

The government wanted $20 million to establish a giant recreation centre at Maple Mountain north of North Bay "for the rich and the wealthy" that would be funded by public money.

Mr. Bain said another area of concern in the north is the forest industry where it appears there is a "tremendous urge to convert our northern forests into hard currency" at the expense of future benefits.

Mr. Irvine said the government recognizes there is a great potential for tourist development in the north but there is no way any decision on a project such as Maple Mountain would be made unless such an operation would be viable.

The minister said Ontario has a good forest management program to ensure timber for future years. He said the government is aware of the importance of the forest industry where employment in the northern and eastern parts of the province is concerned.

On another matter, Mr. Irvine said a plan to create new jobs in Armstrong, Ont., to replace jobs lost with the closing of the federal government's radar base in the town, north of Thunder Bay, collapsed because of lack of local interest, and workers may have to be recruited in other communities.

Mr. Irvine said the province persuaded Domtar Ltd. to create 50 jobs as a substitute for jobs lost and provided approval of a major timber cutting program on Crown lands to tie in with expansion of its mill at Red Rock, about 45 miles northeast of Thunder Bay.

The province has started to build access roads into the logging area.

Mr. Irvine said that when Domtar announced it was moving into the area, 124 people said they were interested in working for it. Of the total, 62 kept medical appointments, and 39 were hired, he said.

"Of those 39 workers, seven did not report for work, 29 quit and six were discharged, leaving only 17 on the payroll when operations ceased Sept. 13 because of the pulp and paper industry strike."

Festiv' Art '75 — A Unique Show

COWANSVILLE, Que. (CP) — Festiv'Art '75 was a unique concept in art shows: Every one of the more than 300 works displayed was done by someone serving a prison sentence somewhere.

The recent exhibit at the Cowansville medium-security institution, 50 miles southeast of Montreal, featured representative works from across Canada and around the world. Countries such as Haiti, Brazil, Germany and the United States were among those represented.

Cowansville prisoners organized the exhibition and did the two months of planning needed to bring their exhibition into reality.

The works displayed ranged from sophisticated oils on canvas to ceramics, leather craft and sculpture. Most of the prisoners whose works were displayed are self-taught artists.

There was irony at Festiv'Art: the exhibition was displayed in "the hole"—a large room with tiny cells behind it. Prisoners are sent to these solitary cells for two or three days at a time for such misdemeanors as swearing at a guard, disobeying orders or refusing to work.

One such cell was open for public viewing.

The progressive arts and crafts program at Cowansville is not the only creative outlet open to prisoners. There is also a live theatre group and a film program organized by Ted Preston, social development director.

At an assembly in the institution gymnasium, prizes and scholarships up to $500 in value were awarded to Cowansville prisoners for their artistic and literary achievements.

Liberals Agree Party Must Steer a Middle Road Course

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Four candidates for the leadership of the Ontario Liberal party spoke at an Oakville Liband all agreed the party must steer a middle course in the next provincial election.

On the platform were Albert Roy, MPP for Ottawa East; David Peterson, MPP for London Centre; Dr. Stuart Smith, MP Pfer Hamilton West; and Mark MacGuigan, MP for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. Roy said the party must prove to the electors there is still room at the centre. "We must prove we have a social conscience but are not ready for government control."

The New Democrats said Mr. Peterson, who will officially declare his candidacy Friday, will look after the labor unions and the Progressive Conservatives will look after big business and "It is up to us to look down the middle."

Dr. Smith said it is up to the Liberals to project the "little man," not only from big business but from big labor unions. The party, he said, must take a fundamental approach and support small business. "Profit is not a dirty word," he added.

Mr. MacGuigan, several hours late arriving when his plane was delayed by a snowstorm in Ottawa, said the Liberals must prove they are the only alternative.

Mr. MacGuigan and Mr. Roy differed on the question of law and order.

Mr. MacGuigan said the most effective deterrent to crime is the fear of being caught. He said Ontario is not doing a good job of law enforcement and 50 per cent of criminals never get caught.

Mr. Roy, a former Crown attorney in Ottawa, disagreed. "It's one thing to get caught and another to have the courts let you go," he said. He said witnesses and jurors must be paid more than the $6 a day they now get and that busy courts, which necessitate plea bargaining, must be eliminated.

All four speakers referred to the problems they will face in convincing voters the Ontario Liberals are a separate entity from the federal party.

All candidates fielded questions from the gathering of about 100 persons. Dr. Smith said doctors should be paid for diagnosis rather than for office visits.

He said a simple case of chicken pox, for example, would bring a smaller fee than would a more serious disease or illness. He charged that deterrent fees as suggested by the Conservatives would harm those who are elderly or seriously ill.

Mr. Roy said the health system is too important to be left entirely with doctors.

The candidates will speak again tonight in Waterloo in the first of a series of meetings sponsored by the party.

Larry Condon, MP for Middlesex London-Lambton; Ted Culp, a Toronto schoolteacher, and Michael Hutton of Mississauga, an advertising executive, are also candidates.

Farmers Buy Crop Insurance

TRURO, N.S. (CP) — More farmers than ever are buying Nova Scotia crop insurance, says Donald MacNeil, manager of the Nova Scotia Crop Insurance Commission.

Mr. MacNeil said close to $700,000 has been paid out in claims during the last three years.

Farmers once were reluctant to purchase crop insurance because they wouldn't be able to collect unless they lost their whole crop, he said.

This year, many corn harvesters who harvested only half of their crop due to dry growing conditions are being paid claims.

Worst hit this year were corn, spring grain, peas, beans and blueberries. Mr. MacNeil expected that more than $200,000 in insurance claims would be paid out on these crops.

Even though many crops suffered during the drought, no claims are expected this year from apple and tobacco growers, who had some of the best crops in years.

Canadian Woman Blasts Sakharov for Hypocrisy

MOSCOW (AP) — On the day Andrei Sakharov was to receive the Nobel Peace Prize in absentia, a leading Soviet newspaper mounts a fresh attack on the dissident physicist in the form of a letter from a Canadian woman.

The letter, published in Literaturnaya Gazeta, was from Mary Dawson, "a known progressive writer," says the paper. She is not identified further.

The letter accused Sakharov, fellow Nobel laureate Alexander Solzhenitsyn and their Western supporters of hypocrisy in claiming that the Soviet Union violates human rights while they ignore violations in the West.

"In receiving the Nobel Peace Prize, you have one more weapon from capitalist countries to circulate a myth of oppression in the Soviet Union, the letter says.

Sakharov is not correct, the letter says, when he claims that non-Russian minorities in the Soviet Union are discriminated against.

The Canadian writer says she visited several national minorities in Siberia last summer and "I was convinced that they live as well as Russians."

True discrimination is felt by the West's minorities, like Canada's Indian population, which "were killed by the millions," she says. "Those who are left die slowly of poverty and depravation."

Those who fight for human rights for the Canadian Indians would never receive a Nobel Prize "because the West would never recognize any violations of human right in capitalist countries," she says.

The letter says that Solzhenitsyn, a Nobel winner in literature who was expelled from the Soviet Union last year, would never speak out on discrimination in the West because "he is a millionaire living in luxury who closes his eyes to the terrible situation of our national minorities."

The letter hints that the Canadian government would have treated Solzhenitsyn in a similar fashion as the Soviet government.

If he had spoken out against discrimination when he visited Canada last year, the letter says, he would have been forced to become silent or would have faced the possibility of being expelled.

The Soviet press has slagged a constant attack against Sakharov since the October announcement that he won the Nobel Prize for his championship of human rights in the Soviet Union.

He was to have received the prize Wednesday in Oslo, but Soviet authorities refused to grant him a visa, claiming security reasons because of his secret work in nuclear physics. He was one of the developers of the Soviet hydrogen bomb.

His wife Yelena, in the West for eye treatment, was to accept the award for him in the Norwegian capital.

Sakharov's Wife Accepts Nobel Prize

OSLO (AP) — Andrei Sakharov's wife accepted the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize for her husband today and read a message from him saying he shared the honor with "all prisoners of conscience in the Soviet Union and in other Eastern European countries as well as with all those who fight for their liberation."

King Olav and other members of the Norwegian royal family watched as Yelena Sakharov received the prize cheque, gold medal and diploma from Aase Lionaes, the chairman of the Norwegian parliamentary committee which nominated the Soviet nuclear physicist for his fight for human rights in the Soviet Union.

Later today, at companion 75th anniversary ceremonies in Stockholm, Sweden, the other five 1975 Nobel Prizes were to be presented to 10 scientists and Italian poet Eugenio Montale, the winner of the Prize for Literature. Special guests there were 70 previous laureates and all of last year's science prize winners.

Sakharov, the first Russian to win the Peace Prize, was unable to receive it in person because the Soviet government refused to let him leave his country. His wife was able to attend because she was in Italy for medical treatment.

The statement she read was in addition to her 54-year-old husband's Nobel address, which she will read for him at another ceremony Thursday night.

"For all those who went through the experience of the most terrible war in history, Second World War," Sakharov's statement said, "the conception of war as the worst catastrophe and evil for all mankind has become not only an abstract idea but a deep personal feeling, the basis for one's entire outlook on the world."

"To keep one's self respect one must therefore act in accordance with the general human longing for peace, for true detente, for genuine disarmament. This is the reason why I am so deeply moved by your appreciation of my activity as a contribution to peace."

Sakharov said the award of the peace prize is "a person who defends political and civil rights against illegal and arbitrary actions means an affirmation of principles which play such an important role in determining the future of mankind."

He said the Nobel committee has performed "an act of intellectual courage and great equity" by granting the prize to "a man whose ideas do not coincide with official concepts of the leadership of a big and powerful state."

Captain Canuck Creator Plans to Cash in on Image

WINNIPEG (CP) — If the plans of Richard Comely are fulfilled, fans of Captain Canuck will be able to wrap his well-muscled torso around their necks, plant his iron-jawed face on their heads and even use his imposing frame to frighten away would-be thieves at lunch.

Comely, the co-creator of the comic book character, hopes to introduce a complementary line of merchandise in the near future to cash in on the success of his God-fearing superhero. Included in a long list of items that feature the Captain in various muscle-bound stances are leaves, toenail clippings, Halloween costumes and an electronic game pitting Captain Canuck against a villainous robot. Already in existence are Captain Canuck pens, posters and coloring books.

Despite what appears to be a preoccupation with marketing Captain Canuck, paraphernalia the 25-year-old Comely maintains that producing a 100-per-cent Canadian comic book without over-emphasizing violence is his paramount concern.

"I think that American comic books are overdoing the theme of violence to such an extent that kids become hardened to other people's dilemmas."

Comely's vehement opposition to unnecessary violence, not only in comic books but the media in general, prompted him to print as article about the effects of violence on children in the second instalment of Captain Canuck.

Comely says reaction to his anti-violent stance from American readers has been particularly favorable.

"They like the puritanism. They're glad to see I've been conscientious about the content I put in it."

The enthusiasm by U.S. comic book fans seems to have spilled over into the Canadian market. Comely says 90 per cent of the 113,000 issues of the first edition distributed last July were sold, most of them soon after appearing on the newsstands. Issue No 2 appeared last month and is scheduled for mid-December.

"The reaction is tremendous. The comic book was walking into stores and within three hours, they were gone."

Comely meets the success of Captain Canuck with apparent aplomb.

"I wouldn't have started it unless I thought it would be successful. I had faith it would work out. There were disappointments and frustrating moments when I thought it would be over the next day, but I guess it's the same in any business."

Devoting more time to the financial affairs of the organization has forced Comely to hire two illustrators and abandon some of the artwork duties, although he still writes all the stories.

"The business side of it is something I just want to get out of the way. Once it's done, I want to return to just drawing and writing."

One lesson the fledgling businessman learned was to expect the unexpected.

"The postal strike has hurt us a lot," he says. "Up until the postal strike, we had 1,300 subscription orders. I was reading a statement of Batman's subscription lists which said that he has only [illegible] subscriptions. And that's for an established [illegible]

Nova Scotia Handled 34 Malpractice Suits

HALIFAX (CP) — About 34 malpractice suits were handled in Nova Scotia courts last year, says William Mingo, a Halifax lawyer.

Mr. Mingo told a meeting of the Nova Scotia Medical Society that there is a significant difference between how Canadian and United States courts assess damages in malpractice suits.

In the U.S., damages are assessed by juries and in Nova Scotia they are usually assessed by a judge.

It is generally possible to persuade juries, he said, and it is difficult to have their decisions set aside. In Canada, even when the damages are assessed by a jury they can be adjusted by the judge

Mr. Mingo said judges in Canada would never let juries make the kind of awards which are made in the U.S.

Dr. N. F. Brown, president of the Canadian Medical Protective Association, said cases in the U.S. are usually settled out of court by the doctors' insurance companies but in Canada they have fought it in court whenever they felt the doctor was not at fault.

He said malpractice suits in the U.S. are "an iniquitous practice, where much of the damage goes to the legal profession and not to the patients where it belongs."

Thailand Village Has Advanced Technology

BAN CHIENG, Thailand (AP)—They built no cities, erected no monuments and probably fought no wars, but the nameless people who lived in this quiet village 4,000 years ago may have had the most technically advanced society in the world.

A leaf-shaped spearhead found recently 12 feet under Ban Chieng should "absolutely prove that bronze technology emerged in this area about 4,000 BC," says archaeologist Chester German of the University of Pennsylvania.

That is about 1,000 years earlier than the Mideast bronze culture that used to be thought the earliest, and bronze bracelets and tools found previously in Ban Chieng have already spurred controversy among scholars.

But German's main concern is piecing together a broader portrait of a people before it is too late; for two years the burly, red-bearded American and his Thai partner Pisit Charoenwongsa have been digging at Ban Chieng in a slow, painstaking race of science against greed.

Hundreds of prehistoric pots, painted with hypnotic, fingerprint-like whorls of brick red, have been found near the surface of Ban Chieng and dozens of other sites on Thailand's northeast plateau in the last nine years.

They have stimulated a brisk illegal trade in antiquities.

Villagers learned that pots they once used for slopping hogs could be sold to agents and collectors, and they began mining the historical treasures beneath their homes. Despite laws, many Ban Chieng pots have turned up in foreign shops and auction houses priced in the thousands of dollars.

"It's a real problem, and nobody's doing anything to stop it," said German. If it isn't stopped, we're going to lose an awful lot of sites—we've already lost an awful lot."

Losing the pots is not so serious, he said, because of their profusion. But the amateur excavators scramble the layers of earth that allow archeologists to make history out of bits of stone, bone, metal and pottery.

The latest Ban Chieng dig is in a lane, because almost everything else in the mound that supports the village has already been despoiled.

"The red and white period is not so important to us any more because we've learned that it's only 500 to 1,000 BC," said German. "What we want to learn is where these people came from and why."

Toronto Teachers Continue Strike

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

About 4,800 high school teachers in Metropolitan Toronto continues a strike which began Nov. 12 while 1,600 secondary school teachers in the nearby Brampton area were to vote today on their board's latest contract proposal.

The Brampton area teachers had rejected an earlier offer which was in excess of federal anti-inflation guidelines.

In Chatham, Ont., about 600 high school teachers with the Kent County board of education prepared for the last day of a four-day strike. They are to return to their classrooms Friday on a work-to-rule basis.

Negotiations between the Metro Toronto school board and its striking teachers continued through the night Wednesday under three provincial mediators who entered the dispute six days ago in an effort to start a new round of bargaining between the two sides.

One of the mediators, George Adams, vice-chairman of the Ontario Labor Relations Board, said neither side has formally moved from the bargaining position it held when the strike began.

When the last round of mediation broke off Nov. 14, teachers were seeking a 43.9-per-cent increase in a two-year contract plus a cost-of-living allowance.

The board's latest contract offer of a 29.5-per-cent increase was rejected by the teachers before the federal anti-inflation review board ruled last month that the offer was in excess of federal anti-inflation controls. The strike, in its fifth week, has disrupted classes for about 160,000 students.

In Brampton, negotiators for high school teachers under the Peel board of education said Wednesday the teachers, voting today, should reject the board's latest offer because acceptance means they will have no way to fight anti-inflation board rulings except through the courts.

John Paisley, board lawyer, said Tuesday that despite federal controls, the board may grant large salary increases to its teachers because the British North America Act gives the province exclusive rights over education.

Details of the tentative agreement have not been released, but board officials say it is not much different from Thursday night's two weeks ago of a 31.6-per-cent increase over one year. The board has agreed to support the tentative contract before the anti-inflation board if the teachers vote to ratify it.

Alex O'Brien, chairman of the Kent County board of education, said Wednesday that when teachers there return to schools Friday on a work-to-rule basis the board will review the situation daily but probably will keep schools open.

Under new provincial legislation governing collective bargaining for teachers, work-to-rule campaigns are described as strike action and boards of education are given the right to close schools when their operation is disrupted.

Schools have remained open during the strike, which began Monday, and about 20 teachers crossed picket lines set up Wednesday at the board office and the 11 schools affected.

Gary Bonner, member of the provincial bargaining team for the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation (OSSTF), said Wednesday that the board asked negotiators for the teachers to participate in informal discussions but did not ask for a resumption of negotiations which broke off Nov. 20.

Mr. O'Brien said earlier in the day that the board tried unsuccessfully Tuesday to resume negotiations but the OSSTF indicated that until more money was offered bargaining would not take place.

The board is offering a 33-per-cent increase and teachers are seeking 52 per cent.

Meanwhile Education Minister Thomas Wells said Wednesday in the legislature, that a charge of back-lash bargaining laid against the province by teachers in Ontario schools for the deaf and blind will be heard in due course by the education relations commission.

Mr. Wells said the government's policy is that any final offer made by Ontario before Oct. 14 will remain the same.

He said the teachers received an offer of an 18-per-cent increase prior to the introduction of wage and price controls on that date.

The minister also said most Metro Toronto high school students whose parents pay assessments on property owned in other areas of the province have a right to attend schools in those communities while Metro Toronto teachers remain on strike.

Mr. Wells said he will help their children legally fulfill the requirements of the Education Act.

Canadian Company Develops Computer

RICHMOND, B.C. (CP) — A Canadian-owned company says it has made a significant breakthrough in the computer industry with a unique mechanism called the Epic data collection system.

Ebco Industries Ltd., based in this Vancouver-area municipality, says the new invention is unique because of compactness and the number of simultaneous electronic functions performed.

Ebco says its new device can be adapted quickly and with relative simplicity to virtually any kind of business, industry, enterprise or operation.

It can be used to monitor patients in an intensive treatment ward; be the heart of a hotel security and service system where punch cards would replace room keys; or monitor security, production, time flow and quality control in a factory.

The latest model for the data collection unit is half the size of a typewriter.

Helmut Eppich, who with his brother Hugo began the Ebco group of companies in 1964, says the new development is a case of a subsidiary industry arising from an internal need.

The company searched for more efficient methods to assemble data for its own purposes—dealing with inventory, payroll, quality control, production, material handling—but found nothing on the market that fulfilled its requirements.

"We decided to develop a system for ourselves," said Mr. Eppich. "In the process of searching for a new and sophisticated data assembling and processing system, we came up with some innovations which have application to virtually every data acquisition problem anywhere."

He says production will begin at the end of the year and about 10,000 data collecting terminals will be produced annually.

The terminal is designed so that no special skills are needed to enter data. It can be used by workmen on the factory floor, or in the office or stockroom. Data can be stored on tapes, cartridges, discs or other memory systems.

At Ebco, the terminal is used to initiate and follow the progress of a job. Built into the production control process is a security control, a time-keeping function, inventory control, and quality and material handling control. It also triggers an alarm system in the event of a breach of security or incorrect input of information.

Mr. Eppich says the company is aware it is entering a highly competitive field, "but we think we have something better at this time, call it a better mouse trap."

Ebco developed its reputation on an ability to fabricate unusual pieces of equipment to specification and at competitive prices. Past developments have not begun as Ebco inventions or designs.

Hugo Eppich says diversification continues to be the company's strategy.

"It happens in two ways. First we look for subsidiary companies to feed our existing complex of companies. Second, we look for new situations not necessarily related to our existing operations, but with the kind of potential we know we can deal with."

Canada's NATO Land Troops Will Have Better Tanks, Artillery

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister James Richardson has told his NATO colleagues of efforts underway to make Canadian land forces in Europe a more effective brigade group.

Speaking this week at the Brussels ministerial meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, he said the 2,500-member Canadian land element will have more and better tanks and artillery.

The speech added more details to the forces modernization announcement Mr. Richardson made here last week.

He said the plan of improving artillery, which the department said will cost $2.25 million over the next 18 months, He also talked of reinforcement proposals to bring the brigade up to war footing in a crisis.

A department spokesman said the minister's speech means the land element is being beefed up from its present status of "reduced brigade" to what the minister called a full brigade group.

He said studies now are underway on some slight changes made necessary by the brigade having more tanks and other things that it now has.

The minister's announcement of improvements when other countries are talking of making cuts resulted in unusual praise in the meeting's final communique.

Mr. Richardson later told reporters a country has not been singled out for praise this way in many years, if ever.

The minister, who has heard strong continuing complaints about the condition of the Canadian European force, said the new policy has been accepted by cabinet and public.

Partly because of its outmoded equipment the force has had a reserve role on the central front. No plans have been announced of a future change in that role after the force acquires new tanks.

Mr. Richardson announced in Canada that the government will provide its forces either with a new tank or a completely refitted Centurion tank. He said in Brussels that the Royal Canadian Dragoons will have three squadrons of 15 tanks each in place of the present two.

Province Takes Interest in Quinte Trail

New facilities may be available this winter for cross-country skiing in the Hastings County countryside.

The reason: Provincial government interest in the potential of the Quinte-Hastings Recreation Trail (QHRT) for creating easily-accessible ski loops.

As QHRT directors see it, the trail — which winds across Hastings and Prince Edward counties — could become a winter woodlands spine for the loops.

In Belleville Wednesday they talked with an official from the natural resources ministry's Napanee district office.

As a result a survey of possible loop sites will be made this week along the trail in Sidney, Thurlow and Rawdon township.

Jim Staveley, QHRT president and secretary Grant Harvey will soon discuss similar surveys with officials in the ministry's Tweed and Trenton district districts.

If such projects prove feasible, says Mr. Staveley, the ministry is contemplating funding preparation and maintenance of loop sites by the QHRT.

If such hopes are borne out it could be a minor — but significant — breakthrough as far as the trail's volunteer initiators are concerned.

Ever since government has finally recognized why the trail was originally conceived — to meet a demand for recreation land in the rural outdoors, Mr. Staveley,

Early Planning Under Way On Century Place Second Phase

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Preliminary plans now are being formulated for the second phase of Century Place, a spokesman for Belle-Bridge Developments Ltd. said Wednesday.

Brian Holmes said details of the second phase are sketchy as plans are still in the formative stages. Zb Zeidler, responsible for the design of the first phase, was on the site

The Long Journey

Joseph and Mary, portrayed by deaf students Ralph Baxter and Florence Lance of the Sir Mackenzie Whitney School production, make the long journey to Bethlehem for the Nativity, an annual Christmas pageant more than 30 years old at the school. It will be presented Dec. 12 and 13 at 8:15 in the gymnatorium.

County Watching Studies

Council's municipal reform committee reported to council this week it awaits "with interest" the recommendations of such analyses.

County restructuring studies are still under way in Lennox and Addington to the east and Northumberland on the west.

The committee, headed by Reeve Barbara Allen of Tweed, said its policy is not to interfere in any decision-making process of the neighboring counties unless any of the recommendations affect Hastings.

It also reminded council that a provincial Special Program Review recommended postponement of any further plans for regional governments or restructured counties.

Woman Charged

Penelope Smith, 22, of 37 Fawood Cres. in R.R. 7, Belleville has been charged with failing to yield to consideration with a car-truck collision late Monday on Highway 62 in Montrose Rd. just west of Belleville.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville say a Volkswagen was turning east onto the highway from Montrose Rd. when it collided with a westbound 1971-model international tractor trailer driven by Wayne Douglas Sharpe, 29, of 82 Marmora St. in Trenton and owned by Canadian Pacific Express of Toronto.

Health Unit Not Exempt From Financial Restraints

News that Ontario health facilities will not be excluded from constraints on all provincial government expenditures in 1976 has the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Board of Health in a quandary.

The board, Wednesday, perused a notice from deputy minister of health S.W. Martin who said in next year's health unit budget, "costs of purchased goods and services will not be accepted at any level which exceeds 10 per cent over the approved 1975 budget."

"It is expected that where cuts are necessary, in the first instance, there will affect administrative items, e.g. administrative staff, travel and conference expenses, rather than direct services," Mr. Martin noted.

However, it is the second and greater instance which concern the board.

Mr. Martin said, "definite reductions in the volume of services will have to be made and reductions in number of staff will have to take place on a selective basis in order to live within the funding limits available."

He added no increase in ministry funding will be allowed for new programs or expansion of services and the ministry will not accept requests for staff increases.

Threatened reduction of services particularly worried Dr. Dennis A. Warrick, health unit director of dental services, who announced in October a list of dental service standards, including some expanded elementary school services, for 1975-76.

Dr. Warrick pointed out the irony of the situation to the board. He elaborated that during the past few years, the health unit has faithfully followed the ministry guidelines to upgrade and increase services.

"Now they (services) are going to be chopped," he remarked.

He suggested the board should go to the ministry with a justification of health unit programs in operation at present.

"Elected people, people on boards, should take a stand on a letter like this," commented Ald. Jean Smith of Belleville. "They (ministry officials) are not looking at the services we have."

Driver Charged

RAWDON — A Stirling man has been charged with careless driving after he lost control of his vehicle on the 4th Concession Rd. of Rawdon Township Tuesday.

Charged is Arthur Ross Gounard, 21, of RR 1 Stirling.

A spokesman for the Madoc Ontario Provincial Police said the southbound vehicle went out of control entered the south ditch, travelling for 400 feet in the ditch, crossed over the highway entering the north ditch and struck a hydro pole and two fence posts.

Community to Benefit from Sentences of Two City Youths

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Two 17-year-old Belleville youths were ordered by Provincial Court Judge J.L. Clendenning here today to perform 1,400 hours of service to the community during the next 36 months of their three-year probation.

James Robert Bateman and Dennis Allan Davis, both of 166 Station St., had been charged with various counts of break, enter and theft in connection with break-ins at several Belleville area business establishment this year.

The incidents culminated with an Aug. 17 break-in at Motorland Chrysler Plymouth Ltd. at 250 North Front St. during which $7,000 in damage was caused.

Bateman pleaded guilty to nine counts of break — enter and theft and one count of possession of property obtained by crime and Davis was found guilty on eight counts of break, enter and theft.

Judge Clendenning commented that during the probation period, the maximum allowed under the Criminal Code, the two youths will each reserve about 10 hours per week to "perform such services to the community as may be directed by the probation officer."

He explained the number of hours for each youth was determined by dividing each youth's share of the estimated total damage by Ontario's minimum wage of $2.40 per hour.

Judge Clendenning also ordered the youths to observe a curfew of 10 p.m. each night except where their community service work might interfere.

In addition, he ordered them to continue to attend secondary school, remain in the jurisdiction of the court, keep the peace and be of good behaviour and report monthly to their probation officer as required.

He told them their sentencing is part of a new program of community-oriented sentencing which has seen success in Belleville in the past year by being a deterrent to recidivism by young criminal offenders who are placed under the guidance of community volunteer agencies.

Judge Clendenning said Davis could have received a maximum of 112 years in prison and Bateman could have been sent to prison for 128 years but he added, "those limits are unacceptable in the case of these accused."

He pointed out incarceration would "only result in engender recidivism" and would cost the public $14,000 per year.

Glass Job Complete

The last of dozens of pieces of reflective and smoked glass were hoisted into position on Century Place three this week. A spokesman for the developers said now the exterior is almost com-plete workmen will begin interior decorating to suit tenants. Already, the second phase of Century Place is being considered with preliminary plans now being prepared.

'Clearing House' Approach Rejected by Centre Heads

Quinte Information and Assistance Centre directors Wednesday refused to act on a clearing house concept for such complaints as suggested by staff member Bill Hockley Wednesday.

Opposition to the idea was led by director Doug Sword, also president of the Quinte District Labor Council.

Mr. Sword said by permitting such action, the board would become an agency of the government, essentially doing someone else's work.

Complaints to the Ottawa board are an individual responsibility, and one out of the jurisdiction of the centre, he said.

As proposed by Mr. Hockley, the centre could collect complaints and act as an intermediary, sending standard complaint forms regularly to the board in Ottawa.

Both Mr. Hockley and director Vern Farrow argued the concept was within the centre's charter, but the board decided to postpone any action.

It was agreed to wait until additional information is available from the anti-inflation board on its requirements.

Likewise, the same concept, applied to the proposed Ontario government rent review boards, was set aside by the centre board, despite arguments by Mr. Farrow that Quinte residents now had no known group to turn to for help.

Chief Won't Name Deputy

CANNIFTON — Thurlow Township Council Wednesday: "I have two good captains," and said he doesn't feel a deputy chief is necessary. The department has halls in Point Anne and Corbyville.

City Ski Program Shy of Participants

Participation in this winter's city ski program hasn't exactly been as scarce as snow on the slopes in September.

But response so far to the annual project run by the city's recreation department hasn't blown up like a blizzard either.

As yet, applications haven't been as numerous as hoped, says recreation director Gerald Belch. There is still plenty of space in both classes — for beginners and advanced skiers.

There's no apparent reason for the slacker response this year. But part of it could be the weather — which hadn't the look of winter until this week.

Now, with the first heavy snow on the ground, thoughts may turn more easily on skis, says Mr. Belch.

The eight-week program has been successful for the past three at the Batawa Ski Club.

Skiing starts Jan. 6 for beginners and Jan. 6 for advanced skiers.

Bus pickups will be at the YMCA, the recreation centre and Quinte Secondary School.

Inflation — including higher costs of transportation — has boosted fees this year — from $16 to $22, says Mr. Belch. The charge for out-of-city residents is $27.50.

Car, Train Collide

TWEED — No one was injured early today in a car-train collision about 10 miles west of here. Damage was estimated by Ontario provincial police in excess of $1,000.

Police say a vehicle driven by Harold Smith, 46, of Scarborough, Ont. was in collision with a CNR train which was northbound on a line about two miles north of Bonarlaw.

Police say the visibility at the scene collision was poor. Police said there was no damage to the train.

November Bad Month

Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) at Belleville investigated six fatal motor vehicle collisions during the past three months in Nov. 20 in which nine people were killed.

November was the worth month for all types of traffic accidents with seven persons killed in four fatal collisions, the OPP report.

October was free of fatalities but September produced two fatal collisions with a passenger and a pedestrian killed.

November saw 30 personal injury collisions while September had 21 and October 13. A total of 43 people were injured in November but only 34 in September and 22 in October.

The total number of collisions showed November leading the way by a large margin with 94, September with 72 and October with 67.

Two Hurt In Crash

A North Park St. man has been charged by city police for failure to obey a red light following a two-car collision at the intersection of Victoria and Church St. Wednesday morning.

Charged is Ernest C. Roberts of 20 North Park St.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said today the Roberts vehicle was eastbound on Victoria when it failed to stop at a red light at the Church St. intersection and was in collision with a southbound vehicle driven by Francis Badgley of RR 1 Shannonville.

Two passengers in the Roberts vehicle, Robert Hayward of Forin St., and Elizabeth Roberts were treated at Belleville General Hospital for minor injuries.

Thieves Leave Empty-handed

Police today reported nothing was stolen when thieves broke into the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club sometime during Tuesday night. Entry was gained by forcing a south side window, said police.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said the thieves return not reported until Wednesday.

Library Extends Service

CANNIFTON — As of Jan. 1, Thurlow Township residents will be able to become full members of Belleville Library.

Thurlow Township Council Wednesday passed a motion allowing Reeve Hogace Casey sign an agreement with Belleville Library Board to allow approximately 6,500 township residents full membership privileges.

The agreement between Belleville Library Board and Thurlow Township Council, making up Thurlow Township Library board, came as a result of a $9,000 grant from Ontario ministry of culture and recreation.

Reeve Casey said the grant, awarded at a rate of $1.50 per capita, will be turned over the Belleville library in return for membership privileges.

Donations to Centre Soon Tax Deductable

Donations to the Quinte Information and Assistance Centre will shortly be tax deductable, the centre's board learned Wednesday.

In a letter from Revenue Canada, the centre learned it qualified for registration with the federal government as a non-profit charitable organization.

As such, it will be able to issue receipts suitable for exemptions on income tax forms.

Revenue Canada said a number under which the centre will issue receipt will be forthcoming shortly.

Director Farrow said they see the tax exempt forms as an inducement to donations, needed as a source of funds to supplement present operating grants.

The centre, which has a checkered history of acquiring grants, recently was given a $15,000 grant from the federal ministry of consumer and corporate affairs.

It currently operates under a $12,000 grant from the same ministry.

Getting Into the Act

Barbara Howard got in the act at Glanmore House puppet show Wednesday night . . . although she wasn't always visible. The 12-year-old was among backstage puppeteers helping with the show as part of the museum's week-long Christmas program.

Firefighters (from left to right), Dan Bowers, Grant Parks and Larry Fritz, pose with the array of trophies that will be awarded Saturday at the conclusion of the Belleville Firefighters Second Annual Invitational Wrestling Tournament at Centennial Secondary School. Over 300 entries will be on hand for the meet which begins at 10 a.m. and will continue on into the evening.

300 Wrestlers In Tournament

Three hundred wrestlers will invade Belleville Saturday for the Second Annual Belleville Firefighters Invitational Wrestling Tournament to be held at Centennial Secondary School. The entry numbers have more than doubled for this year's meet.

"... And some schools had to be turned down," explained organizer of the event, Larry Fritz.

A total of 19 schools ranging from Toronto, Kingston, Pembroke and Ottawa along with local wrestling teams will be taking part in the event. Last year, in the first meet 120 wrestlers took part from nine schools.

"Next year it may be as big or bigger than the Montreal Open," noted Fritz.

Preparations are already being made for next year's event.

"Next year there will be at least double the number of entries and we may have to spread it over two days," said Fritz.

Last year's grand champion team from Cobourg East High School will be back to defend their title and try to make it two years in a row. This year the school will be sending a team of 22 wrestlers, six short of the maximum of 28 is two per weight class.

The awards this year will be the same as last, a trophy for first, second and third place and a ribbon for fourth. The final tournament is the only wrestling meet in Ontario including the All Ontario wrestling finals for high schools, that gives out trophies, say organizers.

The bad point system will be used in scoring. This means that a wrestler has to accumulate a designated number of points before he is eliminated from competition. Wrestling is set to begin at 10 a.m. Saturday morning and continue on into the evening. Price of admission for the meet is 75 cents for students and 50 cents for adults.

Trojans and Nicks Get Wins

KENT MANNING

Moira Secondary School Trojans bounced back from an eight point half time deficit Wednesday night to defeat Centennial Chargers 54-43 in the opening game of the Senior A Basketball Doubleheader.

The Trojans, sparked by forward Kent Manning's 23 points, earned a share of second place in the standings with a 2-1 record.

While Manning was taking care of offence, Mike Thompson was keying Moira's defence and it was the defence that made the difference in the second half as the Chargers were held to just 23 points. Scott Simson added 19 points to the Trojans' attack and John Lowe got eight. Thompson checked in with six.

The Chargers, who were in front 20-22 after the opening two periods, got an excellent two way effort from Dennis Kamada. He popped 13 points, as did John Long, and John Hipwell scored 10.

NCC 48, BCI 38

The Nicks and the Collegians spent the first half of the contest playing tight defensive ball. Neither could afford to make mistakes so both made sure on every scoring opportunity. These tactics led to a 22-22 deadlock at half time.

But it was the Nicks who got the jump in the second half and rolled up 13 consecutive third quarter points before BCI could get on track.

Dale Wilson led the Nicholson charge with 15 points and Jeff Boyle counted eight. Guard, Bruce Collins came up with 12.

The Collegians closed the gap to 33-30, but that was as close as they could get. Veteran forward Brian Bell had 14 points and John Guthrie scored eight. Mike Kirby was next with six.

Cats Aiming To Gain Ground

Belleville Bobcats, third in the eastern division, get a chance to close the gap on second place Oshawa Friday when they play host to North York Rangers who are last in the Metro Junior B Hockey League's central section.

The game will mark the first time Bobcats have met a central division club this season.

"We're going to go out and play our game," says Bonnar. "We are due for a good one. We have not been playing too well lately," observes the coach.

Bobcats have a win and a tie to show in their last six starts.

Still missing from the Belleville lineup will be Paul Tilley. He's slated to return to action Sunday when the team visits Bramalea Blues.

Lancers' Late Bid Short of Mark

Loyalist College Lancers outscored St. Lawrence College six Blue by six points in the second half of their Eastern Ontario College Athletic contest Wednesday, but it still wasn't enough to give the locals a victory.

The Lancers, down 43-28 at the half, lost 72-64, their fourth of the season. That upped their record at 4-4.

Bruce Sheen powered the Big Blue onslaught scoring 27 points, 15 of those in the first half. Mike Sequin was held at bay in the second half as he counted just one point, but his 13 points first half effort was enough to make him Kingston's second high scorer for the game.

The Lancers, once again, got a fine effort from first year player Ken Fairbank. He checked in with 19 points.

Centre Dave Culmer and forward Jim Belfall each added 12 and Randy Starke had nine.

The Lancers play their final game before Christmas break tonight at 7 when Sir Sandford Fleming visits from Peterborough.

Thomas Marks His Return in Style

By GLENN COLE
The Canadian Press

Wayne Thomas played his first game on Montreal Forum ice in two years Wednesday night and the soft-spoken Toronto Maple Leafs goaltender said it was probably his best ever in Montreal.

Thomas, acquired by the Leafs from Montreal in a trade during the off-season, blocked 35 shots, helping Toronto to a 3-3 tie with the Canadiens in one of six National Hockey League games played.

In other action, Buffalo Sabres and New York Rangers battled to a 3-3 tie, Detroit Red Wings nipped Pittsburgh Penguins 3-2, Chicago Black Hawks bombed Washington Capitals 7-2, Los Angeles Kings topped St. Louis Blues 5-4 and Philadelphia Flyers tied California Golden Seals 1-1.

Guy Lapointe deflected John Van Boxmeer's shot from the right point with 2:32 remaining in the third period to give Montreal its tie, preserving the Canadiens unbeaten string at the Forum. The Canadiens are the only team in the NHL without a loss on their home ice this season and now have a 10-0-4 record at the Forum.

Yvan Cournoyer and Jacques Lemaire scored the other Montreal goals. Jim McKenny scored in the first period for the Leafs with Lanny McDonald getting two in the second before Toronto a 3-1 lead going into the final period.

"We kind of laid back in the third period and they came on," said Thomas, who sat out the 1974-75 season as Montreal's third-string netminder.

Thomas thought his best save came in the last minute of the second period when he stopped Peter Mahovlich.

"I enjoyed that save the most. I just waved my stick in the air and the puck hit it. I didn't even see who shot the puck.

"I never really played that well in the Forum when I was with the Canadiens. I played well on the road when I was with Montreal."

In New York, Gilbert Perreault beat New York's John Davidson on the goaltender's stick side with a 40-foot shot for his 15th goal with seven minutes remaining in the third period to give the Sabres their tie with the Rangers.

The Red Wings snapped a three-game losing streak and extended their home-ice unbeaten record to six game with the win over Pittsburgh.

Mickey Redmond tipped Nick Lapointe's shot with 5:31 remaining in the final period for the game-winning goal. Bill Hogaboam and Dennis Polonich were the other Detroit marks, men with Jean Pronovost and Lowell MacDonald replying for Pittsburgh.

MacDonald, shaken up in a first-period collision, left the game shortly after putting Pittsburgh ahead 3-2 with 38 seconds gone in the middle period. He ran into Detroit's Bryan Watson and suffered a possible broken thumb and an injured shoulder.

The game was rough in spots with referee Bob Kilger assessing 44 minutes in penalties in the second period as two fights broke out within a minute of each other.

Chicago's Grant Mulvey and Washington's Gordon Lane were assessed fighting majors at 10:47 and 44 seconds later. Darcy Rota of the Hawks and the Caps John Paddock were chased for spearing and fighting.

Centre Marcel Dionne scored a goal in each period to bring his total to 20 for the year and Rogatien Vachon recorded his third shutout of the season leading the Kings to their fifth consecutive win.

Oilers' Ullman Member Of Exclusive 500 Club

The Canadian Press

It isn't often a hockey player scores four goals in a game and has to share the spotlight.

That's exactly what happened to Tim Sheehy of Edmonton Oilers, who had his four-goal game on the same night teammate Norm Ullman joined hockey's exclusive 300-goal club.

Sheehy and Ullman helped the Oilers to a 7-4 win over the slumping Quebec Nordiques in a World Hockey Association game.

Ullman, who switched to the WHA this year after a 20-year stay in the National Hockey League with Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs, scored his ninth and 36th goals of the season in the third period after Quebec narrowed Edmonton's lead to one goal.

The Provost, Alta., native became the eighth player ever to score 300 major league goals in regular-season action, joining Gordie Howe, Bobby Hull, Frank Mahovlich, Maurice Richard, Phil Esposito, Jean Beliveau and Johnny Bucyk.

In Wednesday's other games, Winnipeg Jets edged Toronto Toros 6-5 in overtime, New England Whalers edged Minnesota Fighting Saints 3-2 and Indianapolis Racers shaded Phoenix Roadrunners 2-1.

Ullman's career has come full circle since he played junior for Edmonton Oil Kings and turned professional with Edmonton Oilers of the old Western Hockey League in 1956-57.

The big league career that began the following season with Detroit appeared to be near its end last year when he saw limited duty with the Leafs and finished with nine goals and 26 assists, his lowest totals since his rookie year.

But the return to his native province seems to have given him a second wind. Thursday's goals gave him 35 points for the season, making him Edmonton's top scorer.

Sheehy, a former U.S. college star, got two goals in each of the first two periods to increase his output for the season to 10 and give Edmonton a 4-1 lead.

The loss was the third in a row for the Nordiques, who were outshot 43-23 and dropped three points behind the Jets in the Canadian Division standings.

Winnipeg's Bobby Hull whistled a slap shot between the legs of Toronto goaltender Dave Tataryn in the first minute of overtime to give the Jets their win.

Tataryn, a rookie from Whitby Warriors of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series, relieved starter Mario Viau in the first period and played another outstanding game.

He was particularly effective against Hull in regulation play and stopped several point-blank shots. While the Toros were outscoring the Jets 5-1 in the third period to force the game into overtime, Tataryn blocked 18 shots.

Tom Webster's power-play goal midway in the final period enabled New England to end a three-game losing streak at Hartford. Rossire Paiement and Larry Pleau were the Whalers other scorers.

Brian McDonald scored during a goal-mouth scramble midway through the final period to give the Racers their win before a Phoenix crowd of 4,300.

Selects Show '67s How

OTTAWA (CP) — Moscow Selects scored their second victory of a Canadian tour Wednesday, defeating Ottawa 67s of the Ontario Hockey Association major junior A series 9-6.

It was a display of team versatility for 5,044 fans in the 9,500-seat Civic Centre as nine players scored for the Russians, who Tuesday defeated Nova Scotia Voyageurs of the professional American Hockey League 4-2.

It also was a revelation to the fans, used to rough and ready OHA junior hockey, as only eight penalties were called in the game—five of them to Russian players.

Boris Alexandrov, Vladimir Golikov and Serge Koter gave the Russian team a 2-2 first period advantage before Vladimir and Vladimir Repmov scored unanswered goals in the second.

Ottawa actually outscored Russian in the third period. Goals for Russia went to Alexander Bartnev, Vladimir Kovin and Alexei Volchenkov.

Ottawa goals were scored by Larry Skinner and Tom MacDonnell in the first period and by Paul Gardiner, with two, Peter Lee and Bruce Baker in the third.

The Selects outshot the 67s 45-34 on the game, Bob Daley and Jim Fraser split Ottawa goaltending duties while Victor Doroshenko was in goal for the Selects.

But while Russia outshot Ottawa 140 and 19-10 in the first two periods, Ottawa held a 15-12 advantage in the third period.

FOREMAN OPENS BID

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Former heavyweight champion George Foreman opens his bid for another shot against Mohammad Ali when he battles Ron Lyle in a 10-round bout at Las Vegas on Jan. 24. The announcement of the place and time came Wednesday at a news conference with both Foreman and Lyle attending. Financial arrangements of the Foreman-Lyle bout were not announced. Foreman, who will be 28 two days before the Las Vegas fight, lost his championship on an eighth-round knockout to Ali in Zaire, Africa, on Oct. 30, 1974. Lyle was stopped in his championship bid at Las Vegas last May 16.

Americans Keep Blowing Chances

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For the third time in eight nights, Rochester Americans blew a chance Wednesday night to take over first place in the Northern Division of the American Hockey League.

The Americans, who trail Nova Scotia Voyageurs, were frustrated by the goaltending of Ed Staniowski, who stopped 54 shots in a 4-1 victory by Providence Reds.

Staniowski, the top pick of St. Louis Blues of the National Hockey League in last spring's amateur draft, was a standout last season with Regina Pats of the Western Canada Hockey League.

In Wednesday's game, he alone contributed on offence, feeding the puck to Lynn Powis for an empty-net goal after Rochester pulled its netminder late in the game.

The goal was one of three for Powis. Jamie Masters had the other Providence goal while Ron Garwasiuk scored for Rochester.

Hershey Bears outlasted New Haven Night Hawks 6-7 in Wednesday's only other game. A line of Jean Gratton, Gary McAdam and Wayne Bianchin collaborated nine points to the Hershey attack. McAdam had two goals and an assist, Bianchin a goal and an assist and Gratton four assists.

Hershey led 7-1 after two periods, but the Hawks got six goals in the final period, three of them from Alain Langlais. Yves Bergeron scored what proved to be the winner for Hershey early in the period.

The win, the sixth in a row for Hershey, moved the Bears to within two points of first place Richmond Robins in the Southern Division.

Ron Snell, Steve Cardwell, Michel Deziel and Pete Laframbroise had the other Hershey goals. Tom Colley, Rick McCann, Bill Plager and Brian McCutcheon were the other New Haven scorers.

Liberal Candidates Criticize PCs for Handling of Strike

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Liberal candidates for the Ontario Liberal leadership castigated the Progressive Conservative government for its handling of the Toronto teachers strike but most favored the right to strike for teachers when questioned on the issue at an all-candidates meeting Wednesday.

Six potential leaders of the party were on hand for the first in a series of meetings being held around the province to give exposure to candidates wanting to succeed Liberal leader Robert Nixon, who has announced his intention of stepping down.

The new leader will be chosen at a convention Jan. 23-25 in Toronto.

On hand for the opening meeting were: Dr. Stuart Smith, MPP for Hamilton West, David Peterson, MPP for London Centre, Albert Roy, MPP for Ottawa East, Mark MacGuigan, MP for Windsor-Walkerville, Larry Condon, MP for and Michael Houlton, a public relations executive from Ottawa.

All but Mr. Peterson, who is expected to declare his candidacy Friday, have announced their intentions of running. Ted Culp, a Toronto teacher who also has announced his candidacy, was not at the meeting.

A London school teacher, in a set of questions put to candidates on provisional Bill 100, which gave teachers the right to strike.

Dr. Smith, the first to answer, said he did not like strikes but teachers should have the same rights as other workers.

He said Toronto teachers, on strike since mid-November, have not played the situation properly but the provincial government has totally abdicated its responsibility in handling the strikes.

It would not permit the teachers to be scape-goated," he said.

Mr. MacGuigan, too, said the provincial Tories have "abdicated their responsibility" in handling the strike.

"But I do not think the right to strike should exist in public service . . . . There has got to be other and better ways."

Mr. Roy said he was concerned about the right to strike in the public sector but said he would consider it "irresponsible to take away the right to strike unless we come to with another alternative."

Mr. Peterson called the strike in Toronto "an absolute shambles."

He said if he was the premier he would have intervened before now in order to help reach a settlement.

"I think the whole thing has been mishandled from the beginning," he said.

Mr. Condon said he favored the right to strike for everyone except police, firefighters and those maintaining order.

"But we have to be realistic and face facts," he said, adding the working sector has an obligation to live by the anti-inflation set by the federal government.

Mr. Houlton said he believes the right to strike for teachers and civic workers should be legislated back to work.

Earlier, in eight minute speeches to 100 persons, the candidates' statements ranged from attack on socialism to a call for an increase in the province's minimum wage.

Dr. Smith said Ontario residents do not want socialism.

He talked of the lop-sided growth of the province and called for a redistribution of growth from the Toronto area to such areas as Kingston or Victoria-Haliburton.

Mr. MacGuigan said there should be restraint in government expenditures.

"There must be cuts in hospital programs, in education and in the government's own payrolls," he said.

Mr. Roy called for a "certain amount of independence" from the federal Liberal party.

"The voters must perceive us to be an Ontario party."

Peterson said if he became the premier he would decentralize government.

"Why shouldn't the natural resources ministry be based in Sudbury?" he asked. "Why shouldn't the agriculture ministry be in Brant?"

Mr. Condo said he would raise the minimum wage to $3.50 an hour from $2.40.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — William Wellman, a motion picture director whose life was as colorful as some of his highly acclaimed films, died Tuesday of leukemia. He was 79.

Wellman, whose films included the classic Wings in 1927, the original Beau Geste and A Star is Born, had been seriously ill since September.

Among other Wellman films were Public Enemy, which made James Cagney a star; the classic western The Ox-Bow Incident, and The High and the Mighty.

Wellman, a First World War flying ace and former barnstorming pilot, asked that his ashes be scattered in the sky following private services, his son Bill said.

OTTAWA (CP) — Telesat Canada signed a $19.1-million contract Tuesday with RCA Corp.—the American communications company—for Canada's fourth communications satellite, to be launched in 1978.

Telesat president D. A. Golden said the Crown corporation plans to lease the satellite's services to the federal government, but would not give the sum involved.

Nearly 20 per cent of the contract for the satellite—$3.6 million—will be subcontracted to the American firm's Canadian branch, RCA Ltd. of Montreal, he said.

RCA also will supply tracking and command equipment for Telesat's earth station near Toronto.

The Montreal firm will be responsible for much of the technological innovation in the satellite, said G. D. Clark, president of RCA Ltd.

This includes development of equipment capable of transmitting and receiving the four special high frequency channels the satellite will carry, he said.

These high frequency channels will allow Telesat to establish earth stations for the satellite in large cities, said John Davidson, a communications department spokesman.

The new satellite will replace the first Anik, which was launched in 1972 and will need replacing by 1978. Under international agreement, Canada can have only three satellites in operation.

MILAN, Italy (AP) — American soprano Shirley Verrett has scored a new triumph at Milan's La Scala opera house, singing Lady Macbeth in Verdi's opera Macbeth for the first time in her career.

"She was great," Renata Tebaldi, herself an opera star, said after Sunday night's opening performance. An Italian critic said: "She was a splendid Lady Macbeth. She is a great singer, a splendid actress and a real artist."

Miss Verrett, a native of New Orleans who grew up in Los Angeles, was making her fourth premiere at La Scala. She was warmly applauded and received several calls after every act of the opera.

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — A millionaire pleaded guilty Monday to involuntary manslaughter in the death last year of Scottish musician Bobbie McIntosh, drummer of the Average White Band rock group.

McIntosh, 28, passed out after sniffing heroin at a rock party and later died in the arms of his wife, Edith.

The party host, Kenneth Moss, 32, who made millions as a broker on the New York Stock Exchange in the late 1960s, but abandoned Wall Street to found a charter airline for hippies, was originally charged with murder in McIntosh's death.

But Superior Court Judge Vernon Foster accepted an involuntary manslaughter plea Monday and set Jan. 6 for sentencing.

Television star Cher Bono, in testimony sealed until Moss's plea Monday, told the Los Angeles County grand jury last July she walked upstairs in Moss's house and found McIntosh dumped in a bathtub.

"His fingernails were all blue and his face was kind of gray," she said. "I mean he looked like he was dead."

Oddities in the News

Paper Bridge Plugs Product

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bridges have been built of stone, concrete, wood, steel and even rope, but St. Regis Paper Co. has built one of paper to advertise its product.

The bridge of triplewall corrugated packaging was 12 feet high, 110 feet long, weighed 7,800 pounds and took nine days to build.

It was constructed at the Hollywood-Burbank Airport for use in a 60-second television commercial. During the filming, a 776-ton Boeing 727 was driven across the bridge.

Specialty-constructed presses laminated the corrugated paper for the bridge.

The layers varied from six for the floor of the bridge to as few as two at the base. Only glue and paper were used.

FRANKFURT, West Germany (Reuter) — A man who went to sleep in an apartment building garbage container was hauled to safety Wednesday minutes before the trash was dumped into a furnace, police said.

The man climbed into the garbage Tuesday night to sleep off his evening's drinking and closed the container's cover, police said.

The container was emptied into a garbage truck and taken to a furnace plant supplying heating steam for much of Frankfurt, where the man was dumped 30 feet down a shaft.

Luckily, the operator of a mechanical shovel feeding the furnace heard his cries and hauled him out.

CEFALU, Sicily (AP) — Traffic police fined the municipal band $7.50 for marching in the wrong direction on a one-way street in this Sicilian town near Palermo.

Diana Ross Already Setting Sights On Third Film, Despite Reviews

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Diana Ross has a second hit on her second starring movie, but this one is different.

Her first was Lady Sings the Blues, an uncompromising account of the life and hard times of Billie Holiday. It won big receipts at the box office and an Academy Award nomination for Diana Ross in her first dramatic role.

Now comes Mahogany which also is doing big business in major cities in spite of generally devastating reviews. The glossy tale is of a Chicago ghetto girl who rises to fame in high fashion, then discards her career to help her politician overthrower.

Does the criticism bother Diana Ross? Seemingly not.

"Critics feel that they have to criticize—that's where the name comes from," she says. "I'll admit if I had been the producer-director of Mahogany, I might have made different choices. But the whole experience was a good one, and I have no regrets.

She says bad reviews can be beneficial to an understanding of her performances, even if she does not agree with them. For instance, some critics said Mahogany is sexist because the heroine gives up her career to help her man's political campaign.

"They have their viewpoint; I have mine," Miss Ross, 31, replied. "I'm not saying that all women should become housewives—I think that each woman do what makes her happy. In the case of Mahogany, she chose the life that seemed suited for her."

Diana Ross now has a record album to do, dates in Las Vegas to catch up on and a television special with ABC. She plans a European tour with the opening of Mahogany and would like to follow with a U.S. tour.

Another film? She has discussed the possibility of portraying the late Josephine Baker.

"I certainly don't want to do your my film career to playing black stars. But there is something about Josephine Baker that intrigues me, and I want to learn more about her life."

'So Good For So Little'

Yacht Club Site For Unique Art Show

The CFB Trenton Yacht Club will provide the setting for a vivid art show with the works of Canadian artists Gordon Roach and Jackie Algee Sunday from 1 p.m. until 5.

Organized by Valerie MacIntosh and Betty Ferguson, the one-day exhibit may well become a new method of art exhibition.

The atmosphere of the Yacht Club — natural lighting with the Bay of Quinte providing the backgrounds — as well as antique rom settings, will provide dimensions to a show that features two totally opposite artists.

The antiques, provided by Postings, will break the monotony of the gallery hangings, explained Mrs. MacIntosh.

She said the two artists were combined because of the different subjects and effects each uses.

The dramatic figurative Nova Scotia painter Roach will provide the social comment while Algee, a resident of Ontario, will highlight the exhibit with her warm vivid paintings.

Roach has been called a painter with a warm, sympathetic sensitivity. His painting depict the harsh life of the Atlantic country-panhandlers, tattoo parlors and lonely streets.

Roach, who uses acrylics on canvasses textured with gesso and gel, said he gets his ideas and sketches like a "thief in the night. Most of my people are unaware they are being painted."

Algee deals mainly with bright scenes that radiate a warm atmosphere. She works with oils and acrylics and scenery, including seascapes, are her favorite subject.

Cola Drinks Can Be Dependents

By G.C. THOMPSON, MD

Dear Dr. Thompson: I can't settle a bet, would you please answer this question: are cola drinks addictive or habit-forming?—A.B.

Because of a confusion of terms, such bets are rather foolish, and I don't think I can settle it for you. But such bets often do raise interesting points.

You have already introduced two terms—"addictive" and "habit-forming." Let me introduce a third—"dependence."

This is the term most commonly used in this matter—dependence, either psychic or physical. I think these terms give us a better frame of reference in which to discuss your question.

There is caffeine in cola drinks, and one can develop a mild psychic dependence on them because of the stimulating effect of the caffeine. If one feels that, all in all, this is not such a bad thing, then one might keep on drinking such substances, and continue to be psychologically dependent on them to some degree. But such dependence would be very minimal. I should think.

This is the same as the physical dependence one developes from a drug, from amphetamine or heroin for example. In the case of such drugs there is a direct physical effect, and there are violent symptoms when the drug is withdrawn. That is far removed from the psychological aspects mentioned earlier. One stops drinking colas, and that is the end of it.

So you divide the whole range of drugs (alcohol included) into either the psychological or physical dependence categories. Within that range there is a gray areas research has yet to identify.

I'm afraid this does not settle your bet, mainly because of your choice of terms. Bets are better reserved for horse races, anyway.

Dear Dr. Thoeisen: What is the blood sugar danger point in hypoglycemia?—Mrs. R.

Low blood sugar usually refers to a reading of under 50 milligrams per cent, as it is expressed. That means that there are less than 50 milligrams of glucose for each 100 cubic centimetres of blood.

For practical purposes the danger point is reached when the symptoms of an attack are present, and this is usually several hours after last eating. A rapid rate of decline in blood sugar, even at higher levels, can produce symptoms. Normal blood sugar reading would be from about 80 to 120 milligrams per cent.

Dear Dr. Thoeisen: Could you please tell me what would cause the white cell count to go down dramatically? Also, what glands all over my body are swollen. I am taking vitamins, C, high-potency type, for this.

Should I see a specialist? I just saw my family physician.—Mrs. M.R.

There are many reasons for a depression of white blood cell counts. Chronic infections (particularly viral), a reaction from drugs, radiation, radiation, and other medications, poisoning from household chemicals are a few.

But as to your swellings. These usually indicate a generalized infection process. Did you have this when you last saw your physician? In any event, you should get back to him promptly because of these symptoms. Your doctor will be able to judge whether or not you need to be seen by a specialist, and he would have your history to send along with you.

Planners Chosen

GODERICH, Ont. (CP) — Ninety-five per cent of the municipal planning department. Gary Dobson, planning director, said the top four applicants will be interviewed shortly for the six-month-a-year post. The new planner will be working on the preparation of a planning plan for the 11 townships which still lack an official plan to conform to the county official plan.

Locks Blood

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — The Stratford Red Cross blood donors committee finished its 1975 series of clinics below the quota despite a good public response to its blood clinics, committee chairman John Howard said. The city has a quota of 150 pints each year to be gathered for the central blood clinic in London. Only about more than 1,500 units were collected this year.

Funds Collected

TORONTO (CP) — Ninety per cent of the Christmas Seal funds collected stay in the municipalities from which they are received, the Christmas Seal drive gets to research and community action to prevent and control lung disease. The programs include ways to reduce cigarette smoking, the chief cause of emphysema and chronic bronchitis, and reduce air pollution which aggravates lung disease.

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Yesterday's article discussed the Herbert convention in which the next ranking suit is used as the negative response to a strong two bid. The convention is interesting, but it has the serious weakness that it gets you into lots of trouble when you want to make a positive response in the next ranking suit. We feel that this disadvantage overbalances its advantages.

Today's hand shows an example of a modification first suggested by Theodore Lightner in 1933 or '34. The Lightner variation provides that when you open with two, your partner makes a negative response, and you simply redid to three of your own suit, partner may pass with a real blank.

We recommend the Lightner variation strongly provided that you understand it only applies when there is a negative response followed by a simple rebid of the first suit on a really hopeless hand.

Today's North hand is a good example. It really can't produce a part of a trick. He passes and South makes three spades.

Ask the Jacobys

An Alaskan reader wants to know the legality of the placement of your partner's forcing bid.

The answer is that one is that there is nothing in the rules that forbids the bid. The only penalty is that your partner will really get sad at you if you have made a mistake.

President's Post for Veeck

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Bill Veeck is back in major league baseball, but not exactly the way he planned.

A Veeck group of about 40 people was approved Wednesday as the new owner of Chicago White Sox of the American League. But the 61-year-old Veeck wound up with little or no capital interest in the team.

Veeck disclosed that he had to sell much of the interest he would have received for putting the purchase package together, in order to raise the additional $1.2 million required for league approval.

The colorful Veeck actually winds up as president of the White Sox at a reported $65,000-a-year salary.

The majority stock (80 per cent) purchased from John Allyn for $9.75 million is owned by investors, including former home-run king Hank Greenberg and Bill DeWitt, one-time owner of the old St. Louis Browns and Cincinnati Reds. Allyn retains a 20-per-cent interest.

League approval of the Veeck group at the winter baseball meetings didn't come easily. It took two ballots by the owners before the necessary three-quarters vote was obtained.

League president Lee MacPhail confirmed that the hookup arose because Veeck didn't conform to the league's stipulations after the owners turned down the group Dec. 2, demanding the extra $1.2 million in working capital.

While the American League solved one of its headaches, the National League met down the hall deliberating on what to do with the failing San Francisco Giants.

National League president Charles Feeney said his owners hope to have something definite on the Giants' situation today.

Representatives of two groups trying to acquire the franchise for Toronto also were on hand, along with a municipal delegation headed by Paul Godfrey, chairman of Metropolitan Toronto council.

Chicago White Sox and Philadelphia Phillies made the most significant deal of the meetings. The Sox sent 20-game winner Jim Kaat, an American League all-star, to the Phillies for three young players, pitchers Dick Ruthven and Roy Thomas, and infielder-outfielder Alan Bannister, all No. 1 draft choices.

Earlier, Texas Rangers acquired pitcher Bill Singer from California Angels for first baseman Jim Spencer and a reported $100,000.

Reds Had It All

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Cincinnati Reds, who had the most potent offensive in the National League last season, also played the best defense.

Fielding statistics released Wednesday show that the Reds made 103 errors, 25 fewer than Los Angeles Dodgers who finished second in the team defensive statistics. Cincinnati had a .984 fielding percentage to the Dodgers' .978.

Baseball's world champion Reds had 173 double plays, second to Montreal Expos who had 178.

Second baseman Joe Morgan was the Reds' only individual fielding leader, with a percentage of .986. Pete Rose, who moved to third base after spending most of his career in the outfield, was second to Houston Astros' Doug Rader at that position, and Cesar Geronimo of the Reds was second to San Francisco Giants' Von Joshua among the league's outfielders.

Junior Clubs Want Payment

14 Pro Teams Are Under Fire

TORONTO (CP) — Teams in the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series say they still are waiting to be paid for 24 players drafted by teams in hockey's two major professional leagues.

Lists submitted by the junior teams to league commissioner Clarence (Tubby) Schmalz on Wednesday show 14 pro clubs are delinquent and only a handful of players have been paid for in full.

Schmalz will turn over the list of players to league lawyer Joe Kane, who is to contact the teams in the National Hockey League and World Hockey Association and report back to the league at a Jan. 21 meeting.

"If there is not enough satisfactory payment by that time we will consider legal action," Schmalz said in an interview.

Although the players involved signed contracts obligating them to pay 20 per cent of their first-year contract back to their junior team, Schmalz said the league is taking the stand the professional teams are equally responsible.

The list of Ontario Major players still not paid for:

Bills' Owner Has an Ally

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Owner Carroll Rosenbloom of Los Angeles Rams said Wednesday that if Buffalo's Ralph Wilson is fined for criticizing National Football League officiating, he'd like to pay half of it.

Wilson, owner of the Bills, sharply censured an official's call when Buffalo lost to Miami Dolphins 21-21 last Sunday and were eliminated from the playoffs.

Mercury Morris of Miami apparently fumbled deep in his own territory with about nine minutes left and Buffalo trailing, 24-21. Defensive end Pat Toomay of the Bills recovered at the Miami 38. The ball was ruled dead. Toomay was called for elbowing an official, and the Bills were penalized.

Rosenbloom, recovering from heart surgery, said he wired Wilson asking to pay half of any fine assessed by the NFL for criticism of officiating.

"If he is any kind of man, he's got to give me that privilege," declared the Rams owner, who had owned Baltimore Colts prior to coming to Los Angeles.

"When a man gets robbed like that, he must give me part of the action. I know the feeling. I have lost two major playoff games because of bad officiating. I suffered in silence and I wound up with a coronary.

"Wilson will, too, if he doesn't say something."

Rosenbloom referred to a questionable field goal call in the Colts' 13-10 loss to Green Bay Packers in the 1965 NFL conference playoff and to another call in last season's Rams-Minnesota Vikings NFC title game.

Shaver on Road Back

RON SHAVER

Shaver, runner-up to Toller Cranston for the national men's singles crown in 1973 and 1974, has had to qualify for the Canadian competition only once previously since he entered senior events in 1970.

He is not expected to have any problems winning the senior men's singles of the Central Canada figure skating championship which begin today.

Shaver was forced onto the qualifying trail this winter by a leg injury he suffered while skating an exhibition during the Brandon last January, two weeks before the nationals.

Although he has been the only skater able to provide close competition for reigning champion Cranston for the last several years, Shaver was forced under Canadian Amateur Figure Skating Association rules to compete in a series of qualifying meets.

He easily won the Western Ontario championship and here he will face only two other competitors defending central men's champion Lee Armstong of Chatham and young Kevin Hicks of Windsor, Ont., who won the Canadian junior singles title in his first try early this year.

Only three competitors also are expected in the senior women's singles with the majority of the 80 skaters entered in the novice and junior events.

There will be junior and senior men's and ladies figures today as well as novice dance of free skating routines.

Berger Holding Out on Rodgers

MONTREAL (CP) — Johnny Rodgers, running back and wide receiver of Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League, said Wednesday that term owner Sam Berger has refused to pay him playoff bonus money because "it wasn't in my contract exactly."

All Alouettes except Rodgers, including those on the injured reserve list, received a total of $4,800 in playoff money—$1,100 for the Eastern Football Conference semi-final victory over Hamilton Tiger-Cats, $1,200 for the EFC final against Ottawa Rough Riders and $2,500 as losers' shares for the Grey Cup game against Edmonton Eskimos.

"I admit I'm well paid, but I don't believe in playing for nothing," said Rodgers, who is reported to have a seven-year contract through 1981 worth about $1 million.

Rodgers said Berger told him "that according to my contract he didn't have to pay me for those three games."

Berger said that in Rodgers' agreement the clause in the standard players' contract dealing with post-season pay was left blank.

"I don't see why there should be any trouble over this," Berger said. "He's been paid under the terms of his contract and he's not entitled to any more and that's it.

Social Credits Smash NDP in Double Defeat for Barrett

VICTORIA (CP) — Bill Bennett said Thursday night he wants to get on with the job of returning British Columbia to Social Credit rule after his party smashed British Columbia's first NDP government in its first test at the polls.

For Premier Dave Barrett, the defeat was a double blow as he lost by 167 votes to car dealer George Kerster, 38, in Coquitlam.

Mr. Barrett, a 45-year-old pudgy, political brawler, entered the legislature in 1960 after he was fired as a social worker by the Social Credit government for criticizing its prison policies.

On Thursday, he was fired by the voters after what he earlier called "the happiest campaign of my life."

But for Mr. Bennett, a 43-year-old millionaire Kelowna businessman who stepped out of his father's footsteps to reverse the equally-crushing defeat W. A. C. Bennett's Social Credit party suffered in 1972, the prospects looked like this with the counting nearly complete:

	1975	Dissolution	1972
SC	32	14	10
NDP	16	37	38
L	1	5	5
PC	1	1	2
Vacant	1	1	1
Total	55	55	55

"Tomorrow we go to work because this province needs a government to get to work right away to solve the problems," the premier-elect said in Kelowna after thanking his supporters and the electorate.

He said his party won with people, not with flip slogans and "put forward the strongest fighting candidates I have ever seen put together by a political party."

His father, who took power for 20 years in 1952 with a minority government, shared in the pandemonium of his son's victory.

"This is a great night for the people of British Columbia said the elder Bennett as he blinked back tears. "A people's government is back in power again."

"The voters put their finger on the hot stove of socialism in 1972 "and tonight they have taken it away."

Mr. Barrett, who wasn't personally defeated until the final poll was counted in his riding, conducted party workers and smiled in the face of adversity.

"We have only lost a battle, not the war," said the premier who plans to hand over the reins of government within a week.

That statement was repeated by several members of his decimated front benches. Eight other cabinet ministers were defeated.

"Every measure of social progress that's made will stay and no one will dare touch that," said Mr. Barrett whose fate as party leader was not immediately known.

Mr. Kerster polled 17,960 votes to 17,793 for Mr. Barrett who won Coquitlam riding by more than 13,000 votes in 1972 and had the largest penalty of candidates in that election.

The NDP and Social Credit were the only parties to field full slates of 55 candidates as Mr. Barrett's snap election call Nov. 3 left the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives with depleted war chests.

McMurtry Proposal

Driving Age May Be Raised

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Roy McMurtry said Thursday he wants to see Ontario's drinking and driving ages raised.

The attorney-general told a news conference at Queen's Park there is no question that raising the legal drinking age from 18 poses difficulties, but he said the problem is serious enough for review.

The legal driving age is 16.

Mr. McMurtry said his cabinet colleagues have not reached a consensus and there must be a great deal more discussion before any legislative action is taken.

The earliest the government could act to increase the drinking and driving ages would be spring, he added.

Society has become accustomed to 18 as the legal driving age and a "readjustment of certain values" may be necessary to raise the age to 17 or 18, he said.

Mr. McMurtry said he and many members are concerned about drinking and driving where it concerns young people. Increasing the drinking age to 19 would help alleviate the problem, he added.

He said he has instructed Crown attorneys in Ontario to pursue prosecution of drinking drivers vigorously.

Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis said some of his party members believe the drinking age should be increased. He said the NDP will discuss a resolution calling for an increase at its provincial council session early next year.

Earlier Thursday, Mr. McMurtry told the Toronto Automobile Association that stiff penalties for alcohol abuse must be accompanied by better detection methods.

He urged increased use of road-side breathalyzer tests, adding that the law which says "...policemen has to have reasonable and probable grounds before he can ask for a breathalyzer test puts too much onus on the officer.

The legal limit of 80 milligrams of alcohol per 100 mill letres of blood is too low, he said, adding that many drivers are dangerous with a much lower level.

He also laid a great deal of the blame for highway deaths on what he called "irresponsible marketing techniques" employed by automobile manufacturers.

The manufacturers, he charged, are "pandering to some of our more immature instincts."

"How do you feel about putting a two-ton steel bomb into the hands of an 18-year-old when the basic premise is that it goes from zero to 60 in less than eight seconds and it'll impress the hell out of his girlfriend?" he asked.

Moslems Ignore Ceasefire Truce

BEIRUT (AP) — Leftist Moslem gunmen besieging the last major Christian position in the heart of this Lebanese capital vowed today to ignore all cease-fire agreements until they drive their foes from the downtown hotel district.

"The ceasefire is not binding until the Phalangists get out of the Holiday Inn," said a Nasserite spokesman, speaking on operations room in the Palm Beach Hotel.

"We will not lay down arms until the district is free of the Phalangists, even if the state and the army threaten us. When the area comes under our complete control, it will be required by tourism and business."

Other Moslem warriors said that, despite the declaration of a new ceasefire, they will not stop fighting until the Christians agree to a Moslem control of the government, parliament, army and economy, all of which have been dominated by the Christians.

Cabinet Approves Contract

Trudeau Says Settlement Won't Weaken Guidelines

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau insisted late Thursday that the cabinet's decision, overruling the anti-inflation board's rejection of the postal workers' settlement reached last week will not weaken the federal restraints program.

"It would if we were to do this consistently, but we are acting under the law and the regulations as they stand now," he told reporters after a second cabinet meeting Thursday.

The government will seek royal assent to make its anti-inflation bill law later today or Monday—so avoiding any immediate repeats of direct cabinet appeals.

A special administrator—yet to be appointed from the revenue department—will handle cases the anti-inflation board decides are excessive. There also will be an appeals tribunal from board rulings.

However, while cabinet can overrule the administrator, it will not be required to hear appeals from his decisions.

Under the order-in-council by which the anti-inflation board is temporarily operating, the cabinet was the only body to which it could refer cases like the postal workers' one that it considered excessive.

The decision by cabinet removes the fear of renewed postal disputes over the contract.

Joe Davidson, president of the Canadian Union of Public Workers (CUPW), said "we went on strike for more . . . so how can I be overjoyed at getting what we are justly entitled to."

Jean-Luc Pepin, anti-inflation board chairman, refused to comment. The board had argued that the 30-month contract for the postal workers a 17.75 per cent annual pay increase when they were entitled to no more than 11.61.

New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent predicted that the cabinet ruling means "every labor group in the country" will want to appeal to the cabinet.

The board earlier sent the teachers back to negotiations after rejecting a 29.3 per cent pay offer from the Toronto school board as excessive.

Asked about the high school teachers' case, Mr. Trudeau ruled out an immediate appeal for them to cabinet because the agreement had been reached but the board could refer it either to cabinet or to an administrator.

Poaching Damages Cohoe Population

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Stocking of Lake Ontario with cohoe salmon may have boosted angling in the Bay of Quinte.

But it also has increased the activity of poachers, say provincial conservation officials.

Poaching for years has mostly concentrated on local waterways in spring, as the water warms and fish begin spawning run.

But the cohoe prefers colder water and spawns later in the year, say natural resources ministry officials at Napanee.

Inevitably, this also adds to poaching attempts — and a heavier workload for conservation officers. The Napanee district office must mount patrols in a district that reaches from Colborne to Kingston.

Areas closely watched include the Trent, Moira and Napanee rivers, where the cohoe is appearing with increasing frequency in the last two years — the results of stocking programs by Ontario and United States agencies.

Illegal netting and spearing of the fish spar river mouths means more than an immediate loss.

It also affects future fish population, officials say, the volume of egg spawn.

Conservation officers cite one example: A fisherman recently caught illegally starting fish with a gill net near Presqu'ile. In a bag of seven cohoes and two rainbow trout lie was fined $25 in court.

That fee of the cohoes contained more than a gallon of spawn.

"This, sort of activity inevitably has an impact on the rehabilitation of fish in Lake Ontario," says a conservation official.

Simcoe Must Take Toronto Students

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Simcoe County board of education has been told by the Ontario education ministry to accept at county schools Metropolitan Toronto students affected by a teachers' strike, the board announced Thursday.

In a news release, the administration said L. E. Hall, regional director of the ministry, has told the board to accept students for enrolment if they qualify under the Education Act.

A spokesman for the board said the board accepts the ruling.

One Simcoe County administration employee estimates that between 100 and 200 students might enrol in the county's school system next week. The administration has received 100 calls during the strike from cottagers who pay county taxes and come under the Act, wanting to enrol students.

In Brampton, a spokesman for the 1,600 Peel County high school teachers said about 70 per cent of the teachers who voted Thursday on their board's final contract offer for 1975-1976 rejected it because it was in excess of Ontario's selective wage and price controls.

City Buses May Not Operate Boxing Day

By AL ZARAS
Staff Reporter

City bus passengers may be without transit service Boxing Day if city council proclaims the day a public holiday.

The Belleville Transit Commission Monday agreed to give employees a paid holiday, providing the city declares Dec. 26 a public holiday.

City council is expected to deal with the subject this Monday.

In a linked motion, the commission again decided to cut bus service at 7.45 p.m. on Christmas Eve.

The shortened day, said BTC chairman Marylea Burtt is "sort of a Christmas present to the fellows (drivers)."

Manager Lewis McMillin said the commission has opted in previous years to cancel service Christmas Day because "everything seems to die after 6 p.m. and no one goes anywhere."

Over the years, no complaints have been received from the public over the shortened Dec. 24 service day, he said.

Since 1961 the BTC has not operated Boxing Day bus runs.

Opposition Mounts Against Heirs

MADRID (AP) — Leftist opposition to Francisco Franco's political heirs is expected to continue despite the appointment of the modified cabinet since Franco crushed the Spanish republic four decades ago.

The 19-man cabinet announced Thursday night by Premier Carlos Arias Navarro includes four ministers generally considered advocates of democracy and four other ministers considered liberals or moderates.

Included among 19 appointees are loyal Franco men, there are only two holdovers from the cabinet the late dictator picked two years ago after the assassination of Premier Luis Carrero Blanco.

The government was not what was hoped for by some liberals, but it was as far as they could go," said a member of the premier's staff.

Driver Escaped

William Baldwin of Mississauga escaped serious injury early today after his tractor trailer was in collision with the rear of another transport on Highway 401, one mile east of Salmon River Bridge. Damage to his truck was estimated at $1,000 by a spokesman for the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police.

Thief's Identity Key Issue In Drug Store Theft Trial

Paul Kelly, pharmacist and owner of Kelly's Drugs, testified in Hastings County Court here Thursday he is not absolutely certain that accused robber Douglas Ernie Cockburn is the man behind the mask who robbed a post office sub-station in his store on Sept. 5.

The 19-year-old Cockburn of RR 1, Kingston is on trial by judge alone for the armed robbery at the drug store located at 411 East Bridge St. in Belleville during which, it is alleged over $200 was stolen.

Identification is a key issue in the trial which entered its second day today at the Pinnacle St. courthouse before Judge Russell C. Honey.

Mr. Kelly and four drug store employees testified that at about 3 p.m., a person they described as a young male with a nylon stocking-type mask pulled over his head and brandishing a small, cocked pistol, approached the postal station counter and was successful in demanding money from the till.

Postmaster Roy Wainwright of Belleville testified an audit conducted about one hour after the incident revealed the till was short $361.32.

When asked by assistant Crown attorney John Wood of Belleville if he could recognize the man if he saw him again, Mr. Kelly said he would be able to.

When Mr. Woods asked if the man was present in the courtroom, Mr. Kelly indicated Cockburn as the man who "looks like" the robber.

Defence counsel Will Tausendfreund objected to the identification questioning, saying such recognition is guesswork and should be inadmissable.

However, Judge Honey ruled the evidence admissable and elaborated that its relevance will depend on the weight with which he considers it when he attempts to reach a verdict.

Mr. Tausendfreund attempted to clarify Mr. Kelly's identification by establishing to what extent the robber's facial features were distorted by the nylon like mask.

Mr. Kelly explained the face was reasonably clear due to amount of stretching of the mask but added the ears and hair were vastly distorted.

Mr Kelly commented that even in cases where no mask is used "it is not possible for anyone to be 100 per cent certain."

The four employees testified they would be unable to recognize the robber if they saw him again.

Library Board Rejects Sharp Budget Hike

Mayor Ben Corke wants the Belleville library board to chop $10,000 from its initial 1976 proposed budget of $224,854.

The recommended budget is an increase of $28,000 from 1975.

"We have a severe problem in the matter of using the taxpayer's money," said Mayor Corke during a discussion when he referred to city-wide budget problems.

Mr. Corke told the library board of directors this week cuts are necessary.

Mayor Corke suggested $108,000 as guidelines for the next proposed budget.

Communication

Thanks to the aid of the Trenton Lions Club Karen Wessel (seated) will be able to communicate with other deaf friends by a special attachment to her telephone. Anne McKercher of Sir James Whitney School instructs Mrs. Wessel on how to use the new device which transmits impulses from a teletype machine through normal telephone equipment to a receiver on the other end.

Printer Enables Deaf Residents To Communicate On Telephone

By JERRY BROWN
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Karen Wessel is an active mother with an interest in families, repairing, tennis, crosscountry skiing hobbies and for the first time in her life she can use a telephone to communicate with her friends in the Quinte area.

Karen Wessel is deaf and has been since birth 27 years ago but thanks to the assistance of the Trenton Lions Club, Mrs. Wessel will now be able to communicate with friends over normal telephone lines by using a "coupler."

The coupler is a simple device that allows deaf people to communicate by transmitting impulses of a teletype (TTY) machine across normal telephone lines to another machine on the other end of the connection, providing a printed message.

"Most deaf people find it difficult to buy the TTY machines because of the expense and that is why they are loaned to the users after they have been recommended by the Pioneers Club," said Anne McKercher, a teacher at Sir James Whitney School on hand to demonstrate the operating procedures to Mrs. Wessel.

There are currently 16 such units in the Quinte area and the intention of the school is to outfit all of the area deaf, about 80 of them with similar units, said Miss McKercher.

In an emergency most people would just pick up a telephone and call the authorities but this option has rarely been available to deaf people with speech problems.

"The Belleville police department will soon have one of the units donated to them and this will enable them to receive calls from deaf people," said Mrs. McKercher.

The machines are simple to operate and require little training other than learning how to type and rest the telephone receiver in the cradle of the coupler. Three Belleville technicians have been trained by the Toronto group to service the machines.

"Hopefully, all emergency centres will one day be equipped with the units and new avenues of communications will be opened to the deaf."

Trenton Lowers Request For Additional Land

TRENTON — A town request to the Northumberland Task Force (NTF) asking for 1,200 acres has been cut by almost 50 per cent after population figures it was based on were rejected, said Aubrey Sharp, town clerk.

The original request for the land was based on a 1972 population projection study completed by the Quinte Planning Board and submitted to the task force. But Trenton town council has been told by project director Peter Walker that the estimate of 35,000 persons by the year 2,000 is too high.

Trenton officials returned to the planning board and asked for a re-evaluation of the figures and were told the original estimates were based on a larger geographical area that included eastward expansion, said the town clerk.

The new figure projected the population at only 27,000 and consequently the land request was reduced to 630 acres, said Mr. Sharp.

The NTF, at a two-day workshop in November, recommended that a buffer zone be placed around Brighton and other urban core areas in the county. If this idea is accepted, Trenton's growth in the west would be stopped at the current Murray Township line.

Traffic Committee Suggested

PICTON — Mayor Donald King has announced plans to organize a traffic safety committee that service clubs and other community groups have been invited to appoint representatives to serve on it.

Mayor King says he is concerned about the loss of life and property through traffic accidents in the Picton area in recent months and feels a traffic committee can improve the present situation.

Santa Pays Second Visit

Council to Meet Dec. 16

PICTON — Prince Edward County councillors will hold their regular monthly meeting Dec. 16 at 7.30 p.m. at Shire Hall. The meeting is the last full session of open council for 1975.

Patrols to Continue

MARMORA — Council here has decided that bylaw enforcement officer Pat O'Connor should continue with his night patrol until further notice. It was pointed out that the danger of fire is greater in wintertime and Mr. O'Connor's patrols might be the means of spotting a fire before it got out of control.

Garage Looted

PICTON — The Picton detachment of Ontario Provincial Police is investigating the theft of snowmobile equipment valued at $125 from the residence of a Consecon man.

Police say that Blair McKay of RR 1 Consecon reported that he stored three snowmobile suits, two helmets, two pairs of gloves and two pairs of boots in his garage last May. When he prepared to use the equipment this month, he discovered it was missing.

Christmas Plants In Bloom

PICTON — The traditional flower of Christmas, the Poinsettia, is in full bloom this week at the Lockyer Garden Centre just west of Picton where approximately 2,500 plants have been potted for sale.

Florist Creighton Lockyer says the Poinsettia naturally grows much taller than the colorful, low blooms admired by Christmas shoppers.

To create the low, full look the plants are sprayed with a growth retardent. The result is a much shorter stalk and a more cultivated appearance for the Poinsettia.

Holiday Blooms

Its beginning to look a lot like Christmas at the Lockyer Garden Centre just west of Picton where approximately 2,500 Poinsettia plants are in full bloom. Florist Creighton Lockyer Thursday offered visitors a view of the crimson fairyland of flowers.

Shoppers More Discriminating But Expect Auto Insurance to Hit Us Again

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

Business is finally getting the message: consumers care about price and quality, and they are changing their buying habits accordingly—where they can.

Retailers generally report a strong surge of pre-Christmas business. But many of them note that shoppers are more discriminating about quality this year, and less willing to buy goods that they consider over-priced.

An advertising executive who has made a recent study of supermarket trends, says that two out of three consumers claim to be economizing on their food purchases.

Examples: sales of meat substitutes have risen since last year, while sales of paper towels, soft drinks, sugar and rice are down, said George Clements.

The trend is toward cheaper types of dog food as well, says Mr. Clements, a vice-president and national research director of J. Walter Thompson Ltd., Toronto.

Mr. Clements, in an interview, stressed that his findings are based on a relatively small cousinos who about 30 groups of six or seven consumers each, in Canada's two largest cities.

In those groups, however, it's clear that an effort is being made to shop less often, and thus to cut down on impulse purchases.

The change that has taken place in consumer attitudes should not be exaggerated.

People are not cutting out vacations, as they would in a severe economic plot—but their choice is likely to be a holiday destination closer to home.

And major retailers report that sales of high-priced items and consumer durables during the fourth quarter have been healthy, even though consumers are taking more time to study quality and features and to compare prices, before they commit themselves.

However, traditional pre-Christmas shopping patterns have been changed to some extent this year by such factors as relatively mild weather, the anti-inflation program, and the post office strike.

Mild weather has, of course, slowed the sales of winter clothing and footwear as well as seasonal sporting equipment.

The anti-inflation guidelines have raised the possibility that prices will be rolled back at an ever-increasing rate. This could discourage consumers from throwing away dollars that are eroding too quickly, and encourage greater prudence.

The post office strike boosted over-the-counter business at the expense of catalogue sales. Settlement of the strike gave retailing a psychological lift, in the view of some merchants.

In a nutshell, consumers are showing that they are not cheap.

When world sugar prices went up, for instance, consumers realized that they would have to pay more at the supermarket.

Now that prices have retreated on the world market, while prices of soft drinks, chocolate bars and other sugar-intensive products remain high, a substantial number of consumers appear to be taking out their discretion and refusing to buy.

That same discretion, unfortunately, can seldom be exercised in buying services.

For example, auto-insurers have been increasing premiums substantially every year, on the ground that accident rates and repair costs are soaring.

Now, however, speed limits are being sharply reduced (with the promise that accidents will be fewer), and increases in labor rates are being limited.

In addition, insurers are able to get a lot more interest on yields that are at or near the highest levels in years.

Count on it, though—none of this will prevent a whopping increase in your next premium notice.

Firefighters' Problem

There's a lot of smoke surrounding the issue of whether Belleville firefighters will be permitted to bring up their establishment to its full complement of 44.

City Council and the Firefighters' Association union local have gone to arbitration over a vacant firefighting position which council refused to fill following a retirement earlier in the year. According to the union, council's refusal to replace the fireman, who retired in March, compounded by firemen on sick leave, has placed a strain on the firefighting capability of one fire department hall.

A factor the arbitrator must consider is that firefighting does place a big strain on the men — a factor brought out by the heart attack suffered by Capt. George Woodhouse while fighting a blaze October 27. A 19-year-veteran, Woodhouse is one of those on sick leave. The shift the city fireman headed was a man short at the time, and the suggestion is he might not have been stricken had he not had to take such an active role. This of couse is hypothetical, and the tradition of filling in for others is not one confined to firefighting alone; nonetheless the rigors of firefighting demand that a full complement should be available when the occasion demands.

The question is, should Belleville be left with a firefighting force that is undermanned? Should the firefighters themselves be placed in a situation which in their estimation reduces their efficiency and makes an already hazardous task more dangerous?

Let's give animals a better break, and in particular those in the category of pets — dogs and cats mainly — which too often are considered to lead the proverbial "dog's life" for want of owners who really care.

There should be more citizens like the woman observed walking her Airedale on a leash on Bleecker Street Sunday. Of course there are show dogs which receive the best of treatment, but what about the strays, the abandoned, those left languishing in some outhouse and never exercised?

A report from Rochester, N.Y. in recent days pointed out that inflation is affecting animal care along with everything else. Because owners are finding it increasingly difficult to make ends meet, among the first to suffer are pets. Thus they have less of a place in the social scheme of things than ever.

This in turn places an additional strain on community facilities — the Quinte branch of the Ontario Humane Society for one. Finance is always a problem, but a $25 donation from a Trenton reader who has written on the subject is an exception to the general public apathy surrounding animal care. It's possible that with further support such as this the branch could do more to extend and improve its service.

City Hall Aesthetics

About the most a lot of people know of their City Hall is the rather stark and unimpressive entrance and Dickens-like environs of ground floor office space where the routine grassroots business of the city is conducted.

If it is municipal fundamentalism, spartan interiors and no frills architecture the city wishes to project, it has succeeded.

Council is aware of this however, as witness the study it commissioned earlier this year, with a view to effecting improvements. The results of this study are now in council's hands and it is clear much could be done to this end.

More than $100,000 worth in fact, so quite apart from aesthetic considerations council will need to give this considerable thought.

Aside from the economics though, the prospect of a brighter, more functional interior at city hall is an attractive one, in step with Belleville's increasing status as one of the more progressive cities in the province.

John Yaremko Honored in Toronto

By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau

Thomson News Service

TORONTO — One of the most distinguished head tables of recent Toronto years, and 1,400 other people sat down after paid tribute to one of our more unusual politicians.

John Yaremko probably won't go into the history books.

He didn't build any great monuments or convert with any facility some material of which history's footnotes are made.

But in the inner world of politicians of today he is recognized as remarkable.

Still only 57, he had been a member for 24 years, the nearden of the Ontario legislature, when he retired before last year's election.

He had been a Conservative cabinet minister for 14 years, another near-record. And in that period had held seven different portfolios.

He won his riding of Bellwoods originally fresh a Communist, and he was always the proudest defender of anti-communism in Ontario politics.

Yaremko was one of the most abused men the house has seen. He was constantly under attack.

He was an obvious target.

For what he believed in, he believed in, including himself and when you mentioned anything else, you set off a spark.

A good man—people, too can say, including the opposition, judged him on the.

But this was an extremely unfair assessment of the man, by those who did not know John Yaremko.

For there are many thousands of people in Ontario who, if you said one word against Yaremko would wave their fists up.

There are hundreds or thousands of civil servants who will tell you that.

Actually, he was the supreme politician.

He was one who was for the people, who was bright enough to make money while he was in politics, but who might have made a great deal more outside of it, but who never let his people down.

Let us have more of them.

Belts and Lower Speed

Ottawa Journal

The Ontario government took some time finding the nerve to introduce legislation to lower speed limits on the highways and to make the wearing of seat belts mandatory. But it was worth the wait for these useful measures.

There will be complaints about some of the boors, but the seat belt law will be described as an invasion of individual "rights" and an unenforceable one at that. But the time had come to place the rights of society — the one that foots the bills for increased medical costs — above the "rights" of individuals. The seat-belt law is the strongest possible way the government could find to advise citizens to do what's best for themselves. It is self-evident that enforcement of the law will be spotty. Some people will take that as an invitation to ignore the law and their own safety. But no law can change people like that. They certainly are an argument against making seat belt use mandatory.

An Ontario energy department official is quoted as saying the lower limits — 60 mph on superior highways and 50 on others — will mean a one per cent saving of gasoline. That prediction seems a bit low. But even a one per cent saving would conserve enough petroleum to heat a medium-sized city for an entire winter. Ontario isn't in a position to scoff at that kind of saving.

'Loyalist Village' Concept

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

I refer to an item in my recent development report to Prince Edward County Council which solicited Council's support for the concept of a "Loyalist Village" and instructed me to report further on the possibilities.

In consequence of this, apparently, Thursday's "Business Buyer's Guide" contained an item by your bureau reporter headed "Report Overlooks Key Attributes", which for some reason representation would be hard to beat. The article contains 85 lines of type, on which six relate to fact and twenty-nine to Miss Hayloch's opinion. On the other hand, thirty-seven lines (or over 42 per cent of the article) are concerned with your writer's interest in the historic White Chapel, which certainly could have much to do with my report on possible development.

As for the suggestion that a Loyalist Village proposal was "the brainchild of the Assistant Deputy Minister of Tourism", question and answer at the County Council meeting (at which your reporter was present) elicited the information that the Minister of Industry and Tourism plus tourist operators, local citizens and sundry tourist visitors had all provided input. The Chamber of Commerce has been prominent for years that an authentic "Loyalist Village" relating to the County's history would be of considerable tourist and commercial value to the area.

The most distressing part of this slightly ill-informed article is that the outline given by your bureau reporter is used by Miss Hayloch only to underpin the thesis argument that the County's museums and the White Chapel lines up "second". Nothing, of course, is further from the truth! If a tourist-oriented centre combining considerable interest with historical accuracy is able to draw large numbers of visitors, then increased visitor usage of the other sites by those interested will naturally follow, since such interested persons will be physically present in the County. Moreover the Village would contain a centre for the dissemination of information regarding other areas of historic value.

Strikes and Working Wives

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

Dear Sir,

Although little, if anything, has been said about it, I would suspect that one overriding reason we have been so plagued by strikes in recent years is the increased work of working wives.

In the past, when the man was the sole support of the family in the financial sense a decision to strike was a serious one, because it would be a hardship. Now, however, it is probable that the number of two-income families has increased to the point where voting in favour of striking is not the major decision it was, not for the husband since the other income can keep the family for a more or less prolonged period. If, in the past, working wives have made it possible for strikes to be more frequent and prolonged, working women now appear likely to bring about the opposite condition. From television and radio reports it would appear shortest personnel who have gone back to work on their own initiative, it appears that the majority are women. Can it be that the number of families where the women are the sole support is increasing drastically because the man has become unemployed or even unemployable? Certainly the reason given for going back to work is that money is urgently needed for family support.

Many women's libbers have been said that the liberation of woman is the liberation of men. Perhaps it may become possible to make this more than a cliche that women's lib. is the liberation of the large majority of men from the inconvenience of manicures and needless clothes.

Hard-nosed Claude Wagner Has Sights on P.M.'s Office

By RICHARD JACKSON

Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA — Take a good look at Claude Wagner.

He could be your next Prime Minister.

Not because the good-looking, 50-year-old former Crown Attorney, provincial Attorney General and Court of Sessions Judge is a French-Canadian.

Not just because this artic estate, fluently bilingual, twice-elected MP from Saint Hyacinthe, of all the leadership candidates, has the best credentials for breaking into the Liberal's Quebec power-base and picking up seats that could make the difference between victory and defeat.

But because he is a proven-at-the-polls winner and is the only candidate with the self-confidence to say "I can win."

Because, too, he is a tough, hard-nosed law-and-order man in an age and society where to be soft and yielding is to be politically dead.

Because, also, of the company he keeps.

When he went for the leadership with his recent formal declaration of "I am the candidate to win," he had the initial support of 18 Quebec special members of the Conservative Parliamentary Caucus.

And a man can often be known by the company he keeps.

Ten of them are Quebec Conservative MPs who, except for Howard Graffety, a leadership candidate himself, and an outsider, give Claude Wagner a monopoly of the party's existing constituency support in Quebec.

One is Roch LaSalle of Joliette and the other is that French-Canadian political miracle-man, Jacques Lavoie of Hochelaga who whipped Pierre Juneau, the personality hand-picked candidate of a humiliated Prime Minister Trudeau in the recent byelection.

But think for a moment, about the other eight of the 19 Conservative parliamentarians backing Claude Wagner.

Otto Lelinek, Jack Ellis, Paul Dick, Jack Marshall, Frank Oberle, Erik Nielson, Stan Schellenberg, Lawrence MacKay.

Conservatives. Not "Red" Tories. Not Conservative socialists. Not liberal Conservatives.

They subscribe to Claude Wagner's basic credo for Conservatives:

"Our party must become the agent of national direction and determination.

"We must be strong, united and competent.

"We must restore a sense of order, of justice and of a conviction that the state will tolerate no extortion by any power group of the public good.

"We must make an end to lump-period exercise of democratic authority."

Finally, Claude Wagner is hard-nosed enough to scorn the easy lifs and lists most other politicians use to mush-mouth their way around the capital punishment issue.

No soft, marshmallow smearing for the former Attorney General. He comes on strong with a firm commitment to the death penalty for premeditated murder.

Public protection and personal straight, easy-to-understand "law-and-order," and not Justice Minister Otto Lang's and Solicitor General Warren Allmand's flexible, might-mean-anything "peace and security."

Claude Wagner was the last-acting, hard-hitting Quebec Attorney General whose nonsence riot police laid their heavy-loaded night-sticks hard on the backsides of the separatist student hoodlums who tried to treat the Queen or Her Majesty's last visit to Quebec City some 10 years ago.

Even the law-unto-itself Montreal underworld didn't fool with a man with "tough-cop" Wagner.

When he first came to Parliament two elections ago, he seemed to fall into the hands of the Toronto Tory establishment who, finding his "hanging judge image," as they called it, unacceptable, tried making him over into a sleek, slick, style pussy-cat.

He wore slinky suits, let his stylist hair-grow long, talked softly and said nice things.

But that wasn't Claude Wagner. He was a camp counterfeit.

Now, though, Claude Wagner again is, as he says, "my own man . . . I'm not trying to impress as my own man and I'll come out of the campaign my own man."

He is the same kind of conservative candidate as only more so — as Jack Horner, Sinclair Stevens, Allan Lawrence and Jim Gillies.

And when the leadership comes down to the last ballot, Claude Wagner against one of the liberal "Red" Tories, they will find it easy to vote for him.

CAA Calls For Lower Speeds

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Automobile Association (CAA) has called for reduced highway speed limits in all provinces to help conserve fuel.

The CAA said in a statement Thursday that it has asked Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie to press provincial ministers at a federal-provincial energy conference today to adopt this policy. Mr. Gillespie is chairman of the conference.

Ontario and British Columbia already have moved to lower speed limits and Mr. Gillespie has said he would like to see reduced speeds across the country.

The CAA said most cars get best fuel economy at speeds of about 40 miles an hour.

Recent studies show the average increase in gasoline consumption between speeds of 50 miles an hour and 70 miles an hour is about 30 per cent, the CAA said. A fuel saving of about two per cent is possible if motorists drove no faster than 55 miles an hour.

Pills Banned

OTTAWA (CP) — Birth control pills banned Wednesday in West Germany and Britain because of a possible link to cancer have been off the Canadian market since 1972, a spokesman for the federal health protection branch said Thursday.

Dr. Albert Liston said American studies in 1972 of pills containing the hormone megestrol-acetate showed they caused cancerous tumors in dogs, after the dogs were fed 50 times the human dose over seven years.

He said these tests caused enough concern to warrant the withdrawal of the pills from the Canadian market.

McMurtry Warns

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario legislation concerning arbitration awards will apply until the federal anti-inflation measures become law, Attorney-General Roy McMurtry said Thursday.

Once the federal legislation is passed, it will over-ride those sectors of the economy covered by its regulations, he told the legislature.

Programs Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — Treasury Board President Jean Chretien said Thursday it is inevitable that some federal programs will be cut as the government tries to slow its rate of spending.

Mr. Chretien told reporters nothing is untouchable although the government must focus attention on programs that account for about 30 per cent of federal spending.

Secret Ballot

OTTAWA (CP) A private bill to empower the cabinet to intervene and order a secret ballot of union members in strikes such as the just-ended national postal strike was introduced Thursday in the Commons by Michael Forrestall (PC—Dartmouth-Halifax East).

Overtime Pay

TORONTO (CP)—The Metropolitan Toronto Board of Police Commissioners has approved a $250,000 transfer of funds to pay policemen for accumulated overtime but counsel for the Metropolitan Toronto Police Association asked Solicitor-General John MacBeth to appoint an arbitrator to stop the payment.

May Visit Japan

OTTAWA (CP) — The prime minister's office said Thursday that Mr. Trudeau has no definite plans to visit Japan next year, contrary to a report that the Canadian ambassador in Japan had told Prime Minister Takeo Miki of a planned visit.

Begins Showcase

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Walt Disney World will begin construction of its World Showcase, the initial phase of an experimental prototype community of tomorrow, in 1976 instead of 1977 as originally planned, officials say.

Kills Nine

DACCA (AP) — A wild elephant trampled nine persons to death and injured 19 others Sunday in two villages about 30 miles from Chittagong Port, 176 miles southeast of Dacca, authorities reported.

Kerr Lays Blaim

TORONTO (CP) — Environment Minister George Kerr said Thursday a five-month delay in publishing the results of asbestos-fibre tests conducted in Ontario last April and May was the fault of the Ontario Research Foundation.

Mr. Kerr told the legislature there is no excuse for the delay and said he will try to speed up the release of the latest test results.

Gillian Sandeman (NDP—Peterborough) said the most recent figures show asbestos-fibre levels at the Raybestos-Manhattan plant in Peterborough are six times the acceptable level.

The minister said more tests are planned for January and added he hopes some equipment modifications can be made to reduce the fibre count to an acceptable level.

Mrs. Sandeman said outside the legislature tests show that fibre count taken outside the plant are dangerously high. Some of the tests were taken near a school, she said.

The MPP said there is apprehension in the community and urged immediate action.

Britain Rejects Hanging

LONDON (Reuter) — The British Parliament rejected by a 361-to-222 vote Thursday night a fresh call to bring back hanging for terrorist murders.

The non-government motion, presented by a Conservative opposition member, had become a major political issue here because of the extension of a guerrilla campaign by the Irish Republican Army (IRA) from Northern Ireland to mainland Britain.

Some 50 people have died in 130 bombings and shootings on the mainland in the last three years.

On the last occasion the death penalty was debated by the House of Commons a year ago, it was rejected by a sizable margin.

The debate cut across party political lines. The ruling Labor party mostly backed the view of Home Secretary Roy Jenkins that it would be wrong and counter-productive to reintroduce the death penalty for terrorist murders and make it harder the task of police combatting kidnappers.

But Jenkins assured MPs concerned about the IRA attacks: there will be no amnesty. I recognize no political excuses for cold-blooded crimes of murder or maiming. Those who have committed them will serve in jail for decades and in some cases until the end of their lives."

There was strong support for hanging from the Conservative opposition whose members repeatedly stressed that public opinion in Britain was in favor of the death penalty and said it was the only firm way to deal with the bombers.

Senate Approves

OTTAWA (CP) — The long-delayed first stage of the government's business competition policy finally was approved by the Senate on Thursday.

A series of amendments to the Combines Investigation Act and other legislation, the bill first was introduced to Parliament in October, 1972. It died on the order paper at dissolution of that Parliament and was reintroduced to the current one in October, 1974.

Wells Says Cabinet Needs Dramatic Proof

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister Thomas Wells said on Thursday the Ontario cabinet is looking to the federal anti-inflation board for some dramatic action on prices to assure the public that the board is serious about controlling prices.

"We need examples as dramatic as what they have been doing with various wage settlements," Mr. Wells said after a meeting with the Ontario Teachers' Federation (OTF).

Georgs Gauthier, OTF president, said the federation wants the province to act as an anti-inflation board to deal more sensitively with teachers.

He said federation members are starting to feel the federal anti-inflation board is concerned strictly with wages and that there is no control on prices.

The federal anti-inflation board recently ruled that the Metropolitan Toronto school board's offer of a 39.5-per-cent salary increase to its striking secondary school teachers is excessive.

Stephen Lewis, Ontario NDP leader, said ostrich the legislature Thursday that his anti-inflation board is so inconsistent that it has become a laughing stock.

Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough said he expects no provincial action on controlling prices because the provincial government sees little evidence of rising prices. He said he had told the anti-inflation board about complaints of lack of control on prices and that the provinces will continue to prod the board.

Landlords, Tenants Can Appeal Rent Increases Ontario Decides

TORONTO (CP) — Landlords and tenants will be allowed to appeal rent increases that occurred between July 30 and Dec. 31, the legislature decided Thursday.

The Progressive Conservatives and the Liberals combined to support that amendment to the government's rent review legislation over the opposition of the NDP.

Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis said his party will decide today whether to reconsider its earlier support of the spirit of the legislation in light of the various amendments.

Michael Cassidy (NDP-Ottawa Centre) charged that the amendment is being watered down by Liberal and government members.

Under the original legislation, no appeal was to be allowed during the July 29-Dec. 31 period and the maximum increase allowed was eight per cent. The legislation also stated that the landlord would have to refund any excess of more than eight per cent.

It also will allow landlords to charge an increase of more than eight per cent during the same period if both the tenant and landlord agree. The amendment provides the tenant with a 30-day, cooling-off period in which he may change his mind.

The amendments, introduced by Housing Minister John Rhodes, provides that the first month's rent for units first rented in new buildings between July 29 and Dec. 31 will act as the basis for further increases.

An NDP amendment making the legislation retroactive to Jan. 1, 1975, also was defeated by Liberal and government members

Ed Good (L-Waterloo North) said the amendment removes inequities from the original legislation.

Mr. Lewis, the NDP leader, said the government quietly and deliberately is trying to slant the legislation in favor of landlords.

Belleville Boy Scouts Commended for Efforts

Belleville scouts have been commended by the provincial scouting organization for their part in the national fund-raising project Trees for Canada.

The District Council of the Boy Scouts of Canada received the citation at the annual election of officers meeting.

The project, sponsored by community pledge sheets, involved the planting of 30,000 trees by more than 600 beavers, scouts, cubs and venturers early May.

The majority of the trees were planted on the property of Jon Gale of Downsview with 150 trees were planted in Stanley Park.

The national share of the funds went to Operation Amigo to assist two workers in Latin America. At the provincial level the funds assisted camping trips and outdoor development.

Ken Bartlett, local president, said the local organization was one of the leaders in the province in several phases of its work.

"With the continued volunteer efforts of the leaders and co-operation of the parents we will have a successful new year," he said.

Russ Taylor, was re-elected as first vice-president; Harold Bankier, second vice-president; Fran Kerr, secretary, and treasurer Ken Coates. Bud Jones was re-elected as commissioner.

Steenburg Convicted In Gas Station Theft

Harold Milton Steenburg, 20, of RR 2, Belleville pleaded guilty in Hastings County Court here Thursday to a charge of robbery laid in connection with an incident at the Gulf Service Centre at the intersection of Highways 401 and 37 on July 22.

Steenburg was remanded by Judge Russell C. Honey to Jan. 19 for sentencing.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville say two men robbed the service centre of about $170 in cash at gunpoint, subdued the attendant, identified as Bob Winter of Cannifton and then released him, offering him $35 to remain silent.

Police say the men drove into the service centre at about 4.25 a.m. and one had got out of the car with a gun in his hand and demanded money from the till.

The man then drove the attendant, a short distance west on Highway 401 and dropped him off at the Shell St. overpass where they offered him the money to keep his silence.

Assistant Crown attorney John Woods of Belleville said a case involving one of the men has already been disposed of in provincial court here.

Lampost Approved

WALLBRIDGE — Sidney township council approved by bylaw this week the installation of a lamppost on Burns Ave., just north of highway 2, that will cost Quinte Heights homeowners about $52 a year to maintain.

Council acted in response to a request from subdivision residents who wanted the intersection lit, fearing serious accidents.

Fear of Flying Takes Its Toll

TORONTO (CP) — Fear of flying has grounded up-and-coming careers, shaken marriages and created countless other problems for those who pale at the thought of tasting down a runway.

The sufferers are legion: a woman whose husband has grown cool towards her because she cannot fly with him on business trips, a young athlete who can't travel with his team, a businessman who turns down a vice-presidency because it requires hours in the air.

"There probably are over a million men and women in this country who have a phobic fear of flying," said Dr. Leslie Solyom, a psychiatrist at McGill University's Allan Memorial Institute in Montreal.

"More and more of them are seeking professional help to rid themselves of their crippling condition."

Behavior therapy is the type of treatment favored by most psychiatrists and clinical psychologists. The theory is that persons can learn fairly quickly how to behave in new ways, without prolonged probing of the psyche.

Treatment is successful in 80 to 90 per cent of cases and after two to eight weeks, it dispels the usual symptoms of fear when flying—loss of appetite, dizziness, tense muscles, and perspiration.

Dr. John Jamieson, a Toronto General Hospital psychiatric consultant, and many other therapists use systematic desensitization to relax patients for their initial trip by air.

Patients are asked to list the aspects of flying that frighten them, beginning with the least fearful, Dr. Jamieson said.

A typical list begins with learning a plane trip is required, continues through check-in and take-off, and ends with air turbulence during the flight.

Dr. Jamieson teaches the patient how to relax every muscle in his body and then sends him the anxiety list.

The patient raises his hand as soon as he begins to feel uncomfortable. The doctor stops reading and the patient does relaxation exercises.

"After 18 or 20 sessions of about 20 minutes each, most patients can accept the idea of flying without getting upset," said Dr. Jamieson.

At this point, the patient is ready for graduation exercises and is sent to the airport for a flight.

Dr. Stephen Neiger, director of the Lakeshore Psychiatric Hospital's behavior therapy clinic, accompanies patients to Toronto International Airport to watch planes, check in and listen to departure announcements.

Dr. Leslie Solyom and Dr. Carol Solyom have a different approach to behavior modification at Montreal in St. Mary's Hospital and the Allan Memorial Institute.

The treatment room is a model of an airplane interior and patients buckle into a chair. One hand is attached to a device that can give shocks.

The other hand activates buttons that control a tape recording and film of an airplane taking off. The patient can stop the frightening sounds and sights but will receive shocks if he does.

"We offer them eight treatment sessions, each one an hour long," said Dr. Carol Solyom.

"After that, we expect them to go out and fly. And do you know what? That's exactly what eight out of 10 of them do."

Making Your Own Decorations: Enjoyable, Easy, and Economical

When Christmas comes to the Cranston household on the concession of Thurlow, it's an extra special affair.

As the decorations come out of their storage boxes, memories come right along too.

For the Cranston ornaments and wreaths have been homemade over the years by Sandra Cranston, with a little recent help from sons Mark and Keven, now 11 and seven.

There's hanging decoration in the living room that was made 10 years ago, the first year Sandra and Ken Cranston were married. Fashioned of painted, bent coat hangers, tinsel, and colored balls, it has been "perked up" at intervals, but retains its original charm.

The newest addition is a creche scene on the piano, made this year from starched cloth over bottle shapes for the figures of Mary and Joseph.

And from the years in between, there are a wide range of ingenious, economical and unique decorations.

There are golden bells tied together on the door, that only a few years ago were the tops of bleach bottles. But cut, painted, with little "sleigh-bells" fastened inside, and trimmed with false holly, they have a much more elegant air.

On another door, a Christmas tree gives little indication that it was once an egg carton. Cut into a pyramid, painted and trimmed with green tinsel, the old carton is a pretty addition to the season.

Salmon cans, well-washed and painted gold, have been soldered into a pyramid "tree" by Mrs. Cranston, with an ornament hung in the centre of each can. More of these cans have also been soldered into a circle, and the same technique used to make an attractive window wreath.

The stocking that hangs inside the front door is in fact two macaroni dinner boxes glued together, covered with bright paper and stuffed with tiny, tied and wrapped parcels.

With a strip of metallic filler paper from the oil furnace, Mrs. Cranston made a candle holder that is the basis for a table centrepiece. With sheared pods, painted gold and fastened with pins on a styrofoam cone, she has made a "tree" that serves as an ornament in the living room.

One of her meal-time decorations that's a real favorite with the boys is an upside-down ice cream cone covered with green icing and trimmed with small colored candies.

As a seasonal tough in the bathroom, Mrs. Cranston has sewn a toilet lid cover from felt, that features a happy Santa's face on the top side. Inside the lid, the same Santa holds two red mitts over his eyes to avoid the view.

Mrs. Cranston says that many of her ideas have come from other women in the area, from Women's Institute meetings, magazines, and a night course she attended at Harmony Public School.

"Nothing is hard to do," she says. "It's all fun. It's the one time of year I have a 'hobby' — and I really enjoy getting ready for Christmas."

Sandra Cranston hangs the ornament she made 13 years ago that is still as "good as new" since she freshens the tinsel every few years.

A felt door handle decoration an egg carton Christmas tree, a macaroni box stocking, a cluster of golden bleach bottle bells, and a salmon can wreath — all beautiful, all home-made.

A furnace filter candle-holder, a Santa and angel with detergent bottle bodies, styrofoam ball faces, salmon can tree and a painted milk-weed, pod tree, and the appliqued felt toilet seat cover.

Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. William Gillespie of Roslin, held Open House on Sunday afternoon in St. Paul's Anglican Church Hall, to celebrate their 50th Wedding Anniversary. More than 200 guests attended.

Mrs. Gillespie was the former Ethel Reid, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Adam Reid of Roslin, and William Gillespie, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Gillespie also of Roslin. They were married November 18, 1925 in St. Paul's Rectory, by the Reverend H.R. Pettiem. Their attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Coulter, the bride's sister and her husband, both now deceased. A number of gifts, flowers and cards were received by the "bride and groom" of fifty years. Also greetings and congratulations from the Governor General The Honourable Jules Leger Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and Robert Stanfield.

Nutrition Breaks For School Kids

School officials are adding their concern to the issue of child nutrition, says Olga Wallace, director of nursing for the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit.

Miss Wallace told the counties' board of health meeting that a recent Hastings County gathering attracted teachers, custodians and cafeteria staff from schools in Madoc, Marmora and Trenton to voice their opinions on nutrition.

She said they were concerned about the quality of cafeteria food and advocated mid-morning nutrition breaks in view of the lusting of school students who must leave home as early as 7 a.m. each week-day morning.

Miss Wallace added although nutrition week is completed, Quinte area libraries have requested information on nutrition and seek avenues by which to obtain films on the subject.

She said there have been requests as well for public health nurses to attend public meetings and speak on nutrition.

C.W.I. YULE PARTY

MADOC — The annual Christmas meeting of Sacred Heart CWI, was held in the Parish Hall here recently beginning with the celebration of Mass at six o'clock. This was followed by a sumptuous potluck supper for 18 members and guests.

The meeting after supper opened with the League Prayer, led by the Spiritual Director, Father P.H. Murphy. The minutes of the last two meetings were read and approved. Roll call was taken. Monica Tobin gave the Treasurer's report.

Tickets are now printed for the New Year's Party. These were distributed to some of the members for selling. A list of Christmas shut-ins was compiled to be sent seasonal greetings from the League. A discussion took place on the scholarship to be awarded by the C.W.I. at next year's graduation ceremonies of CHSS. Monica Tobin will look after making an investment at Victoria and Grey on behalf of the League, the interest from which will be used for the scholarship.

It was decided that C.W.I. meetings would be held on a regular basis on the second Tuesday of every second month.

It was reported that $35 had been sent to the Mental Health Association for the Christmas Party to be held at the Madoc Manor Nursing Home.

The meeting adjourned on motion of Marie Mahoney, seconded by Helen Murphy.

Father Murphy then showed a film entitled, "The Good, Good, Good, Good Life", followed with a thought-provoking question-answer period.

An exchange of Christmas gifts brought the meeting to a pleasant close.

Montreal's Second-hand Alley Helps Shoppers Beat Inflation

MONTREAL (CP) — A mini shopping centre located in old houses and called Second-hand Alley is helping shoppers in Valois, a suburb of Montreal, have fun while beating inflation.

All the stores specialize in used articles at low prices. It starts with the Ski Hack, which sells used boots, bindings and skis, and ends with Granny's Attic, which boasts a pot-pourri of old articles.

Except for the Ski Hack, all shops are run by housewives who hope to earn extra money while adding new interests to their lives.

"We've all become friends," said Donna Kelly, joint owner of Granny's Attic with friend Jean McGee; both middle-aged housewives who started their business one year ago.

"We had both been looking for jobs with no success, partly because of our age and partly because of bill 22 and our lack of ability to speak French," Mrs. Cole recalled.

After several months of fruitless effort they came to the conclusion that if they could set up their own business, they would not have to live up to any arbitrary requirements.

Armed with little money and even less stock, they rented their present three rooms in an old home.

"When we started we had nothing to put in the place but my mother-in-law gave us some things," said Mrs. McGee. The older Mrs. McGee also contributed the name.

Fynda Kelly, proprietor of French Fries antiques next door to Mrs. Cole and Mrs. McGee, pays $100 rent, which is much the same as the other store owners in the area.

She began collecting antiques 10 years ago when her mother gave her a spinning wheel to decorate her new home in Pointe Claire.

Then she started cruising through the countryside picking up good buys. After a decade of amassing antiques, she had so many they would not fit into her home.

Barbara Harbinson has found selling used books has become a booming business. She owns Page Two bookstore in the up-mini-shopping centre and says that because new books even paperbacks—are so expensive now, people are quite happy with second-hand prices.

Bob Cavanagh, who owns the ski supply shop, buys his equipment after it has been used for demonstration purposes.

"Our best customers are families with two children," he said.

The Toy Chest exists side by side with the Ski Hack and after children have been fitted with ski boots, they often drop in on Margaret Flower and Bridget Wall to see what games, dolls or Meccano sets they can persuade their mothers to buy.

The shop sells toys in good condition at half price or less. The two women accept only dolls, stuffed cars and the like if they are in first-rate condition.

The most popular toys are used Fisher-Price models and large rocking horses. A doll house in excellent condition sells for $5 whereas, says Mrs. Flower, she has priced them in department stores for $12 and up.

Parents of Twins Band Together

OTTAWA (CP)—Books just can't tell you all the fine points of raising twins, agree members of the Ottawa Twins Parents' Association.

"Sometimes, when they're going through a biting stage you think maybe you've done something wrong to make them this way, and it really reassuring to talk to someone else who has gone through the same experience," said Lynne Crocker.

The 15-year-old association now has 91-members who get together at a local church every fourth Wednesday of the month to swap stories, problems, recipes and just generally let their hair down.

"I remember before the twins came my husband would come home and ask what's for supper," said Diane Mulholland, the association's vice-president.

"After the twins were born he started asking if there was any supper at all."

A $4 yearly membership fee helps defray the association's expenses. Members can attend the monthly meetings, receive a newsletter, take advantage of twice-yearly used-clothing sales, buy used furniture cheaply from other members, hear guest speakers and get store discounts.

"Having twins is not cheap," explained Sharron Welby, association president. Shoes and clothes were expensive and the used clothing sale was a real help.

Twins also pose unique problems, the mothers explained, because they often work together getting into mischief.

"My boys used to get together and see how much toilet paper they could pull through the house before they broke it off the roll," said Lynda Edwards. "They got pretty good," she laughed. "They could pull it through almost every room in the house before it broke."

The association also corresponds with similar groups across the country and with two Australian groups to exchange tips and ideas.

"We usually recruit our members by word of mouth or through birth announcements in the newspaper," said Mrs. Mulholland.

"If I see someone on the street with twins I will ask them if they want to join," added Mrs. Welby.

The women agree that twins create a lot of work—about 120 diapers a week, for one thing—and it takes extra care to arrange feeding and medication as well as every day routines.

"I have to put a chair in the wall to figure out who has put their vitamins and even arranged different colored T-shirts so that I would know who had been fed," said Mrs. Edwards.

"It doesn't always work, though, and at least once my husband got the T-shirt code wrong and fed one baby twice and accidentally neglected the other."

A poll of association members revealed that a surprising number of women who are carrying twins are unaware of the fact until after their babies are born.

"We had 30 people answer our questionnaire and about one-third knew well in advance. Another third knew a couple of weeks in advance and the final third found out they had twins after the event," said Mrs. Edwards, who belonged to the latter category.

"The first thing that always comes your mind is how will I ever cope," she added, and the laughter she shared with other members over the memory showed that humor helps a lot.

Actress Cries Her Way to Teary Fame

TORONTO (CP) — Actress Belinda Montgomery cries in the movies.

She cried for six years in American television programs too.

The 25-year-old Canadian actress discovered when she went to Los Angeles that she was considered a genius because she could turn on the tears.

"I had to cry through most of the first show I ever did (Marcus Welby MD) and I've done it in every one since," she said.

"My agent doesn't even look at the scripts any more. He just asks 'How many minutes does she have to cry?'."

The Welby show was in 1969, shortly after Miss Montgomery left a career in Toronto and signed a seven-year television contract with Universal Studios.

She shed a tear for Medical Centre, Doctors' Hospital, The Virginian, The New Land and many others. She wept through television movies like Women in Chains and Devil's Daughter.

Last year she appeared, with dewy eyes, in her first film, The Other Side of the Mountain.

Now she's working in Toronto on her first Canadian movie, Breaking Point. Miss Montgomery has no speaking lines, only a few tears.

But she's wondering if this film will be the start of something new, perhaps even a permanent return to Canada.

"You get a little jaded putting out that TV crap all the time. But there's no time to make it good. They're shot in seven days, and your leading man says 'Hello, you're in love with me,' he dies, you cry and that's it."

She's also working on a script for a television comedy with her father.

"He started writing it because he looked at the crap on television and just said 'Hell, anyone can do that'."

Miss Montgomery already has writing credits, a children's book she wrote will be published in January and she has just finished producing, writing, directing and selling a documentary on the Colorado mountains to the American educational television network.

"I'm getting definitely more interested in writing and less in acting," she says.

Olympic Doll

As department stores and toy shops rev up for a busy Christmas season, parents are eyeing the market for suitable playthings to place under the Yuletide tree. Regal Toys' "olympic doll" dressed in the official costume, is expected to be popular with the younger children. (CP Wirephoto)

Materialism Causes Bad Volunteer Image

CALGARY (CP) — The idea that volunteers are demeaned by not being paid for their work is a product of the materialistic world, says Lily Frank, national executive director of Hadassah-WIZO.

Volunteerism helps women develop their potential and gives some the necessary self-confidence to go on to other things, Miss Frank said in an interview.

One woman who was "scared to open her mouth" developed enough self-confidence while heading a volunteer project to get a job as a television talk-show host, she said.

Rewards for volunteers came in the form of prestige and satisfaction, which could be much greater than financial gain.

"Ways and means should be found for volunteers to be recognized for the invaluable work they are doing."

Hadassah-WIZO—Women's International Zionist Organization—is a volunteer women's organization which raises money for volunteer projects in Israel.

There are 17,000 members in Canada and 500 in Calgary, making it the largest of its kind in both places, Miss Frank said.

Ann Landers

Her Ex-husband Turns Up, She Fears 'Real Trouble'

Dear Ann Landers: What do I do about an ex-husband who turned up after 7 years and hasn't changed a bit?

A few days ago I was shopping with my mother and my teenage children by my present marriage. Up walks this obnoxious, grinning ape. He yells, in a voice that could be heard all over the store, "I used to sleep with you—big fish!"

My mother recognized the ape before I did. I tried to be polite, introduced him to the children and attempted to move along. He glommed on to me, dragged out a wallet filled with snapshots of his family and proceeded to bore us all to death.

Before I was able to pry myself loose he announced that he had been married twice since we parted company. One wife died, one he divorced, and at present he is unmarried and would like to be friends.

The following day he telephoned me. I got to that. I had a hard time getting off the phone. Five minutes ago he phoned again. How can I get rid of this pest? I don't want my husband to know he called. It could mean real trouble. —Wish My Ex Would Exit

Dear Wish: The way to avoid "real trouble" is to tell your husband at once that the ape called and ask him what he thinks about getting an unlisted phone number.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a girl 14 in ninth grade with a problem I'm ashamed to take to anyone else. I can't bring myself to read in front of the class. The sound of my own voice frightens me. I even have trouble raising my hand and answering a question because I CAN'T start a sentence without saying, "Um-m . . . ," or something stupid like that.

There is nothing mentally wrong with me although I'm sure some people think I'm short a few marbles. It's just this problem of talking. What can I do to get over my terrible handicap? —Locked In

Dear Locked Start by reading aloud to yourself for 30 minutes every evening in front of a mirror. Read to your family or one other person to listen to you. Next check with your school counselor and ask where you can go for speech lessons.

Follow through and don't let anything stop you.

Your problem is not unique. It is shared by thousands of others in varying degrees. It can be overcome if you will start at it. Get going and good luck.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a friend who is blind. She has chosen to use a guide dog to help her get around.

Unfortunately, about 90 per cent of the restaurants, food stores, etc., hire ignorant personnel who don't know that guide dogs are permitted by law to accompany their masters nearly everywhere. My friend is frequently stopped by these uninformed people who question her in a manner that is irritating and offensive. She must then defend herself which is humiliating.

Since your column is the world's largest billboard, please ask your readers to look for a harness on the dog in question. All guide dogs wear one. The dog wearing a harness is allowed by law to go to almost every public place with his master. Tell people not to embarrass sightless individuals who send dogs to replace their eyes. The deserve to be treated with consideration. Thank you. — Santa Barbara Friend

Dear Friend: Here's your letter on "the world's largest billboard." I hope it helps.

Native Use of Fisheries Resources Under Scrutiny

TORONTO (CP) — Native exploitation of fisheries and other wildlife resources came under scrutiny Wednesday at the fifth annual fish and wildlife conference, a United States institution with Canadian associates.

The conference was winding up its first meeting in Canada since 1970 and brings together U.S. midwest state officials and Canadian federal and provincial officials in the same fields.

Allan Murray, Manitoba associate deputy resources minister, had one committee that his province cannot restrain Indians from hunting deer and moose for food by any means while the federal government disclaims responsibility. He called the situation one of a number of anomalies concerning native rights.

"I don't say they don't have this right," he said, "but from the management point of view, at some stage you have to control hunting."

Robert Weir of the federal Indian affairs department at Ottawa said the question of how far natives can go in taking game is a difficult one. The federal government's position is that it is prepared to negotiate native claims rather than get into litigation.

The three-day sittings of 600 delegates heard discussions on a variety of topics.

Two studies dealt with problems of the Atlantic salmon, affected by over-fishing and environmental problems. Richard Saunders of the North American Salmon Research Centre at St. Andrews, N.B., described a project of river rehabilitation using stocks of salmon selectively bred with traits required for establishing runs in rivers.

He said the hybridization program is designed to produce fish with a wide genetic base enabling descendants to adapt to different river conditions.

Wilbur Mauck of the U.S. fish and wildlife service described efforts to determine the effect of toxic insecticides on survival and development of the Atlantic salmon. He said the habitat of the dwindling fish is located in forest areas that are being sprayed for control of spruce budworm.

Thomas Jolliff of the New York State environmental conservation department, speaking on the status project of stocking salmon-type fish in Lake Ontario, said the sea lamprey seems to be the cause for poor survival of stock between 1959 and 1972.

Significant decreases in sea lampreys have resulted from chemical control, though they were still much denser than in any of the upper lakes, he said.

The Ontario charter of the Canadian Society of Environmental Biologists distributed a brief urging that agricultural practices be modified within a total environmental systems plan.

"In the past," it said, "the resource management emphasis has been placed on a species approach, to the detriment of the rest of the environment . . . The over-emphasis of these approaches has led to the management problems that face society today."

The group said there should be a provincial land-use policy to preserve prime land for agriculture and ensure natural resource systems are preserved and managed.

Other recommendations included: Monitoring of soil quality, prevention of over-application of pesticides, discouraging over-use of chemical fertilizers, and abandonement of government subsidies which encourage degradation of natural resource systems such as wetland drainage.

Yellowknife Mayor Doubles as Janitor

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — This Northwest Territories capital of 10,000 has a mayor who gave up being a full-time chiropractor to become a janitor.

Bob Findlay, 41, a burly-bearded father of four, found it impossible to maintain his practice after he was elected mayor in late 1973 for two years as an alderman. So he bid on a janitorial contract for the school board.

"It's ideal for this position because it's large enough that I hire people to do the work," he said.

"When I have spare time I can go in and do things myself. I still do weekly work I've gone over at midnight after a dinner or a meeting or something and put in three hours swinging a mop. City Hall problems will clarify and crystallize during that time."

Mr. Findlay hasn't given up his chiropractic profession altogether. He sees patients at noon, weekends and in the evening at a clinic in his home.

When he's not mopping floors or straightening out patients, he is contemplating a new tax structure for Yellowknife.

"We're going to a split mill-rate situation in 1976. We're going to eliminate our business tax and this in effect will allow us to charge the government a business tax.

"By splitting the mill rate and charging a smaller rate on residential accommodation and a larger one on commercial, in effect every commercial building will pay that increased mill rate. What it will mean here in Yellowknife is an additional $100,000 on the revenue side of the ledger."

Mr. Findlay said he hopes the result will be that taxation on residential property—a three-bedroom home pays about $800 a year—stabilizes and that the major industry, the territorial and federal governments, picks up the slack.

The city receives no significant federal grants but does get help from the territorial government in the form of property taxes—its only source of income. The territorial government gives the city a $30-a-year unconditional per-capita grant and a $5-a-year per-capita grant for recreation.

The territories will pay 50 per cent of approved paving costs and offer 100-per-cent forgiveness loans on approved sewer and water-main construction. Special grants of $25,000 a year are available for the capital cost of approved recreational development.

A $4-million city hall was opened last August. Originally, the plan called for a library and day-care centre on the lower floor of the building but another site was found for the library when economic conditions forced the city to rent the space to the federal and territorial governments.

When the territorial government moved from Ottawa to Yellowknife in 1967, the city's population was 3,200 and services were installed to handle 7,000. The population now stands at about 10,000 and the downtown core sports 10-and 12-storey buildings.

The result, Mr.Findlay said, is a serious strain on the water system.

"Here in Yellowknife, you can't simply send a pipe into a new subdivision and put your laterals on it. You have to circulate the water and heat it in winter so it's not only expensive, it's very complex."

The problem is to make adjustments to the system so it can put enough water through at a high enough pressure without upsetting the existing system and starting all over again. So far, the city hasn't found an answer.

The increase in population also added to the housing shortage, which Mr. Findlay said is currently so bad that a few four years ago when he was looking for a house and had to camp with his family in two tents all summer until he could find one.

"We have, however, just the hint of a situation which would do a great deal to solve the problem. I'm speaking of a major developer coming up here and building houses to sell. We've never been able to attract one before."

Turtle Races Occur in Vermont

JAY, Vt. (CP) — Shining under the light of a single lamp, just off a country road near the ski resort town about 10 miles south of the Canadian border, were the words: BELFRY BAR. TURTLE RACES TONIGHT.

Every Tuesday night is turtle night at the Belfry, as soon as the snow falls and the ski lifts start nearby Jay Peak mountain to begin to whir.

Inside, a four - by - two - foot plastic box with five jewels made of cardboard was nailed to the wall, barely visible behind puffs of cigarette smoke drifting around the sitting air of the tiny pub.

All but one level was lit with tiny twinkling bulbs and the crowd's anticipation was as thick as the foam on the beer.

"We want the turtle race! We want the turtle race!" the patrons were shouting in time with mugs hanging on the wooden tables.

The race was a half-hour overdue when the bartender finally appeared beside the plastic box and blew into the microphone.

A few seconds silence, an announcement crackling over two battered loudspeakers, and the clamour rose when half the tavern rushed to a back room to buy turtles and place bets.

Inside the back room were a mahogany pool table, a lavished snooker table and 19 turtles, the largest the size of a baby's fist, crawling over one another in a cardboard box.

Within five minutes each turtle had been bought for 50 cents apiece and placed in a temporary name.

Silence filled the room as the bartender placed the first five little green animals on their starting spots on the five levels in the plastic box on the wall. There were Speedy Gonzales, Roadrunner, Sunshine, Jake the Jerk and Tortoise.

Shouts of encouragement burst through the room as the host gave a second-by-second account of the turtles' movements in their plastic stage.

Nearly an hour later when the fifth and final race began, the room still hummed with encouraging words directed at one of the tales.

Most of the turtles had crawled only a few inches before turning back to the starting line and refusing to budge another fraction.

71 Years With Weekly

HANOVER, Ont. (CP) — After 71 years working with the same weekly newspaper, Robert (Bert) Scarborough still is working there and he says he may work another 10 years if he is in good health.

"Why stop work when there is work to do and you are only 85?" Bert, who started with Hanover Post 71 years ago, says. He has no plans to retire. He now works four hours a day.

He thinks his term of service is not unusual, even if is one of the longest in Canada's printing trades.

As a Grade 8 dropout, he got his first job at The Post at age 14 as a printer's apprentice and later worked in the mechanical end of the business. He has remained in that department ever since except for a few reporting stints covering city council meetings.

He says that his first three-year apprenticeship agreement with The Post paid him $100 the first year with $50 increments in each succeeding year.

LCBO Cheating Wine Industry

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — The secretary-manager of the Ontario Grape Growers' Marketing Board said Thursday the province's wine industry is not being treated fairly by the Liquor Control Board of Ontario (LCBO).

Keith Matthie told a service club that in 1970, listings of imported wines equalled those of Canadian brands. By 1971, listings of Canadian wines had increased by about 50 per cent, but imported listings had increased 175 per cent.

"Consumers have three times as many opportunities to buy foreign wines," he said. "However, sales of wine per listing are in the reverse order where the 20 brands of Canadian wines sell over three times as many gallons as each brand of imported wine.

"We are simply not being given a fair treatment by the LCBO in the amount of listings they carry. . . .

Opposition Questions Cost of Living Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition spokesmen questioned the credibility of the anti-inflation program Thursday as Statistics Canada reported the cost of living continued to rise in November.

The consumer price index rose nine-tenths of one per cent during the month, mainly because of higher prices for shelter, transportation and food.

The latest figure — the same as that recorded in October — covers the first full month since the selective wage and price controls program was imposed Oct. 14. There have been substantial monthly rises in six of the last seven months, the exception being a slower pace recorded in September.

James McGrath (PC-St. John's East) said in an interview the November index jump is "stretching the credibility of the government's whole anti-inflation program.

"I don't think they have a prayer in expecting wage earners to hold the line in wage settlements while the prices keep going up."

Munro Optimistic Over Paper Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro said Thursday the federal anti-inflation board's rejection of the postal workers' settlement should not affect attempts to resolve lengthy strikes by 25,000 paperworkers.

Mr. Munro said after a meeting with labor, industry, president of the Canadian Paperworkers' Union, that industry managers in Eastern Canada have been hiding behind the wage-and-price control guides.

The paperworkers on strike at various mills in Ontario, Quebec and the Atlantic provinces, are seeking a first-year pay raise of $1.80 an hour on a base pay rate of $4.22 hourly — a little more than 20 per cent.

The board turned down a similar increase to postal workers earlier this week.

The federal wage guidelines generally limit first-year pay raises to 10 per cent, although larger increases may be granted in special cases.

Vancouver Faces Scepticism at UN

OTTAWA (CP) — Scepticism about United Nations policies and the federal contribution to UN Habitat conference in Vancouver in June are major problems facing Canadian organizations trying to build support for the meeting.

In an apparent reference to a recent UN resolution condemning Zionism as racism, a draft report by a federal advisory group on the UN conference says:

"It is difficult to convince people that a United Nations conference can credibly pursue international understanding and promote a sense of international morality when the UN General Assembly itself displays contrary tendencies."

But Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson, who has been trying to calm these emotions, took the opposite tack Thursday night in speaking to a pre-Habitat conference here.

He said "something rather electric has happened to make Habitat take off" — the political problems plaguing the conference which is to look at urban problems around the world.

Mr. Danson, a Jew, firmly stood behind the conference despite a request by Vancouver city council last month to cancel the meeting.

After a hurried visit by Mr. Danson, city council agreed to co-operate with the conference (though it refused to withdraw its objection.

The Canadian Habitat committee says in its draft report to the federal government that such decisions by the UN "seriously diminishes the respect with which the UN is viewed in Canada."

"The committee has been holding regional conferences across the country for more than a year to accord and voluntary groups and individuals on their views about urban problems from transportation to the quality of life.

The committee also says that people remain unconvinced that their views will be seriously considered by the government in preparing its conference position.

Mr. Danson told the final conference, of these voluntary groups, Thursday the government has not yet decided what position it will take and that delegates would have a say.

Enrique Penalosa, a former Colombian cabinet minister who is secretary-general of the Habitat conference, told the delegates the Vancouver conference will be a political meeting.

It would be political because it was a conference of governments, he said, and a chance to attain political action on urban proposals.

"The technical formulas are available," he said. "What's badly needed are the political decisions, the political commitments at the international and national level."

Opposition Seeks To Improve Pensions

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs stole nearly a day from the government's pre-Christmas legislative timetable Thursday to press for action to improve pensions of former prisoners of war.

The government still hopes to conclude a heavy business load including unemployment insurance changes, a bill to eliminate special tax advantages to advertisers in Time and Reader's Digest and a bill amending citizenship laws before Dec. 19.

All three bills have met with strong criticism in the Commons.

But plans to press on with the government legislation were disrupted Thursday when Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) put forward a motion demanding action to raise the pensions of former prisoners-of-war.

Mr. Knowles and the Progressive Conservatives have been pressing the government recently for legislation to enact pension improvements unanimously approved by a Commons committee six months ago.

Veterans' Affairs Minister Dan MacDonald, who had to wait for a Cabinet vote before speaking in the debate, said the proposal still was before cabinet for a final decision.

Mr. MacDonald said all ministers have legislation they want approved but have to face restrictions because of competing priorities and available resources.

The report causing the dispute urged higher pensions for veterans who were prisoners of the Japanese in the Second World War and also some improvements for prisoners in Europe. Widows of prisoners would also receive increases if the proposals are approved.

The Commons committee asked for benefits for veterans held by the Japanese which would total the base pension plus another 50 per cent and additional benefits for disability.

Other prisoners would be paid pensions based on the length of time confined. Veterans held for up to 1½ years would get 10 per cent of the base amount; those held 1½ to 2½ years would get 15 per cent. Those imprisoned longer would get an additional 20 per cent.

Mr. Knowles said he thought Mr. Macdonald has been pressing for the legislation but the government had set it aside because of its spending restraint policy.

Clarke Rollins Waves During Recent Campaign, His Last, He Says.

Clarke Rollins Firm on Decision to End Career

BY HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reprter

MADOC — Local Progressive Conservative organizers are making no immediate plans for the political successor to Clarke Rollins.

His constituency organization in Hastings-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington has only a new executive.

Like everyone else they were caught unawares by Mr. Rollins surprise announcement Thursday he will retire from provincial politics.

But no one yet is talking a nomination convention to choose a candidate for the next provincial election.

In fact, Terry Pigden, new Conservative association president in the riding here, said Thursday he wants to talk once more with the veteran MPP before any future plans are discussed by the executive.

But interviewed from Queen's Park Thursday, Mr. Rollins was asked if anything could happen to alter his decision.

His reply is a word: "No."

He retires whenever the next provincial election is called, ending a long career in public affairs.

Starting as councillor in his native Wollaston Township in the 1940s, he became a dominant force in county politics which his election to the legislature in—1959. He has campaigned under three premiers—starting with Leslie M. Frost.

Now 61, he still maintains the characteristic image that keeps him in close contact with local affairs for 16 years. His stay in office has kept his constituency territory expanded until it reached from north of Peterborough to Deseronto in this year's provincial election.

There has been some expectancy among those close to Mr. Rollins that he might seek re-election. But his sudden public confirmation at a party organization meeting here was a total surprise.

The indication comes from Ken Smith, Conservative association president for the last 10 years and manager of four successive Rollins campaigns.

"I felt he wasn't going to run again," said Mr. Smith, who is reeve of Elzevir-Grimsthorpe Township and former county warden. "But the timing of the announcement came as a surprise.

Discussing his decision, Mr. Rollins noted his length of service, and the size of his new constituency.

He and his wife, Beverley, have a four-year-old son, Thomas.

"I have my family to think about too — which is important," said Mr. Rollins.

But he also made mention of this week's debate he attended at county council involving Hastings official plan.

Provincial government officials came in for criticism as the county's planning committee continued of delays. Mr. Rollins suggested he could arrange a meeting at the ministerial level on the issue. But the committee decided to confer once more with civil servants.

Mr. Rollins said the move "was a definite contributing factor" in his decision to announce his retirement.

He said it was "a clear indication" that it "wasn't necessary to have an elected representative involved" in the official plan process.

"I was prepared to offer assistance to get the official plan finalized and it wasn't accepted."

Province Cancels Monday Meeting To Discuss New Bay Bridge Study

A meeting set for next Monday in Belleville between provincial transportation officials and local government representatives on a new Bay Bridge route has been cancelled.

The discussion was to review findings of the study involving a new Highway 14 link across the Bay of Quinte between the Belleville area mainland and Prince Edward County.

Cancellation of the meeting set for the Hastings County administration building was announced by Hugh O'Neil, MPP Quinte.

His announcement indicated the transportation and communication ministry's study team was awaiting more data from senior governments.

Reason for calling off the meeting was "lack of clarification of points" from the provincial environment ministry and federal transport department, he said.

Prince of Wales Hazard?

School Shape Concerns Parents

BY RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

A parent group at Prince of Wales Public School, in Belleville's north end, will meet with Hastings County Board of Education officials early next month to discuss the possibility of a new school to replace the existing 51-year-old structure.

A spokesman for the group, Rolly Thomas, said Wednesday parents are becoming increasingly concerned about the physical state of the school, particularly in view of what they consider potential fire hazards.

Mr. Thomas, a parent of a student at the school, explained that some parents are worried about fire hazards and believe the only real solution is a new school.

Bob Harwood, superintendent of this school, said Thursday board officials have been aware of the problem since 1967 when it listed a new facility here as a top priority.

Mr. Harwood said the board believes that advanced renovations would not correct the situation but he added that a new facility to handle about 400 students, would now cost $1.1 million.

Mr. Thomas, an area assistant bank manager, said the school's principal and staff do everything they can to cope with the physical structure. He said the principal even conducts cash drives to compensate.

The Hastings board took over Prince of Wales Public School in 1959 when that part of the township was annexed into the city. Mr. Harwood said a new school on the 4.5-acre site is still "top priority for the board."

However, he added a note of caution by saying that the capital forecast looks bleak for that year. Since the province introduced education spending ceilings the board only gets a fraction of its requests.

Mr. Harwood said the board sympathizes with both school's staff and parents. He said board officials would be happy to meet with the parents.

During 1974, both the staff and school's official parent group Prince of Wales School Advisory Committee prepared reports on the school's physical problems as well as some recommendations. Prince of Wales currently has an enrolment of about 220 students and serves a kindergarten to Grade 8 cross section. The school also houses an exceptional Grade 6 class.

The school basically has a multi-level structure with several additions in later years.

Pleasant Surprise

Paul Johnsen, one of only a handful of stone masons left working their trade, said he had mixed feelings when he was asked to restore the stonework in the 120-year-old St. Thomas' Anglican Church. "I was pleasantly surprised that the fire had not deteriorated the stone as much as I had thought," he said.

Stone Mason Says St. Thomas Biggest Project of His Career

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Whether its cutting stone for St. Thomas' Anglican Church or for a fireplace, stone mason Paul Johnsen of Wellington treats his work as an artform.

A vanishing breed, Mr. Johnsen is currently one of four qualified stone masons between Montreal and Toronto and one of a possible six stone cutters in all of Ontario.

As a sidelight, two of Ontario's stone cutters are now working with Mr. Johnsen in the restoration of St. Thomas Anglican Church. "I've got half of the best in the province working."

"Working with stone is special," he continues and shaping it is an artform," said Mr. Johnsen. "I put my heart and soul in to it. It's hard to explain."

He started his trade 25 years ago in Toronto as a steeplejack mason earning $1.10 an hour.

"Got when I was first asked to work on St. Thomas I knew it would be the biggest job I had ever done and I had mixed feelings whether the job would be practical."

"I didn't think it actually could be done," said Mr. Johnsen. "I was pleasantly surprised that the stonework hadn't disintegrated as badly as I had thought."

Working with many hand-tools that are no longer made let alone used by contemporary tradesmen, Mr. Johnsen and his silent crew have completed about 70 per cent of the church renovation. Other trades still must complete re-inforcement of walls, plumbing, mechanical and electrical work.

Rev. Peter Tett, whose congregation was left without a church following the fire which gutted the 120-year-old structure, April 19 said "firm financial projections will not be available until late in January when contracts for restoration work have been let."

The church financial goal for restoration is set at $750,000, of which $527,000 is taken care of through insurance money. Rev. Tett said the congregation has already raised $194,000.

"We've still got a long way to go...$63,000 at least," he said.

"I'm fairly confident we'll be able to move back in by October," he said.

'Ham' Operators Need More Space: Expert

By CLIFF KENTON
Staff Reporter

Canadian amateur radio operators need more frequencies and will be asking for them president of the International Amateur Radio Union (IARU) said in Belleville Thursday.

Noel Eaton of Waterdown said amateur radio operators will press the Canadian government to request additional frequencies for their use at the International Telecommunications Union (ITU) conference in 1979.

"We will undoubtedly be asking for more frequencies and justify that request because of growth," Mr. Eaton told members of Quinte Amateur Radio Club.

He said there are now about 15,000 amateur radio operators in Canada. With predicted growth at about 3% to four per cent a year he said there will be about 40,000 by 2000.

Additional frequencies are needed, he said, due to congestion and interference and sharing of frequencies with other air wave users.

He said he met with members of federal department of communications earlier this week to begin investigations into Canadian proposals to be made at the 146-country ITU conference to be held in Sweden.

"There have been enormous changes in this organization in the past 20 years," said Mr. Eaton.

Functions of ITU, formed about 100 years ago, include allocation of frequencies and setting of technical standards and operating procedures. Membership since the last convention in 1959 has increased by 60 countries.

Transports Collide

Highway 401 traffic near Marysville Rd. Thursdaff was snarled for several hours early today as police and emergency crews and tractors untangle the wreckage left after two, westbound tractor trailers collided near the Salmon River Bridge.

Belleville OPP corporal Dan Garlick, investigating the 3 a.m., rear-end crash, said investigation into the mishap is continuing.

Andre Perets of Brmpton, driving for Hanhand Transport Lines hauling general freight for Canadian National, and William Baldwin, in a following truck hauling from pulp and cleaning solvent, both escaped serious injury in the collision.

Cpl. Garlick said approximately $7,000 damage was done to the trailer of the lead truck and $20,000 damage to the tractor of the Baldwin rig.

Drivers May Get First Aid Course

City bus drivers may in future be skilled in first aid techniques, the result of concern by transit commission over a late November car-bus collision that sent eight persons to hospital.

Belleville Transit Commission Chairman Hayden Burt broached the subject at a commission meeting yesterday, saying drivers should be have some of the same techniques in case of a similar emergency.

She suggested that the course be organized through the commission, possibly with St. Johns Ambulance.

Commission manager Lewis McMullin said he will discuss the course with employee union representatives in the near future.

New Nursery Tries Unique Approach to Child Care

By SUSAN MCCONNELL
Staff Reporter

First Adventure — an adventure in learning for nursery-age children — is the name of a centre located on the corner of Bridge and Bleecker streets.

The centre, in an old house now under renovations, opened Monday for 13 children. It will officially open early next year.

A pilot project, First Adventure is the first of its kind in Ontario and possibly Canada. It is a unique project that stemmed from the work of volunteer organizations in the Belleville community.

The centre began with the organization of the Belleville Children's Centre, lead by Miriam Bishop of the Volunteer Bureau.

The philosophy is integration between average children and children with physical or mental handicaps.

First Adventure consists of three levels.

The basement nursery is operated for emotionally disturbed children by the psychiatric department of Belleville General Hospital and is funded by the ministry of health. The co-ordinator of this level nursery is Mrs. Carol Carruthers in Mary Sutherland.

The main floor will house children with emotional or physical handicaps while a regular nursery school will operate on the top floor.

The upper levels receive 80 per cent of its operating costs from the ministry of community and social services and depends on the charitable donations for the remaining 20 per cent.

Bridge Street United Church contributed, has given $2,000 towards expenses, and the Belleville Yarlmen Benefit Fund has also made a donation.

First Adventure also received a Local Initiatives Program grant to hire a driver and custodian.

Some parents are paying $3 per session per child.

The main level can accommodate 20 handicapped children in two separate sessions, morning and afternoon. On the second level 50 children, 25 in each program, can be accommodated.

The staff, directed by Anne Carruthers, a registered nurse consists of six people, all with Early Childhood Education diplomas. Two hold certificates in mental retardation.

The nurseries feature children work areas such as a cellar, where the children will be integrated for learning experiences. Observation was done complete with sound systems are used throughout the centre.

The integration program is scheduled to begin January.

"Preschool children do not have a bias or prejudice — they are slid in their formative years," said Mrs. Carruthers.

"If we expose the average child to children who are different than they are, they can grow with these children in a natural way."

Mrs. Carruthers said the staff also plans to work closely with the parents.

"Handicapped children are often exposed to programs which segregate them. They aren't exposed to the average children — their peers," she said.

"You can't just deal with the children. The family situation has to be dealt with as well."

Cash Taken

City police today say a ladder was taken from a neighbour's home be thieves in a late entry through a kitchen window at 30 Applewood Dr., where $11.00 in coins were stolen Wednesday.

Nothing else was stolen and no damage was done to the home of Mrs. Jane Williamson during the burglary, police say.

Thiever gained entry by forcing the kitchen window.

Delegation Seeks More Funds for Dams

A delegation from city hall and the Moira River Conservation Authority (MRCA) is in Toronto today to discuss funding of fee-control dams with provincial government authorities.

Government cuts in the MRCA's 1976 budget have forced plans for building the two dams.

Construction has been set to start next year on the projects — near College St. and further downstream at Reid St. — designed as permanent flood-control measures for the city.

The budget cut ruled out building the College St. facility. Provincial officials suggested the Reid St. dam could be built, but the MRCA considers construction of the downstream project first as unwanted planning city council has been told.

The aim of today's delegation is to ask the government to reconsider the budget cuts or provide sufficient funds to build the College St. dam first.

James McLeod, MRCA secretary-treasurer, said Thursday the group was to meet with Natural Resources Minister Leo Bernier's parliamentary assistant.

However, an immediate decision is not expected, he said.

Any changes would also have to be reviewed by the cabinet's Board of Management.

MRCA representatives along with Mr. McLeod are manager John Johnston, chairman Guy Hughes and vice-chairman Harold Thompson.

Espo Goes Home to Surpass 1,200 Points

PHIL ESPOSITO

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was a homecoming, of sorts, but Phil Esposito, one of Boston Bruins' leading all-time scorers, looked out of place Thursday night wearing the visiting blue uniform of New York Rangers.

Esposito showed no emotion when he received a standing ovation from a packed crowd of more than 15,000 at Boston Garden.

Once the National Hockey League game started, Esposito got down to business.

In his first Boston appearance since being traded Nov. 4 to the Rangers, the big centre managed two assists, one on Steve Vickers' tie-breaking goal in the second period, as New York took a 5-1 victory.

The loss snapped the Bruins' 4-game unbeaten string—nine wins and five ties.

In the only other NHL game Thursday, Minnesota North Stars beat Kansas City Scouts 5-3 with Bryan Hextall picking up two goals and two assists for the winners.

World Hockey Association results were Edmonton Oilers 3, Calgary Cowboys 1; and Winnipeg Jets 4, Indianapolis Racers 3.

In other results put the Rangers in a third-place tie with Atlanta Flames, both with 28 points in the Patrick Division. The Bruins remained second in the Adams Division with 33 points.

"I was pressing, there's no doubt about it," Esposito said after becoming only the seventh player in NHL history to reach the 1,200-point mark in regular-season play. Gordie Howe, with 1,850 points, is the all-time leader in the category.

Esposito reached 1,200 points with his assist. Then he went to 1,201 by helping set up Vickers for another goal in the third period. He now has 541 goals and 50 assists in his NHL career. And the bulk of his scoring—459 goals and 535 assists—came in slightly more than eight seasons with the Bruins.

Vickers snapped a 1-1 tie with his 11th goal at 16:02 of the second period. He went in alone to beat goalie Gilles Gilbert after Esposito and Rick Middleton outmanoeuvred Boston defenders to reach the puck.

Kansas City peppered goalie Pete Loprestti with 18 shots in the first four minutes of play, but the Scouts came up empty-handed. Minnesota led 2-0 after the first frame.

Bill Goldsworthy and Dwight Bialowas gave the Stars a four-goal advantage in the second period.

In Calgary, two unanswered goals in the third period carried the Oilers past the Cowboys before 4,143 fans.

The victory moved Edmonton to within three points of the third-place Cowboys in the Canadian Division.

Rusty Patenaude, Tim Sheehy and Norm Ullman scored Edmonton's goals while Dutch Deadmarsh accounted for all the Calgary scoring.

Right winger Nick Harbaruk scored his 13th goal of the year to help the Racers tie the Marners 3-3 in overtime.

The Racers overcame a 3-1 deficit with two goals early in the third period. Brian McDonald scored only 20 seconds into the period to cut the score to 3-2 and then Harbaruk scored at 2:06.

San Diego moved to a 2-0 lead when Norm Ferguson scored his 15th goal at 5:07 and Ray Addunno scored the first of two goals at 11:25.

Brockville Taken Over

OTTAWA (CP) — The Central Junior Hockey League has taken charge of Brockville Warriors as an interim basis while the club offers sort out recent management problems.

Jean-Yves Lalonde, league information officer and president of the ruling Ottawa District Junior Hockey Association responsible for junior hockey, made the announcement Thursday night.

He also said Walter P. Jewell had been fired by the five other club owners as president and part-owner-manager and that Don Dexter, the team coach, had been named interim general manager.

But, because the franchise is in Jewell's name alone, it was thought here that the league take control until either Rick Moser or Ray Bellai—two of the other owners from Philadelphia—travelled to Brockville for Saturday's or straight matters out.

In the meantime, the club will fulfil its commitments to the league, including a game this tonight against Rockland Nationals that Jewell said Wednesday would have to be suspended.

In his Wednesday statement, Jewell said the club was being withdrawn temporarily from the league while ownership and responsibility difficulties were ironed out.

Lalonde said Thursday it was this withdrawal of the team, without consultation with the other owners, that led to Jewell's dismissal.

The six Philadelphia owners bought the club last year with Jewell liaising between the club and the owners.

In the third race, Mighty Fun and Prince Terry combined for an exactor worth $488.50. The exactor of Tex Worthy and Pretty Linda in the fifth returned $402.10.

Asselstine May Return

TORONTO (CP) — Ron Asselstine, who quit as a World Hockey Association referee last Friday after a run-in with George Howe, said Thursday he has reconsidered and will return to work as a linesman.

The WHA, which gave him time to reconsider his retirement this week, "let the door open for me to come back as either a referee or a linesman, but I don't think I can continue with the pressures of refereeing."

The incident that sparked his quitting occurred in Houston when the veteran Aeros' winger 4th owed the official in the stomach while arguing a minor interaction.

Asselstine gave Howe a game misconduct and the Aeros' star winger slid club president subsequently was assessed a two-game suspension, the first suspension in nearly 30 years of professional hockey for the 47-year-old Howe.

Asselstine left the ice after clashing with Howe and the game was delayed for 20 minutes while the two coaches, Houston's Bill Dineen and Bobby Kromm of Winnipeg, coaxed him to return.

"I kept taking the game home with me," Asselstine said. "I was always trying to referee a perfect game and when it couldn't, please everybody it carried over off the ice."

Loyalist Climbs Over Break Even

Loyalist College Lancers completed the first half of their 1975-76 season Thursday night with a convincing 79-55 victory over visiting St. Lawrence Fleming from Peterborough. The win put the Lancers at 5-4 record and marked the first time the squad has finished with a better than .500 record in the first half of their Eastern Ontario College Athletic Association schedule.

Ken Fairbank, who scored 19 points Wednesday in a losing cause against Kingston, topped in 26 against Sir Sandford. Jim Belfall and Mike Lynch were next with 14 apiece and Dave Culmer had nine, seven of them from the free throw line. As a whole the Lancers took full advantage of Peterborough's numerous fouls. Loyalist was good on 66 per cent of their foul shots.

Nicks Making Mark

Nicholson Catholic College Junior Nicks are quickly making a name for themselves in Bay of Quinte Basketball Association action.

The Nicks opened their regular schedule Tuesday, defeating Quinte Saints after winning the Centennial Junior Tournament on Saturday. Thursday night they came out on top in a tight defensive contest with Belleville Collegiate 42-32.

Boyd Kalnay and Paul MacAlpine paced the Nicks with 12 points apiece and Ernie Rainbow got 11. John Green scored nine and Randy Donovan seven for BCI.

In the midget contest, the Collegians came back from a five point half time deficit to earn a 44-35 victory over the Nicks.

Mike Wright went to town scoring 22 points for BCI. Teammate Don Wilson added 13. Tim Coates and Mark Crawford replied for Nicholson with 13 and seven points respectively.

Bayside Off To All-Ontario

Bayside Red Devils will represent Central Ontario at the Ontario Federation of School Athletic Association girls basketball championship January 8,9,10.

The decision was announced Thursday by Bayside's coach, Terry Boyd. Bayside the only team was the AA Central Ontario Secondary Schools Athletic Association championship Saturday, there was some discrepancy as to whether they or Nicholson Catholic College should represent the region. The Nicholson entry emerged the A COSSAA title on the weekend and in late November captured the Bay of Quinte championship.

"Generally the best team from the area is selected to represent the area," said Boyd. However, since Nicholson's enrolment is so small they had the right to participate in the A COSSAA tournament. Bayside played off in AA and won their Central Ontario classification.

Since this is the first year ever for an all-Ontario girls basketball championship, it was questioned as to which team had the right to represent the Central Ontario region according to team strengths. Though Bayside had earned the right by winning a higher class COSSAA championship, Nicholson had proven their strength by defeating all other teams in the immediate area, including Bayside, for the Bay of Quinte championship.

The decision was made based on a COSSAA ruling which stipulates any A school wishing to participate in an AA tournament must first eliminate all other AA classified schools.

As a result, Nicholson would have had to play off against Bayside and NCC elected to pass.

TONY MEAGHER

Meagher Clicks In Metro Play

If you're at tonight's Metro Junior B contest at the Memorial Arena analyze the strength of the Belleville Bobcats up the middle. Although highflying Paul Tilley won't be back from his suspension until Sunday's game in Brampton, the Cats still have two of the finest centres in the league. One, of course is veteran Grant Goegan, the other is rookie Tony Meagher.

At only five-foot-seven and 133 pounds, Meagher is leaving an impression on every team in the league. Though just 17 years of age he plays with all the finesse and self-discipline of a ripe veteran.

Meagher started the season on a scoring goal scoring clip. Th.i rookie tallied at least once in each of the Cats first six games and after the initial nine starts of the schedule he had amassed 12 goals and 11 assists.

In the following four games, one of which he missed, Tony was held off the scoreboard completely. But just as the Cats appear to be revitalizing their attack, Meagher seems to have completely broken out of his short slump.

In his last three starts he has scored four times. Tonight against flaying North York Rangers, Meagher could perform some incredible goaltending feats. His real test though will come Sunday. An excellent two way player, Meagher will have to put all of his talents to work to be effective against the powerful Brampton Blues.

The number to watch for tonight, if you want to watch a fine all around hockey player is 18.

Lions Lose to Oshawa

Belleville's Lions Midgets breathed a sigh of relief Thursday night following their 6-3 Ontario Minor Hockey Association loss to Oshawa Parkway TV. The game was the last the Lions will have to play against the powerful Oshawa team in the 1975-76 regular schedule.

The local club has yet to win a game in AA OMHA hockey against their Oshawa counterpart. Thursday, they jumped in front 3- in the first period, but were quickly taken in hand.

Rob Bonino, John Janopoulos and Peter Hall were the marksmen for Belleville.

TERRY MURPHY

Reid's Handed Setback

Reid's Dairy suffered their second setback of their 1975-76 campaign Thursday night when Devolin Motors beat them 5-3. The Dairymen now stand with an 8-3 record, well up on their Quinte Hockey League counterparts.

Doug Jodoin paced the winners with two goals and an assist and Dave Lambert, Paul Paddon and Phil Meeks added singles.

Rick Rosebush, Gerry Lucas and Moe Hunter replied for Reid's.

In the other QHL contest, O'Brien-Steele doubled up on Belvedere Hotel 6-3. Andy Prudden scored three times and drew an assist to lead the O'Brien-Steele attack. Kevin Allne potted a pair of goals and picked up two assists and Don Goodfellow tallied the other.

Ken Just, Mike Van Alstien and Jason Morris were the Belvedere marksmen.

Bobby Bonds Sent Packing for Second Consecutive Season

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — New York Yankees started the winter baseball meetings by unloading Bobby Bonds in the first of two trades designed to give the team a new player image to go with its refurbished stadium.

The question is whether the Yankees put their money's worth in deals Thursday with California Angels and Pittsburgh Pirates. They gave up Bonds and popular pitcher Doc Medich in return, they got a swift outfielder in Mickey Rivers, and three pitchers, Ed Figueroa, Ken Brett and Dock Ellis, and infielder Willie Randolph.

Visibly shaken by the trade, Bonds said: "The next time something like this happens, I'll by want to know what's going on and why before I leave. It's going to have to be with my consent, 'cause otherwise I'm not going."

The wheeling and dealing by New York was the big news of the fifth day of the meetings, which also brought the announcement that the National League would continue to finance the financially troubled San Francisco Giants until Dec. 31. The league expects the Giants to be sold to one of a number of viable offers, says league president Charles Feeney.

Among the groups seeking to buy the Giants are Labatt's Brewery of Canada and the Maple Leaf Gardens bid headed by Lorne Duguid, both interested in the team for Toronto.

The big surprise was moving Bonds, who came to the Yankees last year from the Giants for Bobby Murcer. Bonds played hurt most of last season, but still managed to hit .279 with 32 home runs, 85 runs batted in, and 30 stolen bases; he set a major league record with 131 home-30 stolen base accomplishment for the third year in a row.

Gabe Paul, president of the Yankees, said "we didn't win last season. I resisted trading him (Bonds), but it opened the door for more trades."

In Rivers, New York obtained one of the fastest outfielders in baseball. The 27-year-old Rivers batted .278 with only one homer and 53 RBI, but he stole 70 bases to lead the American League.

Paul and manager Billy Martin wanted Figueroa, as does Medich would be expendable in the deal with the Pirates. Figueroa, a right-hander, won 16 and lost 11 in his first full season, with a 2.90 earned-run average.

Randolph comes highly recommended by scouts as a strong defensive player with a good arm. He can play second or shortstop. He appeared in 30 games for Pittsburgh last season, and hit just .165.

The 27-year-old Brett is strictly a gamble. He has been on the disabled list several times in the last two seasons with a chronic elbow condition. When he's healthy, the lefthander is a fine pitcher. He was 9-5 with a 3.36 ERA in 1975.

In other trades Thursday, as the deal fatly rounded to 11 involving 38 players, Houston sent third baseman Dave Rader, the National League's top-fielding third baseman, to San Diego for pitchers Larry Hardy and Joe McIntosh; California Angels moved first baseman Jim Spencer, whom they acquired Wednesday from Texas, to Chicago White Sox for third baseman Bill Melton and right-handed pitcher Steve Dunning, two major league veterans; and a White Sox farmhand with previous experience at Cleveland.

Ilie Nastase Takes Team Tennis Bait

WTT Goes After Biggies

NEW YORK (AP) — World Team Tennis landed one of the biggest fish in international waters, Romania's Ilie Nastase, Thursday and dangled lures in front of other established stars, including Arthur Ashe of the United States, Australian Rod Laver and Jimmy Connors of the U.S.

Nastase, who only last weekend won the rich Grand Prix Masters in Stockholm, wound up as a member of the Hawaii Leis after a bit of wheeling and dealing involving New York Sets.

The fiery Romanian decided while in Sweden that he would like to play with WTT but not in New York, where he has been roundly criticized for his discourt gamesmanship and explosions.

The Sets, who owned his draft rights, gave Nastase permission to deal with the Leis. They came to terms quickly. Ilie signed a one-year contract for a salary reported in excess of $100,000.

Cleveland Nets drafted a blue-ribbon lineup that included Ashe, Connors and Swedish ace Bjorn Borg.

Millan Hurlers Favorite Target

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — National League pitchers didn't have Ron Hunt to knock around during the 1975 baseball season. They picked on Felix Millan of New York Mets.

Official statistics released today revealed that Millan was hit by the most pitches this year, 12.

Hunt, the infielder whose big league career ended after the 1974 season during which he was hit 16 times, led the league in seven consecutive seasons in the painful category and he holds the major league career record of being hit 243 times.

Dave Parker of Pittsburgh Pirates edged Greg Luzinski of Philadelphia for the 1975 slugging title, with a percentage of .541 to Luzinski's .540.

Cincinnati's Joe Morgan, the league's most valuable player, drew the most bases on balls, 132, and among players with a minimum of 502 plate appearances hit into the fewest double plays, three.

Ralph Garr of Atlanta and Luzinski shared the league lead in intentional walks, receiving 17 apiece. Mike Schmidt, two-time home run champ, also became a two-time strikeout champ, fanning 180 times this year.

McGinnis' Greed Pays

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

You really have to hand it to George McGinnis.

Philadelphia 76ers did Thursday night and as a result they took a 118-106 National Basketball Association victory over Phoenix Suns.

McGinnis kept getting the ball from his team-mates and wound up with a game-high 28 points, including 14 in the last 10 minutes.

McGinnis not only contributed offensively, but defensively as well. He made a vital steal and turned it into a three-point play with 25 seconds left.

In other NBA games, Atlanta Hawks defeated Buffalo Braves 122-99, Cleveland Cavaliers trimmed New York Knicks 109-95, Washington Bullets beat New Orleans Jazz 117-94 and Golden State Warriors trimmed Portland Trail Blazers 101-89.

American Basketball Association results were: Denver Nuggets 111, Virginia Squires 109; and New York Nets 124, Indiana Pacers 123.

Nine of McGinnis' points came in the last two minutes after Phoenix had edged ahead 104-99 with 2:30 left. The victory raised Philadelphia's record to 17-6 and gave the 76ers six consecutive victories. The loss snapped a three-game winning streak for Phoenix and left the Suns at 11-9. Alvan Adams led Phoenix with 21 points.

Atlanta's John Drew came off the bench and scored 13 second-quarter points to lead the Hawks to an easy victory over struggling Braves.

Drew, who finished with 29 points, teamed with Tom Henderson, who had 10 points in the second quarter, as the Hawks overcame a 26-24 Buffalo first-quarter margin to take a 58-44 halftime lead. Henderson finished with 21 points. The Braves lost for the eighth time in 10 games and fell below .500 at 11-12.

Dick Snyder and Bobby Smith scored 12 points each in a third-period rally as Cleveland ended a three-game losing string by beating New York. Cleveland trailed, Jim Cleamon added 10 of his team-leading 26 points in the final quarter.

Phil Chenier scored 24 points and got plenty of help from his team-mates as Washington raced past struggling New Orleans. Jimmy Jones had 16 points while Elvin Hayes, Len Robinson and Dave Bing each had 15 in the balanced Bullet attack.

Paced by the shooting of Jamal Wilkes and Charles Dudley, Golden State pulled away in the second half to beat Portland. The NBA's defending champions remained unbeaten at home through 10 games and made their overall season record 16-6.

And often a silent tear
And always precious memories,
Of a dear husband and dad.
Of always loving and kind and tender missed by Ralph and Barbara and grandaughters Janice and Jennifer.

WADAS — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Nicholas Cecil Eric Wagar who left us December 13, 1972.

Kingston Choir Gives Bright Performance of Handel's Messiah

By Eugene Lang

Georg Frederich Handel's most enduring masterpiece "Messiah" is as much a part of the Christmas season as mistletoe or plum pudding.

Thursday night, a choir of approximately 50 voices from Chalmers United Church, Kingston joined with the Kingston Camerata, an orchestral ensemble of 15 instrumentalists, all under the direction of David Cameron, gave an exhilarating performance of this perennial favorite of large scale religious works at the Church of St. Michael the Archangel here in Belleville before an audience that could have been much larger than it was.

During the past 100 years it seems that each choir leader or conductor seems to vie with his colleagues as to who can produce this composition with the most bloated choir and largest orchestra, supposedly in ay from these increased forces more thrilling aural effects.

But, strange to say, Handel himself in the later years made do with a choir of 23 voices and an accompanying orchestra of about 20 players. Thus, it is only of recent years that conductors have taken a new look at this oratorio and are depicting the usual heavy choirs so that they are skimmed down to more of what the composer desired.

Furthermore, Handel left it to the interpreter(s) to inject into the score added vocal embroidery and embellishment as befitted their degree of musical improvisation.

This was customary in his time, but a new school of thought arose in the last century that received only the printed note, to be interpreted — no additions.

Mr. Cameron went back to Handelian customs in that a good number of the solo selections were endowed with those extra trills, mordents, appoggiaturas and free wheeling vocal mannerisms.

To present day ears this might seem to be an impudence to the often heard hallowed phrases that we hear in a set pattern, but in actuality it was a breath of fresh air tinged with charm and thoughtful recreativeness on the part of conductor and his soloists.

Soprano Audrey Farnell possesses a delightful voice of bell toned clarity which was given full rein in Rejoice, Greatly, O Daughter of Zion with restful literature included in the vocal line. Binding sounds of dulcet appeal were evinced in I Know That My Redeemer Liveth as sung in a non-mannered version con licenza.

Mezzo-soprano Edith Lane was admirable in her solos, especially in the familiar He Was Despised. Maybe it was because of the acoustics of the church, but her voice at times came across as somewhat muffled as it reached these ears.

Tenor David Galbraith brought to the aria Every Valley a feeling of exulted excitement while Thou Shall Break Them was declaimed with forceful approach.

Baritone Randall Marsh added a rich resonance in his offerings, again a muffled sound emanating at the odd interval, which we cannot exactly examine as it was the acoustics. Why Do The Nations was taken at a unflinching pace with frenzied fury in a tingling exercise of vocal virtuosity. In The Trumpet Shall Sound this powerful voice sank into the depths of the range rising up with strong strutting that were endangered by appealing obligato of trumpet.

The choir rose to every occasion at the bazaric bid of Mr. Cameron. They were incisive in their entrances where counterpoint commanded, and nuances of timbre shone through at many places. The bearers were so enthralled that applause broke out following the shattering Hallelujah Chorus. Precision, clarity and inspiration were three of their trademarks.

We could have stood a little more backing up from the tympani in the heavier choruses, but this seemed to be held in reserve for only two examples that we hear. The harpsichord continuo flavored the accompaniments most delicious.

The orchestra as a whole gave exemplary balance to the vocal selections, be they solo or concerted. All in all a lovely Christmas present from the Limestone City to the Quinte area.

Hearing Aid Gift

Seven-year-old Allan Telford of Stirling received a hearing aid from the Belleville district council of the Boy Scouts of Canada Thursday at Sir James Whitney School (OSD). Fran Hoon, council secretary, made the presentation. The hearing aid was donated this year instead of a Christmas basket.

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Wayne Newton and Ann-Margaret have been named the top male and female performers in the fifth annual Las Vegas Entertainment Awards.

Don Rickles and Joan Rivers were named best male and female comedians, while comedian Gabriel Kaplan was selected best supporting act of the year.

Singers Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme were named the top musical variety act of the year.

The awards, announced Wednesday, are voted by the 2,000-member Las Vegas Academy of Variety and Cabaret Artists.

DUBUQUE, Iowa (AP) — The manger in the local fire department's Christmas display is empty this year. Firemen snuck one stole the infant figure.

"We decided to set up the crib without a baby," fireman Ronald Kann said. "Maybe the empty manger will prompt the thief to return the statue."

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Plans call for Pope Paul to ride an electric cart down a ramp several blocks long to an altar in John F. Kennedy Stadium next August to celebrate mass at the International Eucharistic Congress.

Two local architects, Peter Fink and Robert Beauchat, won $5,000 for the design.

Their plan calls for more than 220,000 seats to be set up on scaffolding in the parking lot between the 100,000-seat stadium and the 17,000-seat Spectrum Auditorium, a quarter-mile away. The ramp will be suspended above the seats.

The altar will be 45 feet high and large enough to support the 500 priests who will assist the Pope. Below will be a 1,000-member choir and a 200-piece orchestra. It will be set up to face the open end of the stadium and will be visible to people in the temporary seats outside the stadium.

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — John James Hornsmpe streaked naked from the Auburn city jail in a zudey escape that has police looking through the prisoner's yoga and astrology books for clues.

Hornsmpe, 28, scaped his five-foot, eight-inch, 160-pound body and squeezed through a six-by-15 inch jail window in his escape last Friday, police said.

Police Chief Ed Hindpet said Hornsmpe's clothes and a bar of soap were left behind in his jail cell.

OLDHAM, England (Reuter) — A few juicy swear words, expressed at the right time, can help immigrants feel more at home in their new country.

At least that is what a government-sponsored language school here feels. The school is spending £7 immersion in this mill town the art of cursing.

Language teacher David Bickett, who is giving special swearing lessons, says: "A lot of swearing goes on and a newcomer has to feel he belongs."

TORONTO (CP) — Harold Greenberg, president of the Montreal and Toronto-based Astral Bellevue Pathe, has announced his company plans to spend $15 million in the next year to produce feature movies in Canada.

Mr. Greenberg said the project is the largest assembled in the country and will involve international stars and co-produceers and some investment from the Canadian Film Development Corp. (CFDC).

He said the plan includes two films already in production—The Breaking Point and The Little Girl Who Lived Down the Lane.

The Breaking Point is a $1.1-million thriller co-produced with 20th Century Fox and the CFDC. It stars Bo Svenson and Robert Culp and is being filmed in Toronto.

Italian director Carlo Ponti is co-producing The Little Girl Who Lived Down the Lane which stars Alexis Smith and Martin Sheen and is being shot in Montreal.

NEW YORK (AP) — No matter what the topic of conversation with Marcello Mastroianni, the subject always centres on love.

"The idea of my being a great lover was invented in America. I am not a lover. I work too hard," said the Italian actor who came to fame 15 years ago as the star of La Dolce Vita.

"But women are still the most important thing for me in life. They are much more important than success or money," said Mastroianni.

He then declines to discuss his much-publicized liaisons with Catherine Deneuve, with whom he has a child, and actress Fay Dunaway. He has been married for 25 years to an Italian actress.

"I like romance that is filled with excitement and danger," Mastroianni said. "If everything is easy, you run the risk of being impotent. I like to be involved in a game."

Mastroianni is, 51, and not happy about it.

"I hate physical destruction. Why does it all have to go? If there can find a way to put more on the moon, why can't they invent something to keep us young? he asked with only a hint of a smile.

There is a certain indefiness about him, albeit a charming one.

Orange Juice Does Not Create Acidity

By G.C. THOMPSON, MD

Dear Dr. Thompson: My husband has had a duodenal ulcer for many years. Recently he developed shortness of breath when climbing stairs. His doctor advised him to have a blood test and it showed him a trifle low in potassium.

He recommended that serve him orange juice or a banana daily. Each of these items aggravate his ulcer symptoms. The doctor cannot understand why.

Ordinarily, the ulcer seldom bothers him, but apparently he cannot tolerate the juice or banana. What other fruit or vegetable can you recommend to help build up potassium requirement, and which will not affect his ulcer?—Mrs. R.R.P.

I share your doctor's reaction. The banana, a rather bland fruit, should not aggravate your husband's ulcer. In fact, it is recommended in some ulcer diets because of its low residue. And contrary to popular opinion, the orange juice does not increase stomach acidity, so he should have been able to tolerate that also.

Both of these fruits have the double advantage of high potassium content and rather low sodium. Other fruits as dates, raisins and prunes, are also high in potassium but higher in residue, so they probably wouldn't do for your husband. You might try cooked dates or canteloupe, both of which also are good sources of potassium.

The orange juice was a good selection for another reason. Persons on ulcer diets often do not get sufficient vitamin C. So you should be sure that he is getting vitamin C from some source, either food or supplement.

There may be another important factor involved here. This could be a trying time for your husband mentally. He has discovered his shortness of breath, and now is told his system apparently lacks an important mineral, which could be incidentally, be a cause of that shortness of breath. Nervous tension can be a contributing factor in ulcer 'aggravation.

Your husband should be made aware of this possibility so that he can even be prepared for it, if this is what is involved. Perhaps he is something more heavy that he should from sheer nervousness, even with perfect health. This could aggravate an ulcer condition.

Dear Dr. Thompson: I would like some information on fatty liver. I was hospitalized and was found to have blood lipid levels of 369. What does this mean?—Mrs. R. F.

A fatty liver is, as the name implies, a liver in which there is an inordinate amount of accumulated fat, sufficient to produce a large enlargement. Obesity, excessive alcohol, diabetes, and certain vitamin deficiencies for example, can be involved.

The figure you quote has no meaning unless you know just what it represents. Blood is a measurement of the total blood lipids (cholesterol, triglycerides, phospholipids) then it would be within normal range. If it refers tb cholesterol alone, for example, then it would be ominously high.

As to the fatty liver itself, treatment would depend on its cause.

Dear Dr. Thompson: What does "leucoscoliosis" mean?—Mrs. C.O.

Scoliosis is a lateral curvature of the spine. Leuo is a combining word that means "white." So, leucoscoliosis means a curvature to the left. Dextroscoliosis would mean curvature to the right.

Dear Dr. Thompson: What are the dangers of a 14-year-old girl getting emphysema from smoking? This boy seems to have a cold and a cough he (dates. I am worried. Do you think parents ought to allow children that young to smoke?—S.H.

Of the several factors leading to emphysema, smoking ranks high. The cough implies some lung irritation, which could be a direct result of the smoking.

Starting the habit as early as 14 makes the boy a prime candidate for emphysema by age 40 or 50, depending on the durability of his lungs. Then, the damage cannot be repaired.

Do what you can to discourage it.

Blue Christmas

(Key of F)

I'll have a blue Christmas without you
I'll be so blue thinking about you
Decorations of red on a green Christmas tree
Won't mean a thing if you're not here with me.
I'll have a blue Christmas, that's certain
And when that blue heartache starts hurtin'
You'll be doin' all right, with your Christmas of white,
But I'll have a blue, blue Christmas.

Opening lead—♣ 6

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

The whole subject of part score bidding has been given very sketchy treatment by writers. There is a good reason for this. Each hand is unique, creates its own special problems.

There is one area of general agreement about two hids with part score which is that the strong-suit two bid is a one-round force even though it is a bid of game.

With 60 on score, North elected to open two hearts. South responded two notrump and North decided to pass. His reason was that his hand should take eight tricks and with not take nine.

His idea turned out to be a good one. The defense started with five spade tricks. South discarded the six of diamonds and jack of clubs from dummy and took the final eight.

If North had played at three hearts he might have found some way to make the contract but it would require considerable help from his opponents and we have found that opponents don't always co-operate.

AVOID FROZEN LOCKS

Motorists can avoid the irritation of finding frozen locks on car doors this winter by placing an adhesive bandage or adhesive tape over the keyhole. To open a frozen lock, insert a key heated by a match or lighter, or squirt some de-icer into the lock.

BATTERY FAILURES

About 44 per cent of car breakdowns are caused by battery, starter, and ignition trouble. Usually the battery is blamed for the difficulty, but surveys show that the battery rarely has been run down by the frustrated driver's attempts to start a balky engine. Worn spark plugs or points, ignition leaks, or electrical troubles often are the culprits. Most batteries have a useful life of about three years when kept fully charged and properly charged.

To get maximum life from your battery the following measures are essential:

1. Keep the battery fully charged.

2. Keep terminals and other connections clean and tight.

4. Keep the battery case exterior clean.

A point to remember about battery output. A battery that has full power at 80 degrees will have dropped to 40 per cent of its power at 32 degree. When the thermometer falls zero, the battery will have only 40 per cent left. Since the starting load is heavier when the weather is cold it pays to keep your battery fully charged.

QUESTION: When are the high rates in effect in models in Florida, Arizona, California and Mexico?

Mr. Frank L.
Belleville

ANSWER: In FLORIDA the high rates start December 15th in most motels, until April 1st in places like Miami Beach and Fort Lauderdale prices almost double after mid-December. Motels around Daytona Beach and Disneyworld are not as expensive in mid-winter because it is cooler here so people are flocking further south. After March 1st the temperatures go up around Daytona Beach and Disneyworld and so do the rates.

ARIZONA AND CALIFORNIA

Three seasons are observed in most hotels. Summer rates are effect from June through September run considerably less than during the winter. Fall rates are priced half-way between. For some motels the fall season starts in mid-December, for others it may be as late as February 1st.

MEXICO

Light summer rates occur from May to September. Fall, Winter, and the rest of the fall and winter, until the first of April you should get sunny weather. Off season rates prevail from May through September. From mid-December to April rates are highest. Mexico City does not have off-season rates and the high altitude make it lovely all year round.

QUESTION: We are thinking of retiring to Phoenix, Arizona because we like the climate. Could you please tell us if this is true and prices throughout the year.

How far is it from Kingston and what is a good fast round route down by-passing cities?

Mr. Larry B.

ANSWER: PHOENIX, Arizona has indeed a dry, clear climate where the sun shines 9 days out of 10 which carries the temperatures up into the high seventies in winter. But the nights are cool, in the low 50s or fifties and you need a sweater or coat at night. The weather is perfect for golf and exploring the desert, for riding and shopping. You can drive to Mexico in a couple of hours. You can get good motels as low as $15.00 or pay $45.00 or more for poolside luxury at a top inn.

Phoenix and its twin city Scottsdale are lots, very popular for retired people. In addition to the excellent golfing, they both have fifth avenue shops. A hearthsaver for husbands but wonderful for wives. These shops have exclusive Indian Handicrafts. There are scores of shops in each area selling authentic blankets, paintings, pottery and other beautiful dolls. These are not roadside souvenir types but real works of craftsmanship. The Fifth Avenue shops are not the New York Fifth Avenue name brands. It's a western style of rambling shops and shops with covered walkways and little courtyards. Near Phoenix but if you fall in the age bracket which is fifty years of age or more, is the retirement community resort of Sun City, which offers reasonable air-conditioned apartments.

Average maximum temperature from December to April is 68 high in December going up to 84 high in April. Average minimum low is 40 degrees in December to 52 degrees in April. From May to fall September average maximum temperatures range from 91 to 102 degrees, evening temperatures during this time range from 60 to 70 degrees.

The mileage from Kingston to Phoenix, Arizona is around 2500 miles depending on your route. Ring Out Ye Wild and Merry Bells

(KEY OF C)

Ring out, ye wild and merry bells,
Ring out the old, old story
That first was told by angel lips
Long ago
Ring out the realms of glory!
Peace on earth was their sweet song,
Glory in the highest!
Ring, sweet bells, ring ever more,
Peal from ev'ry steeple,
Christ the Lord, shall be our King
And we shall be His people!
Ring out, ye silvery bells, ring out
Ring out your exulatation!
That God with man is reconciled
Go tell it to the nations.
Therefore let us all today,
Glory in the highest—
Sounds sorrow far away,
Glory in the highest!
Ring, sweet bells, ring ever more,
Peal from ev'ry steeple,
Christ the Lord shall be our God
And we shall be His people!

Your loss is your gain.

Opposition MPs Attack Immigration Guidelines

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs continued their attack Wednesday on a proposal to shorten the residency requirement for Canadian citizenship to three years from five.

The shorter residency requirement will place a low value on Canadian citizenship, said William Scott (PC—Victoria-Haliburton).

Lionel Beaudoin (SC—Richmond) said an immigrant can live for three years on the margins of society without learning how to be a citizen. The five-year period was needed to find out more about the immigrant.

However, MPs welcomed other sections of the bill to make men and women equal under the Citizenship Act and allow 18-year-olds to apply for citizenship independently of their parents. The age limit now is 21.

The Commons turns today to a bill to limit the federal share of increased costs under provincial health insurance programs.

Bill Kempling (PC—Halton-Wentworth) said he thought the five-year residency period should be retained but he is willing to change his mind. He said the United States, Great Britain and France all have waiting periods, and Belgium the waiting period ranges up to 10 years.

Walter Baker (PC—Grenville-Carleton) said a clause in the bill removing the requirement that a prospective citizen be of good character would reduce the Citizenship Court in stature.

Discretionary power would be transferred from an impartial court to the minister, who is a politician, he said.

The bill also would permit children born abroad to adopt the nationality of either parent. Existing law does not grant Canadian citizenship to children born outside Canada to a Canadian woman and an alien man unless the child is born out of wedlock.

Harvie Andre (PC—Calgary Centre) said this change should be made retroactive. He cited the case of a child born in Chile to a Canadian mother and an Argentine father. The child is virtually stateless, he said.

Stanley Haidasz (L—Toronto Parkdale), former multiculturalism minister, said the bill is long overdue. It would give new rights to potential citizens and make citizenship a qualified right.

Eric Marchand (L—Kamloops-Cariboo) also defended the bill. He said the proposed three-year limit is probably too long. The most difficult decision is for an immigrant to leave his native country. "Once mature people have made mature decisions . . . why should we put them through the agony of waiting five years?"

Mr. Marchand also welcomed the proposed end to special privileges now granted British subjects.

Under the present law, British subjects do not have to prove knowledge of English or French and are not tested on their knowledge of Canada.

Mr. Baker said there was good reason for giving British subjects special consideration under the act.

"We must bear in mind that many people who come to this country have enjoyed the British parliamentary system, British justice and other protections of the law as a matter of tradition."

Under the amended act, a Canadian citizen would no longer be considered a British subject but would be termed a "citizen of the Commonwealth."

The bill would also end the special citizenship break granted alien women who marry Canadian citizens. Under the current law, they only have to reside in Canada for one year before applying for citizenship.

Alien men who marry Canadian women have to wait the full five years before they are eligible for citizenship. The bill would require both men and women to reside in Canada for three years before becoming eligible for citizenship.

Nova Scotia Lobster Began Crawfish Fad

PLAQUEMINE, La. (CP) — In the legendary bayous of southern Louisiana they say it was the toughest, hungriest, rankest little critter that ever came out of colonial Nova Scotia.

Says researcher Archie Wardlaw: "This tiny fella could do anything. He could pat his bear, run his belly, eat a weed, chase an intruder and dig a hole all at the same time."

The local Cajun folk who farm this tranquil, misty swampland hope sincerely that Canadians will welcome back his vastly multiplied descendents.

The creature in question is really a bit of Canada—the Nova Scotia lobster reputed to have emigrated south with the Acadians when they were expelled by the British in 1755.

With a little irrigation, farmers can regulate water supply in a pond, draining it in late spring when the crews bury themselves to reproduce prodigiously and flooding to about 2.5 feet in the fall when they emerge.

Rice farmers can grow crawfish along with the rice since the fields have to be flooded nearly half the year anyway.

Crawfish munch on duckweed, primrose and tiny animal matter and, since the wetlands are largely useless except as a home for straying alligators, they are easily converted to a crawfish's paradise.

Live crawfish can be bought here for roughly 40 cents a pound. Rough estimates are that the retail cost further north would reach at least 80 cents.

"He's the real genuine Louisiana mud puppy," says waitress Sally Archer, "and up north they'll fall in love with him!"

Crawfish, or crayfish as they're known in the rest of the world, look like tiny lobsters and for generations they have been a staple of the Cajun diet.

That in itself is not a recommendation since not all Cajun food is a delight. "A Cajun will eat just about anything, that doesn't eat him first," says John Thibault of nearby Breaux Bridges.

But crews are different. For years they have been sought out by tourists and visitors, cooked in a hundred different ways and combining the best taste of lobster and shrimp.

For years they were taken for granted locally, fished from swamps and grounds in the bayous.

"You need huge amounts," says Larry de la Bretonne, a biologist at Louisiana State University (LSU) in Baton Rouge, "because people down here eat them in such immense quantities.

"The meat in the tail and the bit in the claws is pretty limited so you get a family buying maybe 40 pounds of little claws for a cookout."

Now, thanks to a major development program by the state government, farmers and businessmen with "Asian country" have started farming crews scientifically with plans for beginning a major export drive to the northern states, Canada and even parts of Europe.

Last year, the area devoted to crawfish pools in Louisiana climbed to 44,000 acres from 24,000 in 1971 and 6,000 in 1966.

Says John Fowler, an LSU crawfish expert: "A lot of Canadian entrepreneurs are beginning to show an interest in getting in on the action and so are the French and the Spanish. There are already a few restaurants in all those countries offering Louisiana crawfish as a delicacy."

The tiny crew—about 3.5 inches long and weighing ¼ of an ounce—is a dream crop.

Christians to Attend Olympics for Kindness

MONTREAL (CP) — Some 10,000 young Christians coming to Montreal from around the world next summer during the Olympics won't be armed with Games tickets are movie cameras.

They're coming to share in what a co-ordinator for the program calls "acts of practical kindness."

The volunteers, sponsored by 41 evangelical Christian denominations and organizations, will man distress centres, information booths and day-care centres as well as distribute Christian literature and present religious entertainment.

They'll be representing such diverse groups as the Canadian Bible Society, the Salvation Army, the relief organization World Vision International and the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. Half of the groups are Canadian.

An agency set up for one year, Akto Olympique, has the troublesome task of co-ordinating the work of volunteers coming from Europe, Asia, Canada and the United States for periods of two weeks up to two months.

A focal point of the effort is a three-day crusade by American evangelist Billy Graham during the middle weekend of the Games, July 23-25.

Mr. Graham's crusade director, Sterling Huston, told an October meeting of Montreal clergymen and lay leaders representing 60 area churches that the evangelist had selected a bilingual 36-year-old university geography professor. He will be assisted by three other full-time workers.

Prof. Foggin, who left his research and teaching position at University of Quebec at Montreal for a year, said the committee aims "to assure a valid Christian presence during the Games."

He said the job of the committee is to co-ordinate the work of the various visitors "and help them be involved in the life of the community in practical ways."

"I find it exciting that so many different and varied organizations are willing to drop their differences and work together," said Mr. Foggin.

One of the committee's projects is the printing of a resources handbook which contains information on every kind of assistance available to visitors.

Another is a 24-hour telephone crisis centre staffed by 20 people—with such referral personnel as doctors and psychiatrists—which visitors can call if lost or ill or trying to locate friends," said Prof. Foggin.

He denied the crusade represents proselytism. "We are sharing our experience of the love of Christ, especially in practical ways, so people will realize it goes beyond theory or philosophy."

CIAU Lifts Limit

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union (CIAU) Thursday lifted its limit on the number of foreign athletes on college teams until it can be reaffirmed by a vote next month by the organization's general assembly.

The ruling, limiting the number of athletes trained outside the country to 10 on intercollegiate team rosters and to three in any one game, was challenged Wednesday by lawyers for Acadia university and its students union.

They said the ruling is discriminatory and threatened to seek a court injunction to prevent its application if the CIAU did not scratch it from the books.

In a resolution Thursday, the CIAU board of directors voted to suspend the rule until it can be reaffirmed at its general assembly in Toronto Jan. 12.

The board said, however, it still holds to the principle of its Rule on foreign players and asked members to abide by it until the general assembly decision.

Needles Go To Court

VANCOUVER (CP) — A mother told a British Columbia Supreme Court judge Thursday that she gave up "almost everything else" to make her four sons top hockey players and athletes with character.

Mrs. Jean Neeld was testifying before Mr. Justice J. C. Bouck in a libel action against CKNW radio sportscaster Al Davidson and Western Broadcasting Ltd., concerning a Davidson broadcast Dec. 17, 1973. Mrs. Neeld, her husband, Norman and son Greg, 20, are the plaintiffs.

Clement McGinley, a North Shore Winter Club official, testified that Mrs. Neeld was suspended from club privileges for three months in the spring of 1973 for interference with coaches. The entire family was later expelled.

Jeville O'Sullivan, former hockey coach at another area winter club, lightheart, said that he coached Greg Neeld and that Mrs. Neeld once swore at him as she pummelled his chest with an umbrella.

In his broadcast, Davidson said, "To my most of them (parents) hate the Neelds' guts would be an understatement because the Neelds some time ago figured they had another Bobby Orr in the making and they played it that way."

Irish Terrorist Gives Up

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard confirmed today that Michael Wilson, described as "the most-wanted terrorist in Britain," was among the four IRA gunmen who surrendered Friday after releasing a middle-aged couple they held hostage in their own apartment for six days.

The three other gunmen were not named, and none was expected to be charged with murder. Police suspect the four are responsible for bombings and shootings around London in the last five months in which nine persons were killed and scores wounded.

Police had suspected during the siege that the man known as "Wilson—an alias—was among the members of the Irish Republican Army who burst into the apartment of John and Sheila Matthews last Saturday night.

Wilson is wanted for the slaying of Ross McWhirter, co-editor of the Guinness Book of World Records and organizer of an anti-terrorism campaign. McWhirter was shot down by two men on the doorstep of his north London home Nov. 27.

Doctor Defends Actions

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Dr. Michael A. Simurda, an orthopedic surgeon, told Friday in Ontario Supreme Court that the effects of rheumatoid arthritis caused the arm of a former Kingston resident to stop functioning a rarely-performed bone operation.

Dr. Simurda was testifying in a malpractice suit filed by Mrs. Ina M. Kelly, 23, of Belleville, Ont., against Dr. John W. Hector, a Kingston orthopedic surgeon.

Dr. Simurda said he based his findings on clinical observations of Mrs. Kelly and described a surgery made of her arm before Dr. Hector performed a nerve transplant and an osteotomy on her in July, 1971.

Dr. Hector, Dr. Simurda and another surgeon testified that an osteotomy—in which the patient's bone is broken by the wedge of a transvolsella, an instrument shaped like a pair of pliers—is a rarely-performed bone operation.

Dr. Simurda said he thought Mrs. Kelly four years after the operation and before that she was unable to move her arm from a neutral position or lower it down by her side. He said the cold not cock her wrist in the operation was a slight cleaning deformity of the fingers.

Dr. Simurda said Mrs. Kelly's arm was affected by rheumatoid arthritis in her right shoulder and wrist before Dr. Hector did the surgery.

Violence in Hockey

Crosbie Lets Players Know How They Stand

By MARK BRETT
Sports Staff

A positive reaction to Attorney General Roy McMurtry's avowed intention of cracking down on violence in hockey has emerged in the form of warning signs placed in both the city's arenas.

Appearing over the name of Douglas Crosbie, city police chief, the warnings quote the Criminal Code, section 245, subsection 2, which reads:

"Every one who unlawfully causes bodily harm to any person or commits an assault that causes bodily harm to any person is guilty of an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for five years."

Chief Crosbie, with the consent of local sports authorities, had the signs posted at Memorial Arena, home of the Belleville Bobcats, and Dick Ellis Rink.

"A word to the wise will be sufficient," observed Crosbie.

He says, "I felt that if the information was provided as to what the consequence is for acts of violence, it would be enough of a deterrent."

"We have had no reports of excessive violence in hockey in this area so it would be stupid for us to waste our time sending a man down to every hockey game," he explains.

The questions which keeps cropping up in discussions on violence is: What is considered violence and what is not? And, following that avenue of thought, where is the line drawn, and when do the police step in?

Crosbie sheds some light on the subject by explaining that "in a game, just as in boxing for example, the participant, knowing he has chosen to enter a civilized contest to a certain amount of roughness."

"If a fellow is given a good, clean body check and gets up and hits the fellow who put on the head, that's violence.

He says quite bluntly that "the whole thing is crazy."

In his view, the issue is "way out of hand and entirely blown out of proportion."

The Belleville coach describes himself as "aggressive minded" and makes it clear that in spite of the commotion over violence in hockey he has not changed his game plan.

Bonnar emphasizes the confusion that has arisen over the situation.

"The players don't know how far they can go now before they run the risk of getting a criminal record which could prevent them from taking a hockey scholarship", he says.

Rick Langstaff, a defenceman with the Junior B club, says, "my style of play hasn't changed a bit."

He terms the present situation regarding violence as "ridiculous" and adds, "as soon as somebody gets locked up for five years, I'll change my style of play."

Peter Grant Geegan has noticed "no change in the style of play in the league from last season" in spite of the violence issue.

"I think the intentions are good as long as they're going to crack down on things like hurt ending and spearing," says Geegan.

He is of the opinion that important thing is that the players are made aware of the law.

In coach Bonnar's view, there is more violence in the Metro Junior B League than in the National Hockey League.

"There has always been violence in hockey but you're less likely to see spearing in an NHL game than you are in this league," he says.

"Hockey is a living for the guys in the NHL," says Bonnar. "Like anyone else, they protect against having that living taken away from them."

He voiced concern for the safety of the hostages, some of whom have been captive for nearly two weeks.

TORONTO (CP) — Four men and four women were killed and serious injured Friday when a GO Transit commuter train rammed a Toronto Transit Commission (TTC) bus stopped at a level crossing in the city's east end.

Jack Ackroyd, deputy chief of Metropolitan Toronto police, said Friday the collision occurred after the southbound bus stopped and was not able to move from the controlled crossing on the intersection of St. Clair Avenue East and Midland Avenue

The eight persons killed, all of Toronto, were not identified by early Friday. A police spokesman said six of the injured were in critical condition.

Witnesses said the back door of the bus, which was carrying about 30 passengers, was jammed as it moved on to the crossing. Buses will not stop if a door is left open.

They said passengers streamed off the bus as lights flashed, gates descended and the train approached with its horn shrilling.

Witnesses said some of the persons killed were standing behind the bus, thinking they were out of the train's way. When the train struck the front of the bus, the bodies were sent over into the passenger standing on the road.

Allen Mooney, a passenger who got off the bus before reaching it was stopped on the crossing, said a middle-aged woman was thrown about 30 feet through the air and landed face down on the road ahead of the bus.

"She might have smothered to death," Mrs. Mooney said. "I turned her over and stayed with her until the ambulances came."

Capt. Norman Shelton of the fire department in the borough of Scarborough, where the accident occurred, said firemen and crewmen were removing the dead and injured when his crew of four arrived.

"There was so much going on, we just moved from one to another, comforting them, giving them first aid and a little oxygen," he said.

A spokesman for GO Transit said none of the train passengers or crew were injured. The train, No. 967, was westbound on a non-stop run to the downtown Union Station, from Pickering, just east of Toronto.

The undercarriage of the bus was knocked 30 feet down the track in the accident which occurred at about 4:30 p.m. EST and another southbound train was in the area.

Gordon Hurlbert, TTC chairman, said Friday the accident was the most serious in the commission's road service.

In one of Canada's worst train-bus accidents, 20 teenagers were killed in Dorion Que., in 1968.

The TTC is satisfied that the bus driver, Donald Sloe, did all he was humanly able to do to avoid the accident and get people off the bus, Mr. Hurlbert said.

Mr. Sloe, a TTC driver for 21 years who received an award for safe driving in 1974, was taken to hospital in shock, the commission chairman said.

He said witnesses say the bus driver got off the bus and tried to flag down the train, which approached from west at a mile before stopping. The train was going about 35 m.p.h. when the accident occurred, he said.

Some witnesses said the train approached the crossing at a speed of about 70 m.p.h. The GO transit spokesman said "there would be nothing unusual about a train passing the crossing at that speed.

Police said the driver of the train engine applied his brakes several hundred feet from the crossing as soon as he saw the bus, but was not able to stop.

Labor Concedes

Australian Tories Win by Landslide

"I think it will be a disaster for Australia," said the country that the majority of Mr. Fraser will be at least large."

Counting for the Senate was much slower but early returns indicated as anticipated that there as well.

"We have lost a very great number of seats," Whitlam said in Canberra. "The Liberal Party has gained a very large number of seats. Let me congratulate Mr. Fraser on his victory."

But Fraser told reporters in Melbourne: "I don't see this as a victory for the Liberal party. It is a win for Australia."

He said the coalition now becomes at his policies "to move Australia forward."

Whitlam was ousted as prime minister by the representative of the Queen, Gov.-Gen. Sir John Kerr, on Nov. 11 after the Labor government was unable to get 25-76 appropriations bills through the opposition-controlled Senate, calling a parliamentary deadlock.

Nov. 21 — was such that little remained that did not depict violent behavior.

Their teacher, Helen Osborne, impressed upon the royal commission the need for local networks — Cobourg and Port Hope — to carry educational programs in the Bancroft area.

The publicly-owned CBC was under considerable fire from the audience, with one member, Rev. Henry Maloney of Bancroft, suggesting the Ontario government end subsidies to that segment of the media which portrayed violence as acceptable behavior.

The public, Mr. Young said, should urge the government to support good programming.

Particularly Ontario residents "should raise hell" with their government for dropping plans to broaden broadcasting of TV Ontario education programs outside of Toronto and Ottawa, where multiple station choice now exists.

The 59-million saving, in a provincial budget of 24-billion is "peanuts", he said. TV Ontario programming in areas such as Bancroft and Timmins "should provide alternatives where few exist now.

Mr. Young suggested putting pressure on MLA's to change the government's policy.

Miss LaMarsh said later North Bay, which now has only one channel, had expected to receive TV Ontario programming in 1976, something now unlikely

In answer to concern over violence and "foul language" during programs in Bancroft, Miss LaMarsh told the audience to complain. "The CBC is yours. Raise hell all over the lot," she said.

"Don't worry about the cost isn't the solution, she said. "You're paying for it anyway."

Bancroft Viewers Told to 'Raise Hell' Over TV Programming

By AL ZARAS
Staff Reporter

BANCROFT — Public pressure should be exerted on politicians to bring alternative television programming, particularly educational, into isolated parts of Ontario, Judy LaMarsh, chairman of the royal commission on violence studying media violence, said here Friday.

Her suggestion came amid complaints at a public hearing that alternatives to violent TV programs were almost nil in the Bancroft area where two, and at most, four television stations are available.

"You'd be surprised what a deluge of mail will do," Miss LaMarsh told an audience of 70, among them Grade 8 students from Frontenac Public School.

One 13-year-old student, Bradley MacKenzie, outlined a classroom project by nine 11 and 12-year-olds that concluded 18 of 20 different programs on four stations over a week depicted "violent acts" murder, fist fights, beatings, and property destruction.

Programming was between 4 and 10 p.m. weekdays and all day on the weekend Nov. 16 to commission is dealing with live theatre as well as comic books.

"We have an assurance of their sympathetic interest," she said, later indicating the commission's report to her its eventual report stand the test of a considerable length of time.

Recommendations, said Mr. Brandien, are going to be made to all levels of government, but if nothing is done there, other options are open.

"I hope the industry is responsible enough that they would not sit by and allow government to do nothing," Mr. Brandien said.

Royal Commission Makes No Promises of Action

BANCROFT — Ontario's royal commission studying violence in the media need no guarantee of a public meeting here Friday for its report to be of realistic recommendations will be made here.

Judy LaMarsh, commission chairman, said the report may be "too hot to handle" for the government of Premier Bill Davis and it may do nothing, unless the public applies pressure.

"We don't know what will happen," Miss LaMarsh said.

The three-member commission is scheduled to make its recommendations to the minority Conservative government in late 1976.

Miss LaMarsh and commission member, newspaper columnist Scott Young and family court judge Lucien Beaulieu, met Friday morning and Friday to questions doubting the commission's ability to alter, in this case, television violence.

The commission said the chairman, looks upon itself as the research arm of the federal CRTC (Canadian Radio-Television Commission).

"We're doing what they can't do," said Miss LaMarsh, referring to the CRTC's jurisdiction, limited to the broadcast media. Whereas the

Local Solutions to Curb Violence On Television

Violence in the media can be combatted with pay TV or through a government-funded anti-violence publicity campaign, the Ontario royal commission on violence in the communications industry was told Friday.

The suggestions were two which arose from among 70 persons who attended one in a series of 28 provincewide public hearings in Bancroft.

Discussion centred during the hearing on television violence and methods to curb it. Some suggestions follow.

— Jim Clayton, saying his comments need not reflect the position of the North Hastings Community Radio Committee of which he's chairman, suggested pay television would make people more selective about programs they watched.

— Rev. Henry Maloney, representing the Bancroft area ministerial association, suggested a provincially funded media campaign against violence.

— David Pollak, Hastings Lennox enforcement officer, suggested details describing weapons, suspect, type of injury to victim be set out in news reports.

— David MacLeod, principal of Maynooth Elementary School said there should be a definite family viewing time. Some form of censorship of violence noticed to protect children.

— Fool language or violent emotion should be edited from live interviews, he stated.

— Scott Young, people suggested, and so also commissioners, that advertising be prohibited and to allow their commercials to appear in programs airing violent behaviour.

Secret Pay Vote Board Mistake

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

Just when the Hastings County Board of Education was beginning to demonstrate a new-found maturity and responsibility, trustees this week went behind closed doors and with a 9-8 vote increased their honorarium to $750 from $500 a month.

Anyone who is familiar with the work of a trustee would agree that $750 is well deserved and in some cases not enough. But the board has undoubtedly made two moral and political mistakes.

The raise represents an 11.6 per cent increase which exceeds the 10 per cent limit of Ottawa's anti-inflation program. While honorariums are exempt from the guidelines, the board exercised an acute lack of public leadership and responsibility towards the country's problems.

When contract talks begin next this January trustees will be on very thin ice when negotiators for the teachers demand increases far in excess of 10 per cent.

With a vote of 9-8 there were obviously some trustees who saw the pitfalls of the increase and in them the community appreciates the gesture.

However, it was a recorded vote and some of those trustees who favored the increase apparently speak much differently in secret meetings.

Trustees who favored the increase were Carl Brant, Earl Hawley, Ed Paquet, Emmerson Robinson, Fraser Rose, Raymond Ross, Ralph Swan, Don Thrush and Rick Williams.

Those who opposed the move were Eloise Burr, John Farber, Miriam Graham, Jean Hutchinson, Ken Little, Bob Ord, Jim Spry and Don Williams.

Most surprising were trustees Rick Williams, Ed Paquet and Don Thrush who during the open session of last week's fiscal restraint and went as far as to delay the purchase of badly needed portable classrooms in the north and cut an expenditure of $4,000 for a central dispatch system for supply teachers.

The board last month approved a new policy designed to open more meetings up to the public. Granted, the board agreed to push any financial matters into closed session but there is no justification for placing trustee honorariums behind closed doors.

It's a matter of public record and information and taxpayers are entitled to know how trustees feel about honoraria, particularly in view of the restraint now being shown in the federal government.

The honorarium increase was not even listed on the committee of whole agenda which would make it appear there was a deliberate attempt on the part of the supporters to conceal the issue.

The vote was 9-8 so the board can't argue that the discussion was dull and uninteresting; to the public.

This is obvious evidence that the board rubber stamps matters in open session and refers controversy to private meetings.

It's time board chairman Jean Hutchinson re-evaluated the general procedures of business at meetings and the trustees faced up to their public responsibility.

Success Came Early

Twenty year-old Lisanne Johnson has set up an art show and studio on Front St., north of the Four Corners. Miss Johnson said she has had no formal training in art.

Lack of Formal Training Doesn't Stop Artist's Career

It started with talent support from friends and parents and $1,000 — but Lisanne Johnson was on her way.

The talented 20-year-old artist of Wellington is the owner-manager-supplier and director of her own store and studio located on Front St., north of the Four Corners.

Lisanne says she has had no formal training in art, just a desire to draw and a natural talent for catching the exact curves of a person's face or the twinkle in their eye.

She has been painting for a few years, she says, and her studio-store is only the beginning.

Her hours are long — from 9 a.m. until 10 p.m. and she does all her own framing and art arrangements. She also works on commission for portraits — some taken from photographs and others done during a half-hour sitting.

The artist was the recipient of the Lake Ontario Cement prize this year, after her art teacher in high school won it the year before.

Her business is blooming. "I'm making you a day," she said. "My goal is $100."

In her usual enthusiastic manner, Lisanne will embark on another project early January. Classes for people interested in seriously pursuing their form of art will be organized at $2.50 an hour. "It won't be like normal classes," she said. "You come to learn what you want to learn."

Next Week's Meetings

The following are public meetings next week of which The Intelligencer has been notified. Groups are invited to submit details of upcoming meetings one week in advance.

TUESDAY
Hastings Prince Edward County Separate School Board — at George Street Education Centre at 8 p.m.

FRIDAY
Belleville Police Commission — at police station at 10 a.m.

Thrush Defends Increase

Don Thrush, a trustee with the Hastings County Board of Education said Friday an 11.6 per cent increase in trustee honorariums is not subject to federal wage and price guidelines.

Mr. Thrush pointed out that honorariums and increases are not subject to the federal regulations.

Mr. Thrush also said honorarium limits are based on academic enrolment figures with $400 set as the maximum allowed in Hastings County.

In an earlier story the intelligencer said the provincial maximum was $400. In actual fact trustees in larger boards can receive up to $600.

Last week the Hastings trustees, by a 9-8 vote, increased their honorarium to $750 from $500.

Farmers Using Newspaper As Bedding for Livestock

OTTAWA (CP) — About 30 farmers in Eastern Ontario have purchased 2,000 bales of shredded newspaper to replace the bales of straw which livestock have been forced to eat because of a poor feed grain crop.

Kee Fox of Canada Balemart said Monday his company started selling the bales about a month ago after converting a corn shredder and hay baler into a machine to produce the 50 lb. bales sell for $1.25 each.

The company has been using leftovers from printing company pasties and plans to put large truck trailers at two shopping centres here to collect paper from people who like to see their garbage recycled, he said.

Thursday he intends to meet with a federal agriculture department official to discuss the results of a study on the effect of making newspaper 30 per cent of livestock feed.

Ottawa's physical environment department issued Monday a statement endorsing the scheme but Pollution Probe, which was originally involved, has said it will not make a decision on whether to endorse it until results of the study are made public.

Pollution probe spokesman George Mathison said there is some concern that the newspaper contains unwanted chemicals and heavy metals.

"We're not convinced yet that it's a health problem but we withdrew support until we're sure," he said.

PICTON — In Prince Edward County courthouse dodgers who would vote to straighten the leaning tower of Pisa or wire Rodin's sculpture The Thinker at a lamp.

Evidence of local enthusiasm for improvement of the already proven cause with a grand jury report this week recommending carpeting the floors of the old Prince Edward County court house.

The grand jury's report to Judge Wilfrid S. Lane recommended that the petit jury room should be enlarged panelled, decorated and carpeted and new tables and chairs purchased.

Generously, the jurors suggested that the old table might be kept as an antique for the institution.

The court room was described as lacking in waste baskets and it was noted that the main floor should be carpeted and two existing linoleum ramps carpeted as well.

Also it was suggested that the petit jury should be supplied with cushions for the hard chairs provided.

The old Prince Edward County court room where Sir John A. Macdonald tried his first case and toured this summer by former prime minister John Diefenbaker during his brief visit to Picton.

The Chief considered it an historic landmark well worth seeing.

When The County as a Classroom, a community education program, scheduled a seminar on police procedures at the court house, a brief history of the building was provided. It was noted that there have been few changes in the court room since its early days.

The court room with its tiered benches, its brown linoleum floor and curtained windows is a tribute to the preservation of the Prince Edward that used to be.

Needy Get Top Steer

TORONTO (CP) — The 1,225-pound grand champion steer from the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair will find its way to the tables of Toronto's needy families and homeless men this Christmas, thanks to the Scott Mission and the owners of a Toronto abattoir.

The Scott Mission estimates about 1,400 needy persons will dine on the gift from Harold John and Michael De Jonge, who operate Canadian Stockyards in Toronto and Highland Packers Ltd. in Stouffville, Ont.

The De Jonges will present the animal Wednesday to Rev. Alex Zeidman, director of the downtown Toronto mission.

"We have always given a certain percentage of our profits to charity," Bernard De Jonge said Monday. "We thought the steer would be a most practical gift for the least fortunate, the people of most being what it is."

The De Jonges paid $21,131.— or $17.25 a pound—for the steer, which will be processed into more than 700 pounds of meat for those who ask the mission for help this Christmas.

Obeying the Law Not Much to Ask

By JERRY BROWN

Snowmobilers are constantly trying to bear the brunt of the attack of winter environmentalists, activists and cross country skiers who are offended by the group's loud avocation, and sometimes this is unfair, but there are times when the complaints are justified.

During the snow removal last week plow drivers said they were worried because of the all-night activities of the snowmobile operators who drove their machines while the street-cleaning operation was taking place, creating a dangerous situation.

Commissioner of public works Arie Hoortweg said it was a serious problem and a dangerous situation that needed correcting, and he was right. The commissioner was not worried about the safety of the municipal employees but rather he was concerned that one of the plows would run over one of the snowmobilers "making mincemeat of them."

It is a difficult situation that could be rectified if the late-night enthusiasts would just obey the municipal bylaws and perhaps exercise a little self-control.

The municipal bylaw states that snowmobiles are only to be operated within town limits between the hours of 8 a.m. and 11 p.m., Monday-Thursday and up until midnight on Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Additionally, the machines are only to be operated on certain streets and are restricted from major arteries where there is heavy vehicular traffic, to avoid similar dangerous confrontations," with automobiles and trucks.

Not only is late-night use of the vehicles a nuisance to residents trying to rest but it is dangerous to the operators.

The problem is a difficult one for the police to handle because they are not equipped to pursue the offenders who are giving the sport a bad reputation.

Snowmobiles are a practical form of transportation that can be used by many people to have winter fun, but it begins to become a bit of a nuisance when they inconvenience other citizens.

The problem should be corrected to everyone's satisfaction before the pastime changes from winter enjoyment to a winter tragedy.

Temperatures Play Key Role

By ROSS HAWTHORNE

Last week we dealt with "light" as a factor in establishing climate profiles for each month in your home, and the subprofiles that exist within each month. It goes without saying, that every light profile can be altered with the inclusion of fluorescent fixtures; either ceiling hung, on shelves, on the bottoms of tables, in fact anywhere there is a means of wiring and hanging a fixture —(48 inch, 36 inch, 24 inch or 18 inch) —over a flat surface that will hold them. And most plants — including flowering plants — will thrive.

And this week we promised to talk about temperatures.

When we talk temperatures in terms of plants we must realize we are talking about two ranges of temperatures — day temperatures and night temperatures, with the latter particularly crucial in the case of flowering house plants.

And when we talk temperatures we are basically talking about 3 classifications:

1) Low — 12-17 degrees
2) Average — 17-24 degrees
3) High — 24-35 degrees

Now a plant may enjoy average day temperatures of 77-84 degrees but need night temperatures in the low range if they are to prosper, especially flowering plants. Such as these Christmas favorites — the cyclamen and azalea. If they are to hold their bloom or be brought back into bloom, they must be given night temperatures as low as 50 to 13 degrees.

Now, of the three factors vital to establishing climate profiles, "temperature" is undoubtedly the most variable and the most difficult to control.

Obviously, the climate profile, over or within, six feet of a window, or a forced hot air vent or radiator, a cold air return or an outside door, will differ frequently is considerably different than the variations on side of that radius. And so, along with degrees of temperatures we have marked temperature fluctuations to contend with.

And nothing will cause plants to "brown off", lose flowers or buds faster than rapid temperature changes or direct blasts of cold or hot air.

But there are things you can do, such as:

1) Put heat deflectors over hot air vents
2) Shield cold air returns
3) Put traps of water on radiators and let evaporation cool things down
4) Move your plants just outside of the perimeter of the problem area.

And best of all, take the time to know the night and day temperature requirements of each plant you own or plan on buying — before you buy it. And make sure you can find the proper temperature profiles for your plants to match these needs.

Canada Bolsters Its Military Stance

'No Defence Commitment ... No Trade Deals' — Ottawa Gets the Message

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

James Richardson, Canadian minister of national defence, the shy millionaire from Winnipeg, is in Brussels this week on an important meeting of the defence ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) member nations.

His has gone to it in a stronger position than ever before; a result of the cabinet's agreement to purchase aircraft, and either buy or lease new tanks.

The aircraft are to be 18 highly adapted Lockheed Orion Long-Range Patrol Aircraft which will continue the surveillance role both on behalf of Canadian sovereignty protection and North Atlantic submarine spotting now carried out by the 32 terribly old Argus LRPAs.

The tank deal for our 5,000-man force in NATO has not been fully worked out as yet. It will go either a complete refurbishment of the aging Centurion tanks, or a lease arrangement with the West German Defence ministry for its superb Leopard heavy land tank.

New items proposed to modernize the air and land elements of the Canadian Armed Forces have been kicked around for at least five years.

The growing need of our military for new equipment coincided to cause massive disinterest in successive Trudeau cabinets and from the prime minister himself best as they have been on spending huge funds for domestic social and welfare schemes and not on new weapons.

What turned the prime minister around, as he himself admitted "180 degrees," was the refusal of the Soviet and European trading partners, all active NATO member countries, to talk to the Canadian military any kind of trade deals before and unless we do our military a bit serious about our long-term NATO role.

And this meant Ottawa being serious about a Russian military threat to Europe and in the North Atlantic, even though the prime minister was a signator of the Helsinki Agreement on detente with the Russians.

Well, it took old-fashioned, hard-nosed European diplomacy, what I known as the gold pre quo, (you supply something and we supply something else to make a balanced agreement) to bring Trudeau and his cabinet around.

It also took the on-going world recession to bring home Mr. Trudeau's already well-published if shorter-lived theme, the "contractual link" with the European Common Market countries, as the basis for increasing our lagging exports with Europe.

With the U.S. economy our largest customer by far, in a deeper recession than any of the major European ones, Canada would look to the common market for keeping up her export volume.

But the prime minister will clearly put in his pitch for the self-same Europeans and made the long-delayed decision on the new weapons for a Canadian military establishment which still has a European defence commitment.

The Europeans told him straight out that a trading role for Canada in Europe means a military one for her too.

Bearing the brunt of the delay, as well as growing morale problems in his own department, was the quiet defence minister, "Freedom fighter" in the cabinet like hard-liner Otto Lang and old pals of the prime minister like Donald Macdonald and the declining Jean Marchand.

But as Joe Richardson aide said, the decision to replace the old Argus LRPAs and get new tanks for our army in Europe has made a new man of the defence minister and boosted spirit among our military as it had not been so lifted throughout, for them, these troubled 70s.

Little Has Changed

Quite a long time — fifteen years or thereabouts — has elapsed since then Bank Governor James Coyne uttered his famous line about Canadians "living grandly beyond their means."

Like C. D. Howe's "What's a Million," it was worthy of any collection of famous sayings by Canadians, and such a book would make interesting reading should anyone get around to putting it together.

Little has changed of course. Mr. Coyne was bank governor in the days of the Diefenbaker government. There were problems then with defence spending, over Arrow fighters which showed a lot of promise but the program was scrapped nonetheless. Problems at that time too over U.S. Bomarc missiles which since then have been phased out too, and problems of spending generally which led to Mr. Coyne's confrontation with the Conservative government and especially Finance Minister Donald Fleming, and finally to his resignation.

His words on national extravagance of course have stuck, although Mr. Coyne himself, so far as we are aware, has not been heard from since.

What would he say to a situation today that has not changed at all save for the fact the inflationary situation has multiplied out of hand and neither government nor economists seem able to do much about it. Ottawa of course is making a valiant effort — at long last — and it it can make its anti-inflation measures stick the country might see some results in a couple of years or so. Such an eventuality we shall have to observe as things move along. But meantime, where are you Mr. Coyne and what do you think of things today?

'No' to Park Expansion

The defence needs recently outlined by Ottawa costing a billion dollars and more represent expenditures which the country needs for its own defence and for commitments to western defence.

This expenditure is inescapable, even in these days of supposed restraint, but what are we to make of federal plans to increase Mallorytown Landing Park to 30 times its size from its present dimensions of a mere 1.6 square miles, at a cost of $38 million.

The park is located on the scenic highway between Gananoque and Brockville overlooking island-studded waters with cottages thereon and for a short time once numbered among their owners author Nicholas Montsarrat (The Cruel Sea and other works).

If the project doesn't scare the taxpayer — and it should in these times — it has certainly roused residents and cottage owners along the river. Fear of expropriation has resulted in no fewer than 700 of them forming an association to oppose it.

Details are lacking, but it is clear the government is contemplating large scale expansion along the river. There is likely a need for expanded park facilities there but whether of such large dimensions, in an area of extensive private ownership, and in these economically - straitened times, is another matter.

Drivers Need Lesson

When it comes to winter driving it is a continual source of wonder, not to say anxiety, to observe cars moving at too fast a clip having regard to the conditions.

Returning from Toronto at a tortuous but safe 50 m.p.h. in the midst of Thursday's storm, a Belleville driver had plenty of time to observe the consequences of bravado on the part of others. Twenty or more cars which had passed him at about 55 m.p.h. were observed stranded off the highway some miles farther on.

It happens all the time in such conditions, but of course it need not. Probably two factors are at work: the driver is inexperienced or immature or both. Or he is in a hurry and takes his chances at higher speeds. The trouble is, these people are risking not only their own lives but those of others.

Whatever the howls of protest over reduced speed and mandatory seatbelt use in the new year, it cannot come too soon for those who watch with mounting concern death and injury on the highways. Whatever the season it should pay off in a greater degree of safety.

Check Christmas Toys for Safety

Health for All

Toys under the Christmas tree. Sheer joy for the kiddies. But toys can be trouble, too.

Almost every day, according to statistics, a youngster chokes to death on an object that in many cases has broken off a toy. A baby swallows bits of a stuffed rabbit pulled apart. Or bites a bead ripped of a rattle. Vapors explode in chemistry kits. Just a few years ago, estimates were that over 50,000 children were injured each year while playing with toys.

A Commission was set up to check toys and other products. But — imagine — 5,000 completely new toys are introduced each year. The job is enormous. Many established companies voluntarily have new toys tested for safety.

Choking on bits of toys is one problem. Another is swallowing something "the wrong way". Instead of going down the throat into the stomach, the object travels a different route. It slips down into the windpipe and into a breathing passage to the lungs. Blocking a breathing passage can cause a disease called bronchiectasis. Removal of the object is essential.

Toddlers can reach up for all those goodies on display at Christmas — peanuts, and candy — and stuff them in their mouth or up their nose. Either way, the object can land in their lungs and cause trouble.

Christmas Seals help fight a wide assortment of trouble makers in the lungs. Answer your Christmas Seal letter today to help join the fight against emphysema, TB, chronic bronchitis, cigarette smoking and air pollution. It's A Matter of Life and Breath. And buy safe toys for the kids.

Auto-littered Landscapes

The Globe and Mail

Until the Ontario Ministry of Transport stated that there seemed a possibility that Joseph Zaigh might have to pay a $1.00 bill for parking at Toronto International Airport Terminal 1, it was reasonable that the ministry should safeguard its position, since Mr. Zaigh's prolonged absence was the result of being drafted into the army.

Still the episode does turn one's thoughts to cars that are abandoned all over Ontario and, in some aspects, freshen excuses than that offered by Mr. Zaigh, and often in better settings than the parking lot at Terminal 1. Is there any reason why their presence in a rural by-way, at the edge of a field, or at the foot of a cliff, should be regarded with leniency?

It has been calculated that as many as half-a-million automobiles are quietly decaying over the provincial landscape. Many, surely, by licence plate, or some serial number, or other means can be associated with the last owner. Not often treated as parked vehicles subject to a certain daily or weekly charge.

The revenue could help the recovery of the unfortunate ones, and would certainly accelerate the disposal of those with identifiable owners to arrange for a decent burial in a scrap-yard.

Worthy of Their Hire

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Mr. L.F. Hanna ("Anyone for Democracy?" Dec. 10, 1975) is to be commended for his eloquent defence of the union workers who exercised their democratic right (indeed duty) to return to work during the recent mail strike. His comments go straight to the heart of the matter, for the civil rights of these postal employees are certainly jeopardized by the odious intimidation exercised by the union president with his policy of ostracism. It is sad that a group supposedly aspiring to democratic principles is so intolerant of dissenting views.

However, there is perhaps an effective way of dealing with the matter. The Pentagonic attitude stated publicly after the strike settlement that he would personally intercede in cases of intimidation of any kind which were brought to his attention. Accordingly, I enclose a copy of the article containing the contentious quotation has been sent to him. I hope, for the sake of the perpetrators of this injustice, that they have been forewarned. Mr. Mackasey's firmness in dealing with such goon-style tactics is well known.

F.W. STEVENSON

Champion of Free Speech?

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

It's a funny thing, but organized labor has always been the champion of free speech in so they have claimed. Therefore it was disconcerting to say the least to hear Mr. Yateman of the local postal union with his thinly-veiled threats against those members of our council who "dared" to voice an opinion on the recent strike.

Who does Mr. Yateman think he is — Hitler? His stupid comments are totally irrelevant to members of council who exercised an opinion on the strike and of his union show him to be a misinformed and a bit ridiculous. For his information, I could suggest he stop and ask any member of the general public who was held to ransom by the intimidation exercised by his selfish and un-Canadian union what they thought of his organization's antics. He will soon get his "enemies" attitude considerably more than our members of council.

Perhaps with the same brush is the teacher strike in Toronto and the threat of a professional walkout by the teachers' organization. It is ironic that these dedicated "professionals" are now telling us they will defy the law. With this example our students are being taught by the right people on how to break the law, or at least, how to make a cookery of it.

Some of the organizations and associations currently holding their annual meetings in Toronto should choke on the words "Oh Canada, we stand on guard for thee". They really mean "Oh Canada, we rob and plunder thee".

WILLIAM C. HOCKLEY,
Belleville.

Cost to Canada of Peacekeeping ... Cancelled UN Parley ... Olympics Security

By RICHARD JACKSON

Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA — Save for your horror of terrorism, perhaps you have not been more than mildly emotionally involved in the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Except that it has been costing you money.

Money for Middle East peacekeeping and money lost in the planning then cancellation of the United Nations conference on urban at Toronto last August, staging the UN Habitat Conference in Vancouver next spring.

The Vancouver conference which pits the internationally-minded feds in Ottawa against will serve as a platform for Third World abuse of Canada and other Western nations — is the most debatable.

Or, to be a bigot about it, irritating.

(A bigot, in Ottawa's innocent sense, is to be a taxpayer who objects to being pushed around by those who rip him off.)

Irritating not just because the exercise is humiliating ourselves before the arrogant Third World UN majority is going to cost Vancouver taxpayers $8 million which somehow they ought to be inventive enough to deal off to Ottawa.

But irritating because all of us are getting stuck by the UN for eight per cent of the bill for bringing the PLO delegation, including its "observers," to Vancouver, housing, feeding and entertaining them.

They decided that by a Third World majority vote, with Canada abstaining, at the UN General Assembly the other day.

Libya — for which we shell out a few million annually in foreign aid — attached Canada's attendance as an indication that the PLO was unwelcome in Vancouver.

The oil-rich Libyans — they're members of the ripoff Middle East OPEC cartel — knew that Vancouver didn't want either the UN conference or the PLO.

But External Affairs Minister MacEachen's sweet-talking diplomatic representative was hastened to assure them that Vancouver's objection were "not truly representative of either Canada or the city itself."

How about that!

Al MacEachen's stripped-pants pussycats pleading that you're a patsy and can be conned into supplying free potshots out for the PLO.

And don't count on your parliamentarians taking exception when one of their fringe benefits is living it up in Manhattan in contempt of the Canadian delegation to the UN.

So you are stuck not only for the Vancouver conference but travel and accommodation for the PLO.

Now about the big bill for the Olympics, the $50 million that security's going to cost.

Of that, revealed Defence Minister Richardson, $25 million is for the cost of 10,000 members of the Armed Forces.

And Canada's 225 million, Olympic officials have let it be known, will be for police, the RCMP, Mounties and Sûreté du Québec Provincials.

Why such a security army at such a cost?

The answer came the other day in the House of Commons from Solicitor General Warren Allmand.

"We must be prepared," he said, "for the Olympics a spectacular thing at Montreal."

What dear old Solicitous General Warren meant but, being of understanding heart, couldn't bring himself to say, of course, was the PLO.

For wasn't it the PLO that butchered the athletes at the Munich Olympics, massacred the innocents in Lod, Rome and other airports, hijacked British, American and German passenger planes?

So in Montreal you are going to shell out $50 million — and that could be only starters — to watching the PLO, while in Vancouver, it is going to cost you to keep 'em comfy.

On this, as on other World Issues, Al MacEachen's cookie-pushers are so schizo it would jaw us pot-shot taxpayers to send in a shrink.

CP News Roundup

Petroleum Takeover Approved

OTTAWA (CP) — The cabinet, following a foreign investment review board recommendation, approved yesterday Friday of a takeover of petroleum properties in Alberta by U.S.-owned Husky Oil and Gas Co. Ltd., of Calgary.

The board, which screens foreign takeovers of Canadian companies, also approved a takeover of Golden Triangle Oils Ltd. of Kitchener, Ont., a retail car wash-gasoline firm, by British-controlled BP Oil Ltd. of Montreal.

It gave the go-ahead to U.S.-owned Furnco Construction Canada Ltd. of Hamilton to acquire control of Walker Vacuum Service Ltd. of Welland, Ont., which manufactures a mobile industrial vacuum cleaner and cleans industrial furnaces.

Another takeover proposal was rejected and it proved that it would not meet the test of significant benefit to Canada — the takeover by British-controlled L. Lacroix Fils, S.A. of Paris of Central Tobacco Manufacturing Co. and Distribution Centre of Tabac Co., both of Montreal.

The takeover by Hawker's Bay, controlled by Continental Oil Corp. of Greenwich, Conn., includes plant for coal, oil and gas properties of Saipetro of Canada Ltd. of Calgary, a joint-venture project valued at a total $60 million, an estimated $21 million from Hudson's Bay.

Welland Youth Charged

WELLAND, Ont. (CP) — Peter Said Friday they have charged William Cherubik, 18, of Welland with assault causing bodily harm in connection with an incident in a hockey game Tuesday. Miss MacDonald, member of Parliament for Kingston and the Islands, was here to speak to East and Elgin County delegates to the leadership convention in Ottawa in February.

"The concept of universality of the programs must be re-evaluated," she said. "They must be based on need".

HULL (CP) — Two men were remanded in custody until next week after appearing in court Thursday on charges in connection with the abduction and release of a 19-year-old Hull boy four years ago.

Germain Deserre, 28, formerly of Hull, was remanded to Dec. 18 for pleas on charges of kidnapping and murder punishable by life imprisonment. Jean-Guy Pelland, 27, of no fixed address, will appear Dec. 16 for plea on a charge of kidnapping.

Minister Calls Meeting

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister Thomas Wells has invited the chairman and chief executive officers of all provincial school boards to a meeting on finances next Thursday, it was announced Friday.

The announcement said the meeting will discuss "the financial picture for the coming year."

Treasurer Darcey McKeough said Thursday in his estimates that the province has earmarked $1.7 billion for education in 1976-77.

McKeough Won't Bend

TORONTO (CP) — Municipal spokesmen, saying they are caught in the grip of inflation, tried Friday without success to wrench more money from Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough.

At the monthly meeting of the association, the local leaders complained to Mr. McKeough that his proposed eight-per-cent increase in provincial grants to municipalities for 1976-77 may force a sharp rise in property taxes.

But Mr. McKeough, who originally proposed an increase of only five to six per cent, said the municipalities will have to tighten their belts.

Election Report Released

TORONTO (CP) — A report prepared by the Association of Municipalities of Ontario calling for changes in the Municipal Elections Act was released Friday.

The report called for the removal of the words "British subject" from the list of qualifications for voters. The proposal says all voters should be Canadian citizens.

Other recommendations called for a reduction in nomination fees from $100 to $25 and a change to allow the provincial ombudsman to take action in the event of an emergency at election time.

Ombudsman Offers Help

TORONTO (CP) — Arthur Maloney, Ontario's ombudsman, pledged Friday to help municipal officials deal with provincial red tape.

Mr. Maloney told the monthly meeting of the provincial-municipal liaison committee that he feels he has jurisdiction to work on problems involving local governments and the province.

He said he will set up a special directorate in his office to handle municipal and rural problems, especially those caused by government bureaucracy and red tape.

Is Santa a Liberal?

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister Marc Lalonde "is trying to make it appear that Santa Claus is really the Liberal party" by mailing Christmas greetings with pension cheques to the north, Conservative Paul Ouellet (Leeds) said Friday.

Mr. Ouellet asked in the Commons what entitled the minister "at public expense to print his own personal Christmas greetings to the pensioners of Canada and to circulate them with the pension cheques."

Mr. Lalonde replied that it seemed appropriate at this time of the year to send pensioners the government's best wishes.

Airline Rates Settled

GENEVA (Reuter) — The world's major airlines have settled a controversy over how much to pay their retail travel agents, airline sources said Friday.

The 110 member airlines of the International Air Transport Association (IATA) agreed to raise the basic commission rate to 9 per cent on ticket sales in eight per cent from 7.5 per cent of fares.

Grain Bill Criticized

Three Bills Approved But Fourth Is Stalled

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons gave its final blessing three more government bills and gave second reading to a fourth Friday after stalling a government bill aimed at stabilizing prices of western grain farmers.

Progressive Conservative and New Democratic Party members said the stabilization bill is beyond comprehension and should be changed.

"It's completely beyond me," said Lee Benjamin (NDP-Regina-Lake Centre). "You try to understand it and you end up talking in circles."

Alvin Hamilton (Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain), a former agriculture minister in the Diefenbaker government, said earlier that no more than 10 per cent of western farmers would understand it.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) read one sentence of the proposed legislation. It took him more than three minutes.

Mr. Hamilton said the government should withdraw the bill to get the view of farmers attending a national conference here.

Douglas Neil (PC—Moose Jaw) said he sent copies of the bill to farm groups and municipal governments for comment. He said he received no answers because nobody could understand it.

The government moved to adjourn the debate and the Commons immediately passed three bills and gave another approval in principle.

Given final reading were:

—A bill to increase the interest rate of government-run mortgages from an average of four per cent to seven per cent. Sale of the annuities also would be discontinued.

—A bill to expand the definition of contagious diseases in animals and providing limited compensation for farmers for their losses.

—A bill to make initial payments to agricultural producers based on estimated net realized market prices and marketing costs.

Given second reading—approval in principle—and referred to wind up the Halifax Relief Fund, set up to compensate victims of the Halifax harbor explosion which killed 1,600 persons.

The government says the stabilization bill will guarantee farmers a minimum price for wheat, oats, barley, rye, flaxseed and rapeseed based on the average of the previous five years.

Another opposition complaint is that regional differences are not taken into account in the bill. For example, one township may be hit by a plague of grasshoppers that misses a neighboring township.

Mr. Peters said the MPs are expected to pass legislation enabling the government to continue given to advertisers in Time and Reader's Digest.

The government also wants legislation passed to change the Unemployment Insurance Act so it can have banks and other lending institutions put more money in low-cost housing.

Cafik To Help Time, Digest

OTTAWA (CP) — Barbarach MP Steven Cafik says he will make a last-minute attempt in the Commons next week to save the Canadian editions of Time magazine and Reader's Digest.

Mr. Cafik (L—Ontario) served notice Friday he will seek a two-year delay in the planned Jan. 1 legislation affecting the tax status of advertisers in the two publications.

He said he will also seek a reduction to 10 per cent from 80 per cent in the Canadian edition of Reader's Digest, by Revenue Minister Bud Cullen.

Mr. Cafik said in an interview that "33, 40 or more" Liberals have serious doubts about the tax legislation but only about a dozen will break ranks with the party to support his amendments.

The government is threatening to keep the Commons sitting beyond the planned Dec. 19 Christmas adjournment date to ensure third and final reading of the legislation.

Davis Adamant

No Anti-Inflation Board in Ontario

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Premier William Davis said Friday that his government has no intentions of setting up a provincial anti-inflation board.

But his minority Progressive Conservative government seems likely to survive a non-confidence vote next week even though the leaders of both opposition parties have spoken in favor of such a board.

The premier told the legislature in a speech laced with barbs at the opposition parties that Ontario inflation is not "another election issue right now. He was speaking before a gallery packed with Tory candidates from the Sept. 12 election and many campaign officials.

A Liberal amendment to the throne speech earlier in the session called for condemnation of the government, primarily because of its failure to set up an anti-inflation board.

Mr. Davis said any provincial board would wrack the federal government's anti-inflation program and Ontario is committed to making the federal program work.

Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis has spoken in favor of a provincial board but said in an interview after the premier's speech Friday that his party was not prepared to bring down the government on the issue.

It would require a combined vote of the 38 New Democrats and 36 Liberals in the legislature to defeat the 51 Progressive Conservatives.

In his speech, Mr. Davis accused Mr. Lewis of attempting to give Ontario a general election as a Christmas present and said such a move would be "height of folly."

Preliminary Public Meetings of the Royal Commission on Electric Power Planning

Ontario Hydro welcomes the appointment of the Royal Commission on Electric Power Planning to inquire into the conceptual aspects of long range planning of the electric power system for the Province. Our "Preliminary Submission to the Royal Commission on Electric Power Planning" was forwarded to the Royal Commission in May, 1975. It briefly describes the present electric power system, the system expansion projects seen as required on a priority basis, the public participation procedures as developed to date and some possible issues for discussion during the public hearings of the Royal Commission. This submission is available free of charge from your local Ontario Hydro Office.

Busy Signals Buzz, Bell is All Tied Up

It's really quite touching.

The children playing in the park. Tennis partners hoping for not a embrace but affection ately. An old man, strolling along, alone. Lots of nice people.

It's Bell Canada's advertisement which urges you to use your telephone to gain a little human warmth and affection via long distance.

It's called getting the "long distance feeling".

Last Sunday, I tried to get the long distance feeling for eight hours. From one in the afternoon to nine at night. I dialed a far-away friend no less than 200 times. About one third of those times a busy signal prevented me from even getting as far as pretending my telephone number at the sound of the signal (this is direct dialing!) and the rest of the time a busy signal followed directly on the heels of my number. After a couple of hours, I called the operator and asked her to try. She did and couldn't get through either. Complaining about my fruitless efforts didn't happen to me in the least. She said the operators are just as frustrated and wished everyone would complain to the business office. The explanation, of course, is that in Bell's capitalistic theory a % off discount for part of the day and a % discount for the evening. That keeps all Canada's circuits busy and that means that even if you're calling Moose Jaw, your little signal can't make it out of Ontario because the busy circuits.

You can't really blame Bell if they're too successful but it seems a little silly for them to advertise something they've already oversold.

And as for that long distance feeling, on Sunday, at least, it resembles nothing so much as acid indigestion.

There's an old saw that what you are is what you eat; it may be replaced by a new maxim, one that's receiving growing respect from the scientific community: what you EAT is what you eat.

Cancer specialists, the New York Times Service reports, are finding increasing evidence that ingredients of the daily diet may cause, indirectly or directly, half of all cancers among women and 30 per cent of all cancers among men.

A report published last week indicates that nutritional factors (diets high in animal fat, excessive calorie intake, deficiencies of vitamins A and C, certain food additives and natural and man-made contaminants of food) are tied to the development of cancer of the colon, esophagus, breast, liver and uterus.

So far, according to the report, nutritional factors set the stage for more direct carcinogens; enhance the activity of carcinogens or act as carriers for carcinogens. Other factors, like animal fat, may change the body's hormone pattern, increasing the output of cancer-causing hormones. Some foods contain cancer-causing substances like pesticide residues, certain food additives and trace elements from the soil.

Before all of the answers are in and speculation becomes fact or becomes disproven — what can you do?

According to the New York Times Services, Dr. Fred Wynder, epidemiologist, recommends that harmless dietary modifications could be made that could reduce the risk of cancer. He recommends the adoption of a product diet containing less animal fat and more fibrous foods.

Extravagant Gifts: How to Spend a Lot

Anyone can find smart, inexpensive Christmas gifts to give that reflect not only good taste but economy. But it takes a very special flare to spend a lot of money.

If you went to Laura Secord, for example, it would be easy to buy their half pound assortment of chocolates for $1.75.

You need guess however, to walk up to the counter and order the five pound box at $16.75.

A livorlie girl might easily receive an inexpensive silver charm for $1.98. But how many gift buyers have the guts to spend $48 on a gold charm? You can buy it at People's Jewellers and it says "mother" in French.

At Shoppers' Drug Mart, you can buy an inexpensive little china pomander for $3.50. Why not go all the way and get the $13.50 model? It's guaranteed to last 30 years. If you like china things, by the way, you can get a Royal Doulton dog for a mere $7.50. On the other hand you can get their large figure of a Spanish senorita at Stroud's for $135.

Barber's will send a simple Christmas arrangement for $28 but you can also order a magnificent $50 wreath sent anywhere via FTD.

If Canadians is your thing, try buying Your Loving Anna, by Leah Troy, a book about the settlement of Hastings County. You can have it for a modest $2.95 at James Text. But if big books are more appealing, you can have Robif Berg's 7b Everything There is a Season, for $48.95.

Books are big gift items for kids too, and while you could buy a three-volume pocket set of Anne of Green Gables for only $3.95, why not splurge on a complete set of Beatrix Potter's Peter Rabbit for $31.75?

Some time or other, of course, you're going to have to pay for all this extravagance and to write the cheques you can pick up a spirited little candy cane pen for only 35 cents. But wouldn't you feel a lot richer if you bought yourself a special set of pens and pencils for that job? Try the gold Scheaffer set at James Text for $118.

CHRISTMAS LUNCHEON CHRIST CHURCH A.C.W.

A welcome to the Christmas season was given Tuesday afternoon when 80 members of the Christ Church Anglican Christian Women assembled for their annual pot luck luncheon.

Special guests included Canon and Mrs. R.B. (Ed) Wright, Rev. and Mrs. A.W. Smith, Rev. John Utley, Rev. and Mrs. Jack Fletcher, the Church wardens and their wives, and organist Herb. Cicero.

Following the luncheon, president Lois Beeby welcomed everyone and asked that those who were unable to be present be especially remembered. Two delightful numbers were sung by a quartet consisting of Dorothy Wright, Mrs. Utley, Betty Gardner and Rev. Utley. Jane Hickey, the poet of the group, read verses written especially for the occasion.

A cheque was presented to Joe warden, the results of projects undertaken by the A.C.W. since June.

Donations for Christmas Cheer baskets and small gifts for shut-in members were received.

Bernice Wills presented the following slate of officers for the year 1976: Past-president, Ida Golden; president, Lois Beeby; vice-president, Eleanor Bailey; treasurer, Vera Ray. Convenors for the various projects will be named at the January meeting.

With Rev. Utley as accompanist, the group enjoyed a hearty carol-sing at the close of the afternoon.

Picton Couple Celebrates 70 Years of Marriage

PICTON — When Bernard Morris was a little boy, Mrs. May Ryckman were married on December 12, 1905, the couple relied on a rented livery rig to get them to the church on time.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris of 20 Hill Street who celebrate their 70th wedding anniversary this week recalled that there were "only one or two cars" in all of Picton when they were married at the turn of the century.

The wedding ceremony was performed in Bloomfield United Church by Reverend D.S. Hooper.

The Morrises observed that such anniversaries were not common in the early 1900's and as newlyweds they immediately settled down to married life as a Hallo's Corners farm.

In the years that followed they moved to Carrying In Farm in Hillier township and Cherry Valley and in 1929 moved to Picton.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris, both in their late eighties, remain active in community card parties and together maintain their Hill Street home with its large vegetable garden in the backyard.

The couple agree that "hard work and early to bed" are the secrets of their good health and cheerful outlook.

The Morrises make it a point to attend a community card party once a week and also in twice-daily visits in their home for card games on a weekly basis.

In addition to anniversary cards from friends and relatives the couple has received congratulations from Queen Elizabeth, Ontario Premier William Davis, George Ross MP Prince Edward-Hastings and James Taylor, MPP Prince Edward-Lennox.

They plan to celebrate with their daughter Mrs. Iva Cordill of Quinte, their daughter-in-law Mrs. Irvine Morris and two grandchildren and their families.

Ann Landers

Cheap Employer Cheats Sitter

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 16-year-old girl who has been reading your column for a long time. I believe you give good advice. Now I have a problem and I hope you can help me.

I've been babysitting for these people who are friends of my parents. They have four very active children. About four months ago I told the woman I thought I deserved an increase from 50 cents an hour to 75 cents. She said she'd compromise and pay me 60 cents.

I babysat for two other families and received 75 cents an hour from them. I really need the money but decided not to make an issue of it with this first lady because of the family friendship.

Three weeks ago, The Great Compromiser needed a sitter on short notice. I HAD another commitment. She begged me to find her another sitter. I did. She paid that girl 75 cents an hour. The following week I sat for her and she paid me 60 cents an hour. I am pointed by her attitude.

I know this woman likes me and so do her children. I always do a good job and am completely reliable.

Why won't she pay me 75 cents an hour? Please answer this question and give me some advice. — Short-Changed

Dear Short: Would you pay a sitter 75 cents an hour if you knew you could get her for 60 cents? Well this is the way MRS. Compromise has it figured. If you let her pay you make it clear that you are no longer available at the old price she will either pay the new price or get someone else and pay EIGHT 75 cents an hour.

Dear Ann Landers: A week before the holidays on a problem that has gripped me for four years running.

Certain members of my family give homemade clothing for gifts at Christmas time. I'm not a snob about homemade gifts. Some of my relatives sew very well. But I hate to receive a gift with a note in the box that says, "Heads only a hoot" or, "All you have to do is fit this around the waist."

Those "last-minute touches" take anywhere from two to ten months. For example, last Christmas my mother-in-law made bedspreads for each of the children. They needed to be shortened "slightly."

Almost a year has passed and I still haven't gotten around to it. How much better it would have been had Grandma just chanted something. Anything.

Please say a word or two in your column about sending unfinished gifts, Ann. I'm sure this problem is not mine alone. — Finish It Or Don't Send It

Dear P.S.: I'm with you. Here's my message:

Dear Readers: When you send someone an unfinished gift, you CAN'T say it any plainer than that.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 18-year-old girl who is worried about becoming an spontaneous. Whenever I pass a mirror I HAVE to stop and look at myself. When I walk down the street, I often sneak looks at my own reflection in the store windows. Is this normal? I am—Secretly Worried

Dear S. W.: There's nothing abnormal about enjoying a quick glimpse at yourself in a mirror or sneaking a look at your reflection in a store window. If you stood for hours admiring yourself, I'd say you had a problem. But "Vanity, thy name is woman," and it shall be ever thus!

Boots Need Winter Care

TORONTO (CP) — Like it or not, Canadian women face yet another season tugging on boots.

Inflation has hit the foot this year and although boot dressing is all the style, the cost of a good pair of leather or suede boots for some people will be the equivalent of almost one week's pay, say Del Paxton of the Tana Company of Montreal.

"Fashion boots should give warmth and protection in cold snowy, wet weather," she said. That because suede or leather boots have seams, zippers and attached soles they are not waterproof, nor are they resistant to salt stains."

She said owners of leather boots should use a spray and wax protector. It is the spray that protects against salt stains and the wax that shines and seals seams, stitching and sole edges to prevent leaking.

"For maximum protection, suede and leather boots should be treated weekly. This protecting must be repeated all winter long. One application is not enough as protection wears off after a few days of wear."

She said that boots should always be dried at room temperature—never near a radiator or stove, as the boots will lose their natural oils and become hard.

Miss Paxton said that rubber or vinyl boots in one moulded piece without seams, zippers or separated soles are waterproof.

"These boots may not be warm enough for winter wear but are ideal for rainy days and for added comfort."

Number of Abortions Increases in Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of therapeutic abortions performed in Canada in 1974 was up 11.4 per cent from the previous year's total, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

The increase is based on a total of 38,126 legal abortions reported performed in Canadian hospitals during 1974, up from 42,301 in 1973.

This produced a rate of 14 abortions per 100 live births, up from a rate of 12.6 in 1973.

However, the agency said this is not a complete statistics showed that an additional 4,000 women resident in Canada had legal abortions in the United States during 1974.

This produced an over-all 1974 total of 42,126 therapeutic abortions, or a rate of about 15.5 per 100 live births in Canada. The over-all figure were not comparable with previous years.

The 1974 Canadian abortion rate of 15 per 100 live births compared to 1973 rates of 19.5 in the U.S. and 17 in England and Wales. The rate also was compared with 16 other countries, which had rates ranging from a high of 102.3 in Hungary in 1971 to a low of 2.2 in Tunisia in 1972.

By province, British Columbia had the highest 1974 rate at 28.2 and Newfoundland had the lowest at 1.5 abortions per 100 live births.

The abortion rate in the other areas: Ontario, 20; Alberta and the Yukon, 18; Manitoba, 8.5; Nova Scotia, 8; Saskatchewan, 7.2; Northwest Territories, 4.2; Quebec, 3.3; New Brunswick, 2.8; Prince Edward Island, 2.6.

The agency released additional information on 41,257 of the women who had abortions in Canada, or about 65 per cent of the total.

—56 per cent were single, 21 per cent were married and the remaining 11 per cent were separated, divorced, widowed or unmarried, but living as though married.

—31 per cent were under 20 years of age, 68 per cent were aged between 20 and 34 and the remaining 11 per cent were 35 or older.

Royal Commission

Electric Power Planning

On July 17, 1975 Her Honour Pauline McGibbon, Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Ontario, approved an Order-In-Council establishing an independent commission under the chairmanship of Dr. Arthur Porter to hold an inquiry pursuant to the provisions of the Public Inquiries Act into the long-range planning of Ontario's electrical power system.

The Commission has been instructed to examine the long-range electric power planning concepts of Ontario Hydro for the period 1983-1993 and beyond, to relate them to provincial planning, to the utilization of electrical energy and to environmental, energy and socio-economic factors; and to report on a priority basis on the need for certain Ontario Hydro projects presently under consideration.

To ensure that its reports will reflect the views of a representative cross-section of the people of Ontario, the Commission is anxious to meet at this early stage in a preliminary and informal fashion with as many persons, groups and organizations as possible.

Accordingly, the Commission has decided to hold a series of Preliminary Public Meetings around the province to inform the public of the Commission's activities, to encourage the public to participate in them and to invite comments and questions on the manner in which the Commission should conduct its inquiry. The Preliminary Public Meetings will be as informal as possible and will not involve the calling of evidence or cross-examination of witnesses. However, they will be followed by formal or other appropriate public hearings during which there will be ample opportunity for concerned citizens to express their views on the many aspects of electric power planning which touch and concern every person in this province.

Preliminary and informal meetings will be held in

KINGSTON

Dec. 15: 8 p.m.
Dr. Arthur Porter, chairman, illustrated lecture, Queen's University, Stirling Building, Room C, Kingston.

Preliminary Public Meetings, Holiday Inn, 1 Princess Street, Kingston.

PETERBOROUGH

Dec. 17: 8 p.m.
Preliminary Public Meeting, Regency Room, Holiday Inn, 150 George Street, Peterborough.

The Commission invites interested persons, groups and organizations to attend these Preliminary Public Meetings:

1. to learn about the terms of reference, objectives and implications of the Commission;

2. to discuss with the Commission a list of the issues, either general or local, which the Commission ought to consider; and

3. to discuss with the Commission the manner in which its inquiry ought to be carried out, the procedures, timing and location of the public hearings, the dissemination of information to the public and the use of this inquiry as a means of increasing the public awareness of the interrelationship between electric power and the quality of life in Ontario.

Because of the nature and purpose of the Preliminary Public Meetings, lengthy written submissions would not be appropriate but all persons, groups and organizations, particularly those who for any reason may not be able to attend the aforesaid Preliminary Public Meetings, are invited to submit their views on the above-mentioned matters briefly in writing by letter or other written communication delivered or mailed to the Commission not later than four days prior to a Meeting. The Commission's address is: Royal Commission on Electric Power Planning, 7th Floor, 14 Carlton Street, Toronto, Ontario M5B 1K5 and its telephone number (collect) is: 1-416-965-2111.

Brown Beer Bottle Now Marks Canada

The Canadian Press

What is more distinctly Canadian than the maple leaf, moose or beaver and more utilitarian than the Grey Cup?

Gerald Donaldson and Gerald Lampert say it's the 15-ounce, amber, brown, standard Canadian beer bottle.

The Great Canadian Beer Book, a collection of poems, stories and little-known facts about beer edited by Mr. Donaldson and Mr. Lampert, leaves the impression that the truly patriotic citizen respects the Queen, the flag and a glass of cold beer.

And not surprisingly, it is not as hard to swallow.

Highly graphic and sprinkled throughout with anecdotes, trivia and graffiti collected from the washrooms of Canadian pubs, the book contains a lot of information—most of it useless. Tidi all of it funny.

It tells of the origin of famous beer labels, introduces Uncle Ben of Uncle Ben's Beer, whose picture, it says, is painted more times daily than that of the Queen on the dollar bill, and suggests a few beer drinking games, beer coffee and sky-jack etc.

It reveals that the smallest brewery in Canada is located in Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, that 1.2 per cent of the total Canadian work force is involved with the production or distribution of beer and that one bottle of beer has fewer calories than an equivalent amount of milk.

But even more impressive than the facts and figures are the descriptions of people and atmospheres found in Canadian taverns.

James Barber, in a story about Uncle Ben, says the pub is far more than a place for social gatherings and drunken gibberish.

"Behind the smoke, in the bottom of the glasses, there is more raw energy than most management teams have ever seen. The pub is the working man's think tank."

And Marian Engel, telling of her first encounter with beer, says: "There's none of this damned pretension about the wines and getting the brandy warmed by hand in the right glass."

The Great Canadian Beer Book touches on historic events such as the prohibition years and modern happenings like Oktoberfest, Canada's biggest yearly beer bash.

Finally, after all the statistics, quotations, recipes, and lists, the book offers this piece of philosophical advice which it describes as an ancient Canadian beer parlorism.

"Laugh and the world laughs with you. Cry and you buy your own beer."

The Great Canadian Beer Book, edited by Gerald Donaldson and Gerald Lampert; 128 pages; $4.95; McClelland and Stewart.

Teachers Remain On Strike 200,000 Students Left Idle

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Contract disputes involving teachers in Ontario and Quebec that disrupted classes for more than 200,000 students were settled among strikes across Canada this week.

About 7,000 secondary school teachers, mostly from Toronto, held what they described as a wake and funeral for collective bargaining in front of the Ontario legislature Thursday to protest the anti-inflation board's ruling on wage offers to 8,800 striking metropolitan Toronto secondary school teachers.

The federal board ruled last week that the 32.5-per-cent salary increase offered the teachers by the Metro board of education is excessive.

The 75,000-member Quebec Teachers Federation rallied in Christmas cheer in its protest against government court orders after more than 6,000 Montreal elementary, high school and junior college teachers staged walkouts and called in sick Wednesday, disrupting classes for 112,000 students.

In Chatham, Ont., 494 striking secondary school teachers returned to classes on a work-to-rule basis Friday after staying away from school for four days to back a contract demand.

Negotiators for 13,000 members of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada say they have reached a tentative agreement with the British Columbia forest industry. About 7,300 members of the Canadian Paperworkers Union (CPU) are to vote during the next two weeks on a contract offer from the industry.

In Ontario, 12,000 CPU members continued their strike against the forest industry. Labor Minister Bette Stephenson, asked to order the workers back to work by a group of Ontario mayors, has been meeting with both sides in an attempt to end the strike which began in July.

In Montreal, the Quebec branch of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, who are striking members, smashed ballot boxes at a contract ratification vote Tuesday, has asked the province to supervise a second vote, says a union spokesman.

The union's 8,000 men's clothing workers walked off the job Dec. 1 following a show-of-hands strike vote Nov. 28.

More than 400 workers employed at Heath Steel Mines Ltd. near Newcastle, N.B., ratified a one-year contract this week to replace the former agreement that expired Aug. 31.

In Winnipeg, about 120 employees of Air Canada's finance branch walked off their jobs Tuesday in a one-day protest against stalled contract negotiations.

Agreements giving about 3,700 federal technical and social services employees wage increases of 14.5 per cent over 15 months were signed in Ottawa Monday.

Police in Aylmer, Que., near Ottawa, are called for a provincial conciliator after contract negotiations with the municipality broke down this week.

Shouts for Help Ignored

CHICAGO (AP) — Scores of motorists not only ignored shouts of help from two service station attendants who had been bound and robbed Friday but they helped themselves to gasoline at nine unattended pumps, police said.

Curtis McDowell, manager of the station, one of the busiest in the Chicago area, told police three gunmen walked into the station early Friday and bound the two 19-year-old attendants with electric cords.

McDowell estimated the robbers, wearing green army field jackets and carrying pistols, took $5,000 in cash from a safe and $200 worth of cigarettes.

"They were there for about 45 minutes or so," said McDowell.

"While two of them were inside, a third manned the pumps and pocketed the customers' money.

"When the three men left, motorists began arriving—we have a lot of factory workers that early in the morning as well as the usual stream of business. They began helping themselves. They pumped themselves about $50 worth, as near as I can figure it now."

WERE TIED UP

The attendants, Michael Fry and Kenneth Harris, said in an interview that they were bound as I sat in a room off the main office.

"I managed to crawl up to the front when the robbers left," said Harris. "I got up so I could see out the windows. I saw people pumping gas into their cars. I shouted, 'Help! Help! We've been robbed.' They just looked and kept pumping.

"Several of them came in: One man came in with $2 to pay for his gas. He looked at me and I said, 'Man, unite yer, get the police.' He put the money back in his pocket, grabbed a bunch of cigarettes and he's the only one that help was on the way. Then he returned to his car, filled it up with gas and drove away."

Police said they finally were summoned by an unidentified customer.

Cafik Acquitted

OTTAWA (CP) — MP Norman Cafik (L—Dufferin) was acquitted in provincial court Friday of assaulting his landlord with a broom.

Judge Robert Hutton ruled Mr. Cafik did not use excessive force in ejecting landlord Laurier Noel from the Cafik residence.

Evidence was that Mr. Noel refused to leave Mr. Cafik's home despite several requests to do so.

Mr. Noel then went to the Cafik backyard where he used scissors to cut down clothesline which he said were damaging the bark of trees.

While Mr. Noel was cutting the clotheslines, Mr. Cafik attempted to stop him by hitting him with a broom.

"I wasn't afraid of the broom . . . and the blows didn't hurt," Mr. Noel told the court.

In dismissing the charge, Judge Hutton said an individual is entitled to use reasonable force to protect his private property.

Bible Is Hard To Overlook

THE BOOK ON THE SHELF

Dr. Carson C. Smyth

It is easy to neglect some books. But it is impossible for the Bible to slip out of circulation, even if you put it on the shelf and turn your back on it.

For instance, nobody can go through life without using the figures of speech that come out of this Book. A delightful person is "a good samaritan". A cantankerous individual is "a hero in the flesh"; An indifferent audience makes a speaker wonder about its value of "casting pearls before swine."

Moreover, writers draw heavily on the Bible. Without it there would have been no Negro spirituals. Delete its influence from the plays of T.S. Eliot and the historical writings of Winston Churchill, and their works would be sharply altered. Shakespeare drew on the language of Scripture.

It is late in the game—too late in the game—as far as our culture is concerned, to neglect the Bible. Centuries ago the wisdom and the insight of the Book of books was planted in the soil of our civilization. We have been reaping the harvest ever since.

For example, what would Christmas be without Holy Writ? The second Sunday in Advent was long since designated "Universal Bible Sunday". A lesson for that occasion begins, "In many and various ways God spoke of old to our fathers by the prophets; but in these last days he has spoken to us by a Son, whom he appointed the heir of all things" (Hebrews 1:1-2).

The Ten Commandments remain the basis of our common law. Ther Sermon on the Mount remains the ultimate in God's expectation focused on his children.

Jesus once said, "Is not this why you are wrong, that you know neither the scriptures nor the power of God?" Parents who get their children out to hockey practice, but do not bother to get them out to Sunday School, are preparing them for the same predicament.

Moreover, the decisions of so many leaders show their abysmal ignorance of the truths in Holy Writ. By ignoring the Bible they are their own worst enemies. They are a menace-to society.

Witnesses Persecuted In Africa

Thousands of Jehovah's Witnesses are being persecuted in Central Africa, says Thor Jensen, city overseer of the Belleville East and West congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses.

"Starting Aug. 15, more than 30,000 Jehovah's Witnesses from Malawi who fled as refugees to Mozambique in 1972 became of intense persecution were forced to return to Malawi and now experience brutal persecution again," said Mr. Jensen.

"All of this because of their refusal to join a political party," he said.

Dr. H. Kamuzu, life president of Malawi, recently instructed police to round up all Jehovah's Witnesses and put them in detention camps, said Mr. Jensen.

Lonsdale Residents Petition County to Keep Control of Road

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Controversy has been pricking the outward serenity of Lonsdale's picturesque peacefulness.

The problem befalling the Tyendinaga Township hamlet is a showplace community of period Victorian architecture named into the public spotlight at Hastings County council this week.

The result was the upset of council's road committee's plan for a change in the county road system.

Core of the controversy involves the county road which bridges the Salmon River through the centre of the rural community.

Earlier this year the committee had recommended to council that discussion plans for a new east and bridge scheme.

Second thoughts were prompted after the meeting. The council heard three was a bridge on a township road a mile west. A third bridge also crossed the river three miles east at Kingsford.

The result: The committee decided to take over the Waddingham bridge, and turn over the Lonsdale route to the township.

It even had an authoring bylaw ready for council's approval this week.

Then another Lonsdale delegation showed up in opposition.

The trouble, claimed delegation spokesman Leon McGuinness, was that the present road will its sharp curves and hills needs realignment. If it reverted to Tyendinaga, the township could never afford the cost of a straighter, safer road.

The present road — used daily by school buses — posed a "dangerous situation," he claimed the committee had heard only one side of the story — from those opposed to a new road alignment, and who were fairly recent arrivals in the hamlet.

"Those people who are opposing it are retired people or are in business for themselves. The rest of us have to get up for work in the morning. Our livelihoods depend on it."

Reev. Gordon Wilman, of Sidney Township and roads committee chairman, said there had been no reaction to the August meeting — either from those wanting the new road or from township council. Subsequently, township councillors didn't show for another discussion with the committee.

Because of impressions at the August meeting — the nearness of the Waddingham bridge, the committee considered spending $250,000 at Lonsdale "a lot of money." Property acquisition also poses difficulties and expansion expropriation, said Reeve Wilman.

But Reeve Leonard Walsh of Tyendinaga, said his constituents were opposed to the committee's plans for switching county roads.

The Lonsdale road is "dangerous" and would cost his municipality "an awful lot of money" for maintenance, especially in winter.

The bylaw exchanging the Waddingham crossing for the Lonsdale road would not have been passed until September 1976. The intention by then, was to upgrade the Lonsdale bridges before reverting them to the township.

— Hastings County council voted 7-10 against the bylaw. -

Corke Says Subdivision Standards Need Review

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Mayor Ben Corke said Friday city council must soon reconsider Belleville's residential subdivision standards if homes are to be made available to families living on "modest incomes."

Mayor Corke made the comment at the annual Christmas meeting of the Quinte and District Real Estate Board.

"We've got to begin thinking in terms less than 50-foot-wide lots and 110-foot ranch houses," said the mayor. "Not everyone can afford a bungalow on a 110-foot by half-acre yard."

"I really believe we must start to think seriously about where we are going in terms of land usage," said Mayor Corke.

"The community, like the rest of Canada, cannot afford the services that are required for top class subdivisions."

Mayor Corke recalled in his early years how homes were often built on lots too small for them, and how planning was non-existent.

"I think now, the pendulum has swung too far," in the opposite direction, he said in becoming less realistic and the speed for housing becomes more acute, "council must sit down and reconsider the standards and requirements imposed on builders."

"This must be done if people on modest incomes are going to be able to purchase homes," he said.

In recent times, area homebuilders have criticized local councils for imposing so many standards on a subdivision that the price of the end product is out of the reach of the average buyer.

"A 50-foot wide house on a 40-foot wide lot isn't in dreadful," commented the mayor.

"I think the city is ready for smaller lots," said Mayor Corke.

Phil Bennett, president of the real estate board said following the meeting he is in full support of the mayor's conclusions.

"You don't need cadillac services for a Volkswagen district," said Mr. Bennett.

Following the meeting, Mayor Corke said he will bring the matter to the attention of council at the beginning of the year.

Station's Future Clouded

Canadian Pacific Railway has decided its vacant station building in Belleville cannot be converted into a restaurant.

As a result, city council Monday will be asked to pass a resolution which says it has no objection to demolition of the building.

The possibility of converting the station was raised last April when CP Rail sought demolition approval.

On council's agenda is a letter from CP Hotels. It says an engineering inspection has proven it would not be "economically viable" to keep the building and change it to a restaurant.

Also on council's agenda is a bylaw which would increase charges to $25 for pure-bred kennel operations and charge $12 for each additional female dog in a household. The rest of the current fee schedule would remain unchanged.

Time For Change

Mayor Ben Corke told a meeting of the Quinte District Real Estate Association Friday, subdivision standards imposed by municipal councils must be viewed if housing is to be supplied to families living on modest incomes. Association president Phil Bennett (right), supported the mayor.

Reserve Incident In Court

Michael Minaric will appear before Judge Russell C. Honey in Hastings County Court here next Friday to face a charge of causing a police officer with an explosive substance with intent to do bodily harm.

Minaric, who resided at RR 1, Demorestville at the time of the incident, is charged that on or about Dec. 31, 1974 on the Tyendinaga Reserve, he threw an explosive substance upon provincial police constable Lynn Acres with intent to do bodily harm.

A two-part preliminary hearing on March 4 and 7 in provincial court here, committed Minaric for trial.

Suspect In Court Monday

Terry Arnold Goodrich, 21, of RR 3, Brighton will appear before Judge Russell C. Honey in Hastings County court here Monday on charges of robbery and attempted robbery.

Trenton police say the charges were laid following an investigation into two incidents in Trenton on Oct. 30, 1974.

Police say two men threatened J. A. Walker, owner of Walker Food Variety and Meat at 196 West Dundas St. in Trenton with a knife but were forced to flee when Walker also displayed a knife.

Less than 30 minutes later, two men escaped with more that $240 from Hitt's Handy Stand at 118 Dundas St. in Trenton where three employees were threatened at knifepoint, police say.

A charge of robbery laid against one of the men involved in the incidents has already been disposed of at the provincial court level.

Task Force Recommends Buffer Zone Around Trenton

By JERRY BROWN
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — The Northumberland Task Force (NTF) has voted unanimously to accept a development strategy for the county that will halt Trenton's westward expansion at its current boundary.

The political committee, approved Friday, the development plan devised by the task force's technical committee and consultants, and was told that the final draft would be in the hands of Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough, by Monday.

The task force has recommended that a buffer zone be placed around Trenton, separating it from adjacent areas of rural Northumberland. Implementation of this would be ensured by denial of full services into the recommended buffer zone.

Trenton, at the request of the Task force, had submitted a brief for consideration by the provincially-appointed study group, but was told the brief's figures were not accurate.

The brief based on a 1972 study of projected population predicted Trenton would reach 67,000 residents by 2001, the town requested that Murray Township arrange to give them 1,200 acres of land. The request was rejected by the technical committee and the town was asked to review the figures.

A revised report was later submitted which projected population figures at only 27,000 people and asked for only 620 acres. This request was also denied by the technical committee which recommended the buffer zone be established where it was originally designated.

Cockburn Convicted Of Drug Store Theft

Douglas Ernie Cockburn, 19, of RR 1, Kingston was remanded by Judge Russell C. Honey in Hastings County Court here Friday to Jan. 13 for sentencing after he was found guilty of armed robbery and possession of a stolen car.

Cockburn was on trial by Judge alone for two days for the armed holdup of Kelly's Drugs at 411 East Bridge St. in Belleville during which, Judge Honey found, $225 was stolen from a post office substation.

Cockburn was indicted on the possession charge, introduced by assistant Crown attorney John Woods, of Belleville, after he was found guilty of the Sept. 8 robbery. He is in custody at the Quinte Regional Detention Centre at Napanee.

In his rulings on both charges, Judge Honey found that Cockburn was in possession of a car owned by Garland Burkitt of RR 1, Gilmour reported stolen about an hour prior to the robbery.

Eleanor Burkitt testified Friday she had parked her husband's blue, 1969 model, Ford station wagon on Front St. sixty after 1 p.m. and found it missing about an hour later.

Judge Honey ruled Mr. Woods was successful in proving Cockburn was the person who entered the drug store at 3 p.m. armed with a .32-calibre revolver and wearing a nylon stocking-type mask over his head and was successful in demanding money from the cash register, then 1,200 acres of land. The request was rejected by the technical committee and the town was asked to review the figures.

A revised report was later submitted which projected population figures at only 27,000 people and asked for only 620 acres. This request was also denied by the technical committee which recommended the buffer zone be established where it was originally designated.

Missing Prisoner Nabbed

William John Stockman, 24, who escaped from Joyceville Institution near Kingston on Nov. 28, has been arrested by Royal Canadian Mounted Police in Fernie, B.C. while driving a 'Hidden Rent-A-Car' vehicle he allegedly obtained by fraud in London, Ont.

Belleville police Det. Don Yearwood said Friday his department has a warrant charging Stockman with attempted fraud in connection with an incident at the Bank of Montreal at the corner of East Dundas St. and MacDonald Ave. on Dec. 1.

Det. Yearwood said Stockman is accused of attempting to obtain funds using the name of a 'Master-Charge' card allegedly stolen from a institution guard.

Ontario Provincial Police at Kingston said Friday Stockman was charged with two counts of breaking-and-enter and theft and with being unlawfully at large in connection with incidents which occurred in their jurisdiction after his escape.

Police said Stockman escaped from a guard while on a temporary absence from the institution.

Hydro Sets Example With Smaller Display

By CLIFF KENTON
Staff Reporter

You may be wishing for a white Christmas but if you want to conserve electrical energy, Ontario Hydro is asking for an excessively bright Christmas.

Ontario Hydro and the ministry of energy have both appealed to homeowners to refrain from turning on Christmas light decorations until about an hour after dinner and to be sure to turn them off before going to bed.

A Ontario Hydro's Toronto head office they are following their own recommended hours of between 7 p.m. to midnight for their Christmas display which has been reduced in size in past years.

Jack Mole of Ontario Hydroes' Eastern Region, said Hydro has have done away with all outdoor Christmas lighting at its Belleville office.

Three years ago, said Mr. Mole, they decorated the outside of the building. Now they only have a Christmas tree in the building's lobby.

"We each save a little we all save a lot," Mr. Mole said.

Although the electrical cost of operating the average indoor or outdoor home display for a month is less than the cost of operating a color television for the same period the combined effect throughout the province is high.

"We hit our peak electrical demand in Ontario between 4:30 and 6:30 p.m. This is the way we are asking people to wait until 7 p.m. to turn Christmas lights on," he said.

Christmas lights in Ontario, he said, could use all the electricity produced by one generator at Pickering Nuclear Station. The two-generator plant is one of the largest in the world in terms of electrical output.

The Ontario Hydro system, said Mr. Mole, is designed to provide electrical energy to meet peak demands with a reserve of about 25 per cent.

By about 4:30 p.m. in winter, he said, industry is using power, home furnaces are switching on, afternoon television drops, lights are turned on as it becomes darker and it's almost time th turn on the oven to prepare dinner.

Use of Christmas lights during the peak demand hours adds to the necessary capacity of the system.

"We're asking people to use off-peak power and avoid the strain to the system," said Mr. Mole.

Neil Britton, manager of Belleville Utilities Commission, said Ontario Hydro's recommended hours for use of Christmas lights is consistent with avoiding energy wastage.

Light Consideration

Doug Row of Smith Dominion Hardware, 314 Front St., checks for Canadian Standard Association labels on a string of Christmas lights. Belleville fire department officials say lights of light that have been used for a number of years. If insulation around wires is brittle or cracked, sets should be replaced.

Many Shoppers Say Christmas Belongs to Children

Christmas means different things to different people.

For some it is a time for the family reunions, for others it means a holiday in the south and to others it signifies the religious celebration of the birth of Jesus Christ.

A survey of shoppers this week indicates while most believe Christmas is a special time, many find it hard to remember one reason—Christmas.

Some said Christmas is a time for children while others said they believe Christmas is just another holiday.

A turkey dinner and an exchange of gifts are always on the agenda for most families. Some attend church services and others hold family parties.

Everyone interviewed said Christmas is the one special time for families to be together, a man even suggested Christmas be renamed "family day."

IRENE CARSON

Irene Carson, a member of the staff at Coles Book store, said Christmas was memorable when her children were younger and at home. "It's hard, to pin down one special year," she said. "Most Christmases are very happy."

A Belleville resident, Mrs. Carson said her family would be home in her home Christmas day and she was elected chef.

ROBERT COLEMAN

Robert Coleman, 21, member of the staff at CFJC TV, said Christmas was most memorable when his father was alive. "Christmas doesn't mean that much to me anymore. It's all over in a day," he said.

Mr. Coleman said Christmas with his two children made the occasion special. "If I didn't have kids I probably wouldn't notice Christmas. Kids make Christmas."

SUSAN DUNNING

Susan Dunning, 20, of Belleville, said her most memorable Christmas was last year when the family had Christmas Eve working at the former Victoria Lodge, a home for senior citizens. Miss Dunning, who is unemployed, said the older people provided a "homey atmosphere."

"I really enjoyed being with them," she said. "Christmas is giving."

SHARON PETERSON

Sharon Peterson, 28, an assistant manager of Montreal Draperies, said the first Christmas with her son was the most memorable. "Kids are so cute at Christmas," she said.

Mrs. Peterson said her parents would be visiting from New Brunswick this year for the holiday season and that made it a special occasion.

ARTHUR MASSEY

Mr. Arthur Massey, 3, a retired cook from Belleville General Hospital, said his most memorable Christmas was when he "received Christ as my savior." Mr. Massey said he would spend a traditional Christmas with his family and attend the Salvation Army Citadel. "Christmas means happiness," he said.

ROBERT FERGUSON

Robert Ferguson, 24 of the CNR, said Christmas is a memorable especially when they get together with your family.

"It gets more expensive every year though," admitted Mr. Ferguson. "But Christmas is getting to be a day for the family. It's a heavy touch; it should be called 'Family Day.'" he said.

Homeowners Awaiting Official Confirmation Of Water Main Costs

FRANKFORD — Homeowners near Pitcher's Side-road say they have received official word before deciding whether to share the estimated $68,000 cost of laying a water main from Frankford to their homes, plagued by polluted well water for more than five months.

The position was outlined Friday by Ken Olsansky, spokesman for seven of the homeowners.

She was reacting to news reports of a Ontario environment ministry estimate of $68,000 for the cost of construction.

"I can't comment until I see it in black and white," she said. "I wouldn't want to go off half-cocked and then accept it."

Earlier this week, an environment ministry official said it would likely cost the area's property owners a quarter of a mile from the village west along Hastings County Rd. 5 to Pitcher's Sideroad.

Mrs. Olsansky Friday questioned the ministry's estimate, saying she has gotten another quote from a Trenton contractor of $13 to $15 a linear foot.

But whatever the cost, she said, "We'd probably have to go along with it."

The estimated the cost to about 40 property owners along the "Sideroad Road", would be about $1,650, provided all agree to hook into the proposed main.

Close to 40 persons signed a petition filed with Sidney township in late November, asking for an extension of a main from the village to their rural hut.

Needed Finally There

TORONTO (CP) — Defenceman Greg Neeld was in a thankful mood Friday night.

The Toronto Toros defenceman signed earlier in the day by the World Hockey Association team, finally made his professional hockey debut in a game against Quebec Nordiques.

The Calgary native lost the sight in his left eye as the result of an injury in his junior playing days, and was not allowed to play in the National Hockey League because of an NHL rule prohibiting players with less than 20 per cent vision in one eye. He currently has a suit against the NHL before the courts.

The Toros secured Neeld's WHA playing rights last week in a trade with Minnesota Fighting Saints, and the 20-year-old suited up for Friday night's game, won by the Toros 8-4.

Neeld picked up two minor penalties in the first period of the game, then in the final period, gave the puck to Quebec's Marc Tardif, allowing the high-scoring winger to net his second goal of the game for a 4-4 tie.

Vacler Nedomansky and Frank Mahovlich scored later in the period to give the Toros the win.

Neeld, who praised the Toros for giving him a chance to play in the pros, admitted he was nervous at the beginning of the game, but settled down as it progressed.

"I didn't really loosen up until the third period," said Neeld. "I was really tight in the first period and it showed in my play.

"I felt kind of bad after giving the puck away to Tardif. I committed a sin in passing the puck across ice instead of using the boards."

Neeld said the peripheral vision in his right eye improved "all of a sudden" over the last two months.

He wears a specially-designed helmet with a glass-fibre mask that protects his one good eye. His has cut away part of the temple protector from the right side of his helmet and bent back part of a steel bar to allow him better vision.

Neeld skates with his head tilted slightly to the left, allowing him to use his one good eye to see on both sides.

He said players don't treat him any differently on the ice, although he admitted he was treated verbally by some of the Quebec players at the beginning of the game.

Toronto coach Bobby Baun, himself once a rugged defenceman in the NHL, said he was pleased with Neeld's play.

"He seemed a little nervous out there, but played a strong game," he said. "Any defenceman gives the puck away once in a while. If that's the extent of his problems, he'll be okay."

Neeld was attending school in Reno, Nev., and playing on the city's Pontiac team in the Southwest Hockey League until the league collapsed. He was then contacted by Toros owner John F. Bassett, and general manager Gerry Ehman.

Neeld said his contract was basically for one year with the option to re-negotiate at the end of two, three and four years. He admitted the salary called for was a bit disappointing.

"It was a little less than I had hoped for but I'm just thankful to be able to play. I'll be around here for at least four years."

Greg Neeld, who lost his left eye as a result of a hockey injury while playing for Toronto Marlboros, continued to play hockey wearing a special face mask. As a result of his determination he was signed Friday by Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association. Neeld's protective equipment allows him to utilize a highly developed sense of peripheral vision in his right eye.

Swedes Lead Jets to Victory

By NEIL CAMPBELL
The Canadian Press

Swedish centre Mats Lindh is not about over his period of adjustment with Winnipeg Jets.

Lindh admits he has had trouble making the switch but Friday night his two goals made the difference for Winnipeg Jets in their 4-2 victory over Calgary Cowboys in World Hockey Association game.

The win was an important one for the Jets, who moved three points in front of second-place Quebec Nordiques in the Canadian Division race. The Nordiques, who have played one more game than the Jets, lost 6-4 to Toronto Toros on Friday.

In Friday's other games, Cleveland Crusaders shaded Minnesota Fighting Saints 4-0, Houston Aeros dropped Indianapolis Racers 4-2 and Cincinnati Stingers topped Phoenix Roadrunners 4-2.

Lindh, who has been playing on a line with Lindstrom and Canadien Bill Lesuk on off-season acquisition from Washington Capitals of the National Hockey League, says, "It's getting better and better, game after game."

Winnipeg goalie Joe Daley made 27 stops and displayed some of his early-season form, when he had four shutouts. Illness had hampered his play recently.

Rookie Toronto goaltender Dave Tataryn celebrated his birthday by posting his first shutout by turning in another outstanding game for the Toros, frustrating the Nordiques with 41 stops.

Tataryn had to be signed because he had completed the five-game trial allowed amateur players. He had played with Columbus Owls of the International Hockey League and Whitby Warriors of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series before injuries gave him his chance with the Toros.

The Toros also had rookie defenceman Greg Neeld, who lost an eye in a junior hockey mishap, in uniform for the first time. Rookie Mark Napier scored two goals and diver two assists for the Toros, who led 1 going into the last period, then needed third-period goals by Vaclav Nedomansky and Frank Mahovlich.

The Crusaders, threatened with a shakeup by coach Johnny Wilson earlier in the week, checked the high-scoring Saints to a standstill, limiting them to 14 shots on goal and handing them their first shutout in 279 regular season and playoff games.

A Cleveland crowd of 7,549 fans saw Richie Leduc break a scoreless tie with less than five minutes to play.

Defenceman John Schella scored one goal, drew two assists and made several outstanding defensive plays for the Aeros.

John Kiely blocked 37 shots for the Stingers, who built an early 1-0 lead on goals by Gene Sobchuk, Murray Myers and Brian Campbell.

FILES SUIT

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Alan B-Vern, former Philadelphia 76ers forward, filed a $1.7-million damage suit Friday, claiming the National Basketball Association club can not cut him for lack of skill. Bristow said his three-year, no-cut contract, which expires next year, guaranteed him a position with the 76ers. Bristow was dropped from the team in October and is playing with San Antonio Spurs of the American Basketball Association. Pat Williams, general manager for the 76ers, said the club has fulfilled its obligations and will pay Bristow for the remainder of the year.

Capitals Great for Wings Morale

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

There's nothing like a game against Washington Capitals to brighten the day for a National Hockey League player.

Friday night, it was Michel Bergeron's turn.

Bergeron scored three goals for the first time in his NHL career and the Detroit Red Wings, who have trouble beating anybody else, went home from Landover, Md., with a 5-3 win over the Capitals.

A second-year professional from Sorel, Que., Bergeron scored only 10 goals last season and six this year before Friday's game. Dan Maloney added a goal and two assists for the Wings.

In Friday's other games, New York Islanders tied Atlanta Flames 3-3 and California Golden Seals dropped St. Louis Blues 5-2.

A game between Vancouver Canucks and Philadelphia Flyers was postponed because of a downtown that dumped 10 centimetres of snow on Vancouver. It will be played Feb. 18.

Mickey Redmond scored the Wings' other goal before a Landover crowd of 6,534 fans. Bill Clement, Nelson Pyatt and Gordon Lane scored for the Capitals, who tested Detroit goalie Ed Giacomin with only 19 shots.

Eric Vail, back in uniform for the first time after missing two weeks with a shoulder injury scored the Flames tying goal before an Atlanta crowd of 11,

"I just tapped it in," said Vail, the National Hockey League's rookie of the year last season. of his tying goal with 31 seconds left. "It was just lying there."

Vail missed the entire training season with a shoulder separation, missed the first five games this year, played eight games, then reinjured the shoulder Nov. 7.

"They're tenacious as hell," said Atlanta coach Fred Creighton of the Islanders. "They hold, they clutch, grab, interfere.

"They don't give you a thing. Two points would have been better. The way we got the one, over the long haul, that could really help us."

The Islanders led 3-1 with just more than six minutes to play on goals by Bryan Trottier, Gerry Howatt and Bob Nystrom. Curt Bennett and Bill Fairbairn were Atlanta's other scorers.

Defenceman Blue Wayne Merrick scored California's winning goal in the seventh minute of the game, Al MacAdam, Dennis Maruk and George Pesut. Pierre Plante and Floyd Thomson scored for St. Louis.

The win moved the Seals to within a point of third-place Toronto Maple Leafs in the Adams Division standings. California has played four more games than the Leafs.

The Leafs have a chance to give themselves some breathing room tonight when they play the Islanders at Toronto while the Seals are idle.

The rest of tonight's schedule has New York Rangers at Detroit, Philadelphia at Los Angeles Kings, Kansas City Scouts at Montreal Canadiens, Boston Bruins at Pittsburgh Penguins and Chicago Black Hawks at Minnesota North Stars.

Sunday, Toronto will meet the Rangers, Atlanta plays Buffalo Sabres, Pittsburgh at Montreal, Minnesota at Washington, Vancouver at Boston and St. Louis at Chicago.

Selects Aren't Intimidated

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Moscow Selects scored the most impressive victory of their North American hockey tour with an 11-4 triumph Friday night over Sudbury Wolves.

The Wolves, Leyden Division leaders in the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series, fell flat in the third period as the Selects fired six unanswered goals before 6,000 spectators.

The Moscow win follows earlier decisions over Nova Scotia Voyageurs of the American Hockey League and Ottawa 67's of the OHA junior league.

The Wolves had fought back from a 4-4 first period deficit to tie the game in the second period with four power-play goals.

Sudbury coach Jerry Toppazzini was disappointed with his team's performance especially in the third period.

"We tried to intimidate them and we got stupid penalties," he said. "We ruined a perfectly good hockey game and a perfectly good comeback."

Three of the Moscow goals in the third period were scored with Sudbury players in the penalty box.

Boris Alexandrov scored three goals to lead the Selects.

Vladimir Golikov and Vladimir Selesnov added two goals each for the winners and single goals went to Tony Tyrkin, Tony Tarabkin, Vladimir Popov and Victor Kozlovgin.

Captain Ron Duguay fired two goals for the Wolves and Sudbury players in the single goals were scored by by Hector Marini and John Baby.

The Selects blasted 49 shots on two Sudbury goalies, veteran Jim Bedard and rookie Eric Nielsson. Mikhil Vasilenok faced only 25 Sudbury shots.

Bobcats Run Rampant Despite Rangers' Tactics

To say the Belleville Bobcats were successful in their first encounter with a team in the Central Division would be an understatement as most of the 1,000 spectators at Friday's Metro Junior B Hockey game between the Bobcats and the visiting North York Rangers will admit.

The visitors displayed beyond a shadow of a doubt that they belong in their present position the basement. The Cats fought literally tooth and claw to pull down the Rangers by a 13-3 margin.

The game, as far as hockey was concerned, was over after the conclusion of the first period. From there, the Rangers took to using sticks and whatever available tactic they could to stop the fast skating Cats.

The clubs amassed, besides a total of 15 goals, 115 minutes in penalties that included a match penalty to Al Carter, B Hockey game between the Bobcats and the visiting North York Rangers will admit.

No One's Secure Once the Wheelin' and Dealin' Starts

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (UPI) — Age is barely mentioned in Bill Veeck.

Less than 24 hours after his return to baseball as owner of Chicago White Sox, Veeck imagined the game's winter meetings with a flamboyant public display of wheeling and dealing.

The 61-year-old showman capped 12 hours of public telephone negotiations with four trades in the final hour of the Interleague trading.

Chicago's trading highlighted a day of dealing during which such established baseball stars as Ralph Garr, Clay Carroll, Mickey Lolich and Rusty Staub changed uniforms.

Veeck sat in a chair in the lobby at the hotel where the winter baseball meetings were being held. He had a sign along side him which read: "Open for Business Anytime."

A telephone stood on the table in front of him. General manager Roland Hemond and one Chicago aides sat around the table. Veeck sat in that chair more than 12 hours, carrying on negotiations with other club officials.

Several times hotel guests stopped to watch the unusual sight from behind a bannister in the lobby.

"Undoubtedly they (other baseball people) will say I'm making a travesty of trading," Veeck had said earlier. "But the game is fun."

The first blockbuster deal in the late moments of the trading deadline of midnight Friday night involved Garr, a Chicago hero who sent Staub, an outstanding player, to Detroit.

RALPH GARR

four trades is less than an hour was mind-boggling.

In these final frantic minutes the White Sox sent outfielder Ken Henderson and pitchers Dick Ruthven and Dan Osborn to Atlanta Braves for Ralph Garr, the 1974 National League batting champion, and infielder Larvell Blanks. They quickly dispatched Blanks to Cleveland Indians for second baseman Jack Brohamer.

Minutes later, Veeck and company struck again—twice. The Indians sent Carroll, the

MICKEY LOLICH

CLAY CARROLL

for Lolich, the veteran left-handed pitcher.

The Stash-for-Lolich swap alone was a headliner, but what followed as Veeck and Hemond wheeled and dealed through the ace of the bullpen for Detroit's Tony Taylor, left-handed pitcher Rich Hinton and catcher Jeff Scurry.

Carroll must accept the move under a baseball rule which allows players who have been in the major leagues for 10 years and with the same team for five to refuse trades.

Now, Hemond reached for the telephone again. He had second left in playing yet another trade. Veeck, concerned about the time left, sent Joe Reichler, special assistant to baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn, on the telephone. Kuhn and ask for a brief extension of the trading deadline.

But the extension wasn't necessary. At the second hand ticked off the final minute, Hemond spoke over the phone to general manager Bing Devine of St. Louis Cardinals.

"Bing, this is Hal. Hal. We've got 15 seconds left. It's a deal."

Reichler rushed up.

"I told you make the deal!" asked the commissioner's man. "Your time is up."

"We just traded shortstop Ron Bee Richard to St. Louis Cardinals for outfielder Buddy Bradford and pitcher Greg Terrlaky," Hemond said.

It took almost 24 hours for the Mets to convince Lolich to accept the Stash deal. A veteran of the Tigers, Lolich had balked at the switch when it was suggested Friday.

Reichler was one of the hottest trading days in the history of the winter meetings, the Reds, 1975 World Series winners, sent the Series losers, Boston Red Sox made moves to strengthen themselves.

The Red Sox sent pitcher Roger Moret, who won 18 and lost only three games last season, to Atlanta for reliever Tom Hume. Hume was 7-7 and allowed only two homers in 79 innings of pitching.

The Reds, picked up bench strength with the acquisition of Bob Bailey and Mike Lum. They gave up right-handed pitcher Clay Kirby, 10-4, to Montreal Expos for Bailey and outfielder Darrell Chaney in Atlanta for Lum.

In other deals, the Mets obtained outfielder Joe Lovitto from Texas Rangers for outfielder Gene Clines, Pittsburgh Pirates took infielder Jim Sonnen from Houston Astros for a player to be named later, Minnesota purchased infielder Rodney Scott from Kansas City Royals, Texas obtained pitcher Craig Sisk from Boston and outfielder Billy Baldwin went to the Mets and pitcher Bill Laxton to Detroit in the Lolich-Stanbaby.

In all, there were 21 deals involving 84 players during the week-long meetings.

There would have been more, but Veeck ran out of time.

Williams Given Walking Papers

Ti-Cats' Make Decisive Moves

HAMILTON (CP) — Head coach Jerry Williams and Hamilton Tiger-Cats have parted company by mutual consent.

The Canadian Football League club also announced Friday that Ralph Sazio has stepped down as general manager and that the board of directors had rejected sweeping mooly a takeover bid by Harold Ballard, owner of Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto.

Sazio, a part owner, will remain as club president and will continue to handle many administrative duties and represent the club in league matters.

Sazio, signing as as president, said he the new general manager and possibly DeGrossi would be willing to accept the job.

It was announced at a news conference following the directors' meeting that Williams had resigned but majority owner Michael DeGrossi said the coach didn't decide to quit on his own.

"I think we all had a part in the decision and so did Jerry," DeGrossi told reporters. "He's a sensible guy, he knows we didn't have a good year.

"When it's mutual it's a lot better for everyone."

The Ticats won the Grey Cup in 1972. Williams's first year as head coach, after winning 11 of 14 games during that regular season. They have not had a winning season since.

They finished third in the Eastern Football Conference this year, then were eliminated by Montreal Alouettes in a sudden-death semi-final.

Williams was criticized for using an offence that was too sophisticated for an inexperienced team and a city not used to a tough, hard approach to the game.

He said in a telephone interview "the impossible situation in Hamilton has never been assured him on coaching. He said he may turn to reading.

Sazio said the task of doubling as president and general manager of the team was prompted by "a workload that has become somewhat unbearable."

In addition to his duties with the Ticats, Sazio is president of the CFL executive committee and league representative in dealings with the CFL Players Association.

"It was a hectic year and I'd bring in any I enjoyed all the haggling with players," he said.

DeGrossi said the club's directors had received a written offer for 10-percent ownership of the team from Maple Leaf Gardens Inc. at 8 a.m.

"The board of directors unanimously rejected the offer and I completely concurred," he said. "For the record, the club is not for sale."

In Memoriam

GREEN — In loving memory of a dear mother, Dorothy Green, who died December 14, 1972.
Dorothy is a star
There is a memory fond and true.
Her life was a beautiful picture
Of love, kindness and devotion
Her memory
Lovingly remembered by Mrs. Jean Varney.

MOTT — In loving memory of our dear mother, Ethel Mott, who passed away December 14th, 1971.
Sweet are the ways of God
And we watched you fade away,
Never knowing what we lost
It may be your last day.
Sweet are the ways of memories
You can never part
You left us lasting memories
We'll treasure through the heart.
—Lovingly remembered by Verna and Della.

SEELEY — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Mrs. Estella Seeley who passed away Dec. 14th, 1968 and 1975.
Sweet are the ways of friends and kindness
Dear mother, how we often think of you.
Friends are friends, if they are true,
Yet we feel that when we lost you
We lost a friend.
—Lovingly remembered by Betty, Gord, David and Sherry.

ROBINSON — In loving memory of our dear son Edward Howard (Ted) who passed away December 13th, 1965.
Gone unknown known are telling,
Gone unseen but there beside you,
It reminds us of our sorrow,
Yes you're sadly missed
—Ever remembered by Mom, Dad and Larry.

CHRISTOPHER — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Cecil Christopher who passed away December 13th, 1964.
Deep in the heart lies a picture,
Of a loved one held by God.
A husband's, friend and what hope I believe she was the best.
Husband, father, brother, daughter
Barbara and sonny-boy Bill.
—Lovingly remembered by Barbara.

THERSON — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Louis Therson who passed away December 13, 1965.
God took him home, it was His will, and in our hearts he has his place still.
His memory is as dear today,
As the day he left his home to stay.
We often sit and think of him
When we are at ease.
For memory is the only friend,
That grief can call to use.
—Lovingly remembered by his Albert and Jessie and family.

DRIVER — In ever loving memory of a dear husband, father and great grandfather, Ernest Driver who passed away December 13th, 1964.
There's a place in heaven that's reserved for you
For tireless hands and a heart that's true
Your life was a lesson to be followed
Your death a loss to mourn
And there's a place in our hearts reserved for you, Ernie.
Within the walls of memory
There's a place for you and loved before.
Its passed yesterday.
—Lovingly remembered by wife Bessie and Bessie.

CLEMENT — In loving memory of a dear son and father, C. Clement who passed away suddenly, December 13, 1971.
Dear son, we miss your smile
As it passes another year.
We miss your laugh and your whistle,
Thoughts of him are always near.
Lovely was the memory you left us,
Sweetness, kindness, mother, sister and father.

New York Has Had 104 Mayors

NEW YORK (AP) —New York City has had 104 mayors in its 81-year history—good ones, bad ones and in-betweeners.

One ordered Wall Street blown up, another chopped down telephone poles and the famous Fiorello LaGuardia read what was then called the "funny pages" over the radio.

There was one whose legend will never die; the man who set the all-time record for candor, Tammany Hall's James J. Walker. O'Brien, occupant of City Hall in the 1940s, was once asked by a press conference whom he intended to appoint as police commissioner.

Replied O'Brien: "I don't know. They haven't told me yet."

Today there's Abraham David Beame, the Hammer who won the mayoralty of the nation's largest city a lot was sliding toward bankruptcy.

How does he cope with the tremendous pressures of the past year, the strikes and near-strikes, the meetings with financial wizards, state bosses, city council, federal authorities, colleagues, constituents—in short, everyone who might be able to help.

How, in short, does he manage to get by each morning?

"With my eyes wide open," answers the 63-year-old civil servant.

Supporters of the mayor think he's the best man for the job. They believe that no one but he can carry the message of the city," says Geraldine.

"It's about a position with him, it's about a position with me. I also think he knows his parents nicely. The good man he knew.

Beame's son, Bernard (Buddy) Beame, a local TV producer, says his father can relate to everyone.

"He has never had the ability to cope with issues," says the younger Beame. "I don't mean that it's not just him, there's a whole government. I think other people had nothing else. They would be at the shop all week and on Saturday or Sunday, or if not they would be worrying about it. . . .

"Everybody worries about his health, but I think he's made a lot more it he had nothing to do. When he has nothing to do he can drive everyone around him crazy, including 19 different lists to fill up the time."

The mayor's close friends say they can see when he is seeing, although a stranger would never spot it.

"His eyes get colder and his face gets hard," says an old friend. Beame reportedly has blown up only once in this crisis.

"I blew my stack in Albany," admits the mayor. He felt that some state legislators were not acting in the spirit of compromise, not really looking for a solution.

He herded a well-known epithet—accompanied by a profane sexual challenge — and stormed out of a meeting.

"I thought it was necessary at the time," admits the mayor. "No red-blooded American would have done any differ-ent."

Sewage May Be Recycled

SASKATOON (CP) — Preliminary results from a University of Saskatchewan study suggest that sewage effluent may be successfully recycled in some agricultural soils.

Researchers in the department of soil science have found that effluent from the city of Moose Jaw can be used for irrigation, provided 10 per cent of it drains below the rooting zone. Drainage to this extent is required to prevent the build-up of salts from the domestic and industrial wastes. One problem, however, is that the salt eventually infiltrates ground water supplies and this must be taken account in any plans for using effluent to grow crops.

Dr. E. de Jong, who is in charge of the study, said that benefits providing water and nutrients for crop growth, effluent irrigation would avoid such problems as the spread of disease and odors, which can occur when waste is discharged into waterways, and it would cost less than conventional treatment and mechanical sewage.

Prof. de Jong said it will up to geologists and hydrologists to determine the severity of the problem posed by the infiltration of salts into ground water. He pointed out, however, that effluent dumped into waterways also results in salt problems at some stage and recommended: "With effluent irrigation you at least have the advantage of from 50 to 75 per cent of the water, with the nutrients in it, coming back into or growing crops."

Quebec Makes Good Use Of Its Petroleum Products

MONTREAL (CP) — Despite Quebec's increasing dependence on natural gas and hydroelectric power, the province makes greater use of petroleum products in satisfying its energy requirements than any other region in Canada except the Atlantic provinces.

A recent Gazette report showed that not only is oil use high in Quebec, but its importance in the province's energy mix has been increasing while petroleum dependence in the rest of Canada has stabilized.

Measured in British thermal units, petroleum products rose to 71.8 per cent of Quebec's energy mix in 1973 from 65.5 per cent in 1964. Natural gas made impressive percentage gains, but still accounted for only 4.5 per cent of energy use in 1973—up from 0.6 per cent in 1964.

The disruption of oil supply in late 1973 and early 1974 pushed natural gas to six per cent, representing a 25-per-cent increase in the volume of gas used in Quebec.

Pierre Dupuis, vice-president of Imperial Oil Ltd., said the popularity of oil in Eastern Canada can be attributed to the national oil policy adopted in 1961, based on the recommendations of a royal commission created in 1957.

The policy stated that foreign crude oil imports into Eastern Canada could at the cold weather of the Ottawa Valley. Because production costs made northern oil more expensive than imported oil, Quebecers and Maritimers paid less than other Canadians for gasoline and fuel oil.

Refined petroleum products are expected popular in the Montreal area because of lower transport costs than are refined to the user.

The city's six refineries are supplied with crude oil through a pipeline running from Portland, Me. A pipeline also is being built to Montreal from Sarnia, Ont., but many industry officials feel the western province will not have enough oil to supply the east.

Britain to Aid U.S. In Bicentennial Plan

LONDON (Reuter) — The United States celebrates the 200th anniversary of its independence.

America's royal counterpart is sending its Queen for a visit, inventing American tartans, leasing documents and rewriting history in honor of the U.S. bicentennial.

President Nixon kicked things off in July, 1972, when he officially invited Britain to take part.

Parliament replied by sending Washington the best of British cities of the Magna Carta, which the barons forced King John to sign in 1215.

(It was perhaps meant to remind Americans that 1776 was not the first Anglo-Saxon upheaval.)

A British Bicentennial Independent Commission, a public and committee was formed and has collected about $1 million for the cause, mainly for sending British performing artists to the United States.

Queen Elizabeth will visit the eastern United States July 7-11 in her first trip to the U.S. since 1976. Part of her visit will include a yacht trip across the Hudson River, starting in Hoboken.

But the excitement here is not all royal and governmental.

Miss Eileen Johnson, secretary of the the parish church in Buxford, Suffolk (pop. 1,600) was flabbergasted when she opened a letter from a doctor in Buxford, Mass. (pop. 4,000), asking the entire population of the English village to visit the New England town in the summer of 1976.

Miss Johnson now has a list of more than 100 interested residents, and is calling a village meeting soon to sort out the details and try to raise money for air fares.

Committees have been set up in London and Washington to help cities—like Torrington, Devon, and Torrington, Conn.; Rye, Sussex, and Rye, N.Y.—to become sister cities, even though some of them are already.

And after Buxford's experience, the U.S. Embassy here was receiving requests from towns all over British asking for the location of similarly named American towns.

Some of British museums are offering Bicentennial related exhibits, but off the beaten Museum which recently was host to the travelling U.S. World of Beards and Whiskers display which included Thomas Jefferson's locks, Benjamin Franklin's bifocals and a stuffed bison.

Next summer The Times is sponsoring an exhibit at the National Maritime Museum entitled simply 1776, after the year the British side of the American War of Independence, reasons, events and aftermath are seen through the people who participated.

In preparation for this show, the National Gallery recently cleaned and relined Ki Jushua Reynolds portrait of cavalry known in the 13 colonies as "Bloody Tarleton" after he ordered his men to bayonet the American wounded in a South Carolina battle.

Other exhibits are ties waistlike, today devoted to American quilts and coverlets, art, slaves, Indians," maps and at Lon-don's Kew Gardens, American plants.

Britain's stately homes are also joined in with special "American weeks." Washington Hall near Newcastle in northeast England, the home of George Washington's ancestors from 1183 until 1613, will be open free to holders of U.S. passports for 1975-76.

British television is planning several series on American Indians, inventions and immigrant, including a program each celebrating a different nationality of U.S. immigrant.

Various cathedrals, including St. Paul's and Westminster Abbey, are planning special commemorative services, most of them on July 4, 1976.

Books on the British side of the American Revolutionary struggle are in the works, and London University has 13 two-week-long British, one American course on debating teams to argue subjects relating to the Bicentennial.

Christmas in the Village

The foods, decorations and rituals of Ontario's early settlers have been recreated at Toronto's Black Creek Pioneer Village. The Village houses display the simple decorations of pre-Confederation Christmases with wreaths of evergreen boughs, garlands of cranberries and popcorn. (CP Photo)

Author Recounts Hard Times

LOS ANGELES (AP) — At 40 he still has the heft of a football quarterback, which he once was at Brooklyn College. He claims to have "legs like Joe Namath" from dozens of tumbles on Swiss ski slopes.

He is a survivor, this Irvine, a man who has endured the slings and arrows of Broadway critics, the betrayal of blacklists of Hollywood producers, plus the snubbings of other bastards for 20th century writers.

He not only survives but flourishes. His latest novel, Nightwork, is rapidly climbing up the bestseller lists.

That is not unknown territory for Shaw. He made it there with The Young Lions, Two Weeks in Another Town, Lucy Crown, Rich Man, Poor Man, and Evening in Byzantium.

"I've never had less or more trouble as I have had on this one," he said.

Nightwork—except for my books of short stories," Shaw said.

Shaw was back in his old Hollywood haunts on a leave from his Paris apartment and Klosters chalet. He spent a good deal of his early writing career here—"I used to be a pigwright, and after every flop I had to run out here to make some money."

He remembered one assignment with pleasure—the 1942 George Stevens film, Talk of the Town, with Cary Grant, Jean Arthur and Ronald Colman. Shaw was one of his movie work remains a bad memory.

I wrote good scripts—the best I knew how," he said. "But by the time they went through the grinder, I couldn't recognize them. My last job was War and Peace for the Italians (in 1956)."

He also was unemployable during the Red hunts of the 1950s. "I was never a Communist, but I had supported the Republicans in the Spanish Civil War," he said. "That, plus working with the Group Theatre was enough to put me on the blacklist."

Shaw took up residence in Europe and began turning out bestsellers.

The option for Nightwork has already been sold to film makers Frank Perry, but Shaw said he will not work on the script.

"No more," he vowed. "I've got two books to write, one a sort of final farewell to Paris. I'm giving up my apartment there, the other a big, big novel about America. It takes me two and a half years to write a book so my work is cut out for me."

Winnipeg Ballet Wants More Toronto Dates

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Royal Winnipeg Ballet, which has recently performed in such places as Vermilion, Alta., and Terrace and Kitimat, B.C., would like to have more performances in Toronto.

Jim Cameron, the ballet's general manager, says the company could make money there if it played only in Winnipeg, Toronto, Vancouver and Minneapolis.

But the Royal Winnipeg has always been a touring company, stubbornly planned just large enough to occupy one highway bus, but still allow travel mostly in a single bus, though it sometimes takes trucktloads of stage sets and costumes to supply their performing needs.

Cameron said recently that after returning from a Western Canada tour to perform at Christmas season at home in Winnipeg, the ballet will spend five weeks touring the U.S., and then three weeks in March and April in the Maritimes.

Although the company would like to perform more in Toronto, there are limitations. The principal theatre—the O'Keefe Centre—is the nominal home of the National Ballet of Canada.

Cameron said the O'Keefe Centre tries to protect the National by not engaging any other dance company, but performing the month before or after each National Ballet appearance.

Cameron says this is a short-sighted policy—unlike Vancouver, where ballet audiences have been encouraged to grow because a large number of ballet and contemporary dance companies are brought to the Queen Elizabeth Theatre.

The National Ballet, perhaps with the co-operation of the Canadian Opera Company, hopes someday to have a Toronto theatre devoted almost entirely to dance and opera.

"If the National did have a theatre of its own, we'd help build that theatre," Cameron said. "We don't compete with the National, with its big productions of the big ballets, like Swan Lake, Giselle, Coppelia, small company, doing mainly modern works based on the classical tradition."

Mennonite, Amish Schools Not Affected by Violence

ST. JACOBS, Ont. (CP) — Playgrounds where there is no re-enactment of TV violence, drugs or profanity are not a wishful dream.

They do exist in the 34 Old Order Mennonite and Amish parochial schools which have mushroomed in this part of southwestern Ontario during the last decade.

Most of the Old Order Mennonites, the half dozen Amish and the two Conservative Mennonite schools which now have a total enrollment of close to 1,100 pupils in Waterloo, Perth and Wellington Counties, are located in the country.

Classes are held in the little red-painted-white type of building, many with bells in towers, which went out with the last century. All are equipped with swings and horse-sisters.

The lives of the 1,000 children behind the cedar-covered Mennonite country is so vastly different from the jean-clad pupils of other Canadian schools that they could be living in another world.

To walk into one of the Mennonite parochial school playgrounds is like stepping back a century into a less-complex and slower-paced world. Pupils spend their breaks sitting on the teeter-totters or swings.

They nibble on thick sandwiches of fresh, home-made bread and home-cured ham, wedges of fresh cakes, pie and home-made doughnuts from their well-filled lunch pails. There is good-natured mischief but no rowdyism.

They don't see movie or TV violence—there are no idiot boxes in Grade 1 in Old Order Mennonite homes. They never go to movies. The only rock'n'roll they are likely to hear are the strains which might float into the playgrounds from passing cars.

Girls dressed in pinafores over long-sleeved prairie dresses run about playing tag, chasing long, thick pigtails flopping on their shoulders. Boys in Old Order have a Tom Sawyer look about them.

There are no disciplinary problems in Mennonite schools. Their strict upbringing, however, does nothing to dampen their natural exuberance.

The Mennonite parochial schools came into being in 1968 when Old Order Mennonites quietly rebelled against the type of curriculum offered in public schools. Sex education and gymnastics rankled them most. Their opposition intensified when public boards abolished the one-room schools in favor of regional schools to which pupils were conveyed by bus.

The Old Order Mennonites, who travel in horse-drawn buggies, objected to the busing. Officers of the Old Order Mennonite churches decided quick action was needed after children reported that teachers demanded that they fill an gym suits with bloomers and participate in games which included dancing.

The move has meant self-sacrifice to the Old Order Mennonites and Amish. They must continue to pay public school taxes and at the same time maintain their own schools.

Money required for the construction of the parochial schools and teachers' salaries is raised through voluntary contributions which could get taxed. All Mennonites contribute whether they have children in school or not. Families who cannot pay the fee are enabled to send their children to the schools regardless of the number.

Teachers for the most part are young girls who have completed their Grade 8. Some have taken additional training courses. They wear the traditional Mennonite garb—long floor dresses with white prayer caps on their heads and their hair. Their salaries are low in comparison to the teachers in other schools but they are dedicated and teacher strikes are never be a problem in Old Order Mennonite school boards.

Reading, writing and arithmetic is the backbone of the school curriculum and in most cases there is little need for more. The majority of pupils quit school at the age of 14.

Former Prisoner Supports Regeneration

OTTAWA (CP) — For Paul Gregoire, who has spent half a dozen years in Ottawa and half in prison, rehabilitation is out and regeneration is in.

Regeneration is the new approach to prisoner reform sponsored by a group composed mostly of ex-convicts and prisoners, Called Alternatives Youth of Ottawa (AYO), they have been going into Ontario's prisons for the last 10 years, counselling inmates and helping them back into the mainstream of life.

They say they have had their failures but their program now is helping about 400 prisoners, most of them in their early 20s.

The group, with headquarters in Hamilton where they are financed by Hamilton's United Way, recently opened a branch in Ottawa with Gregoire, "one of our successes," as a school speaker.

He was given a three - day pass from the minimum-security Frontenac Institution near Kingston, where he had 20 months to serve for armed robbery. Called in to appear at the opening and tell how he was helped by AY and especially by one of their workers, former convict Lionel Desmarais.

"When Len came to help me he spoke to me in the prison guage," Gregoire said. "He understood the kind of bitterness I was feeling and helped me on my level. Suddenly I gained spiritual values; I could understand why I was in the position I was." With his "regeneration" he got rid of the hatred and bitterness he had before.

The Jupiter Effect Revisited

Copyright 1975, Toronto Sun Syndicate

Two eminently respectable scientists this week said the prophecy that Los Angeles would fall into the sea by 1983 was utilizing to their grim prophecy.

In spite of the wrist-slapping they've received from some of their scientific colleagues, John Gribbin and Stephen Plagemann, both does-paying members of the academic establishment, are unrepentant.

"Los Angeles," they insist with all the matter-of-factness of a foregone conclusion, "probably will be destroyed by October 1983."

Gribbin, editor of the international science journal Nature and an astrophysicist at Britain's Cambridge University, and Plagemann, a NASA (U.S. space agency) researcher, have long been believers that the planet Jupiter will cause catastrophic destruction.

In October, 1982, for the first time in 179 years, Jupiter, the biggest planet in the solar system, the seven other planets and the moon will line up in a virtual straight line on the same side of the sun. "The Jupiter Effect," say Gribbin and Plagemann (in a book of that title), by exerting a tracking effect on the earth's axial spin and causing it to tolerable stresses at earth-quake-prone points on the Earth's surface, could trigger stupendous natural upheavals.

"The astrologers were not wrong after all," allow the two scientists. "The alignment of the planets can affect the behavior of Earth . . .

"The unusual alignment of the planets in 1982 will trigger off earthquake activity on Earth and by that time the Californian San Andreas fault system will be under great strain . . . That fault is now due for a slip greater than the one in 1906" (the date of the San Francisco quake).

Some astronomers have pooh-poohed the doomsaying. Edward Upton of Los Angeles' Griffith Observatory called Gribbin's and Plagemann's claims "fantastical" (and indeed they are) and "a hoax" and wondered if the pair had thought of making a last buck.

Some scientific critics asked where the evidence was that past Jupiter supercon-junctions have accompanied by unusual earthquake activity. The authors have answered this objection by citing Spanish mission records gathered from sparsely populated northern California in 1850.

"Between October 11 and October 21 of that year," they report, "there were as many as six earth shocks a day."

In trying to pinpoint the time of the fateful event the two scientists turn to astrology's rock opera Hair: "When the Moon is in the Seventh House and Jupiter aligns with Mars," and with the other seven planets of the solar system. At that hour,

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

For a few years in the early '70s the laws of contract provided a 2,250-point bonus for a vulnerable grand slam and 1,000 points for one bid when not vulnerable.

So Olga Jurst opened two diamonds and continued to rebid in minimum. West bid all the way to five spades and then fell into her trap and doubled her at six.

Olga didn't redouble. That might have let the cat out of the bag. She just passed, rattled the lead, drew trumps and claimed all the tricks. She didn't get the grand slam bonus, but she did get the small slam and rubber bonus, 940 points below the line, 150 honors and 300 points for the extra trick. A lot better than 300 points for setting seven spades two tricks, doubled.

Ask the Jacobys

An Ohio reader asks us about the late William E. McKenney.

Wrong answers. Bill was a very dear friend. As executive secretary of the ACBL during its formative years he was largely responsible for its great success. He was author of this column until his death in 1949. The McKenney trophy is one of the most valued bridge awards.

(Editor's note: Oswald Jacoby has won 9 bear times.)

To Your Good Health

Calorie Needs Depend on Weight

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thoteson: Would you be good enough to write a discussion as to the maximum number of calories a sewer-line baby requires through infancy?—J.C.M.

The caloric requirement is highly variable. Average would be from 40 to 60 calories per day for each pound of body weight. Most of course, it depends on the child's activity.

I have purposely avoided giving reference to a maximum. If a youngster is gaining weight rapidly, it is getting more than it eat. You have reached a maximum. A fat baby is not necessarily a healthy one, and I wish that idea had never gained popularity.

Dear Dr. Thoteson: What does cervical erosion mean? I was being treated for a knee injury and the doctor did a Papanicolaou smear. He said there was cervical erosion and he told me to douche for a couple of days with a solution of a tablespoon of vinegar in a quart of water.

I am confused. The doctor said I will get rid of the cancer. I'ap test is the mal—Mrs. C.B.

Cervical erosion is one of those medical terms which calls cries with it an unfamiliar sense of foreboding for the patient. It means your doctor found some ulceration of the outer layer of the cervical tissue. This can be the result of trauma associated with childbirth. It also can mean the presence of infection. The Pap smear will tell you all you will need to know. The odds are against the presence of malignancy. It is imprudent to have the erosion treated. Early treatment of such lesions can lead off the possibility of its causing a discharge or becoming more serious.

You are fortunate to have a doctor who routinely offers Pap tests to his patients.

It is common procedure to provide results of such tests by mail.

Dear Dr. Thoteson: My doctor has told me I have had inflammation in my duodenum. X-rays showed this.

I am staying on a bland diet, and my doctor talked as though I would have to stay on this for a very long time. Can I ever eat normally again—for example, a salad?

Also can you explain to me just where the duodenum is?—Mrs. V.V.

The duodenum is located in the central upper abdomen. It is the first portion of the intestine as it leaves the stomach.

Inflammation of this structure doesn't always proceed as a cover formation, so it is well that you are getting such early treatment. You obviously already have had some dyspeptic symptoms to prompt the x-ray investigation and your present treatment.

Time and a strict adherence to your diet should bear results. As soon as your symptoms disappear and you've allowed time for things to settle down a bit, you should be able to resume eating some of the new restricted foods. You should avoid particularly spices, hot condiments, alcohol and tobacco.

Be patient.

Dear Dr. Thoteson: My son has warts on his hands. I asked his pediatrician about them and he said they will go away in time. In the meantime they are contagious. Can you tell me what to do about these warts?—Mrs. A.

I know of no sure method, and I agree with your doctor that in many cases they disappear with time. I hesitate to offer you the following bit of nonsense, because it may be a jinx. It doesn't work. Rub the warts with a raw, shiny quarter each night.

Don't ask me why.

Your loss is your gain.

Georgia Man Arrested Six Times for Distilling

GAINESVILLE, Ga. (CP) — A survivor still by armed federal agents, a few minutes of deft mechanical work and four days of hard labor for George Clinton went down the drain in the red clay hills of northern Georgia.

"Shucks," he said, grinning sheepishly. "It wasn't worth the trouble you all must have gone to, coming up here and all, for a little bitty operation like I got."

Minutes after George's moonshine still was dismantled and he was being whisked off to jail by officers of the federal Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Agency (ATF) for the sixth time in a 13-year career he describes as "devoted to high-quality distilling."

Nobody disputes his distilling ability but the quality of his product might not be universally appreciated. Drinking George's illicit whisky is a little like sipping boiling water through a red pepper with your finger in a light socket. It's electrifying.

The taste may have been part of the explanation for the two dozen or so empty beer cans he had lined up on his kitchen table when the agents came knocking.

"In any case," says Atlanta special agent Bob Lane, "George is part of a breed that is dying very quickly partly because of a 10-year war on moonshiners in the south and mainly because of the price of sugar."

Ten years ago the price of sugar, an essential ingredient in George's whisky, tripled and is in the laurel thickets changed radically. Moonshine which sold a few years earlier for $6 a gallon, shot up to $15 or more and for the same amount, has the retail markup, a consumer could buy government whisky—the bill country phrase for legal booze.

"A decade ago or less," says Lane, "we were seizing 100,000 gallons of moonshine a month and getting about 200 stills in the process. Now in a good month we find less than 10 per cent of that."

There are many factors which have contributed to the success of ATF's operation dry-up, if success, but the sugar price was crucial.

It takes at least 10 pounds of sugar mixed with water and grains to make a gallon of moonshine and the price rise, says a local distiller, Jeremy Craig, "was the end of the industry."

Craig, who says he would still prefer good moonshine if he could get it to regularly-distilled whisky, doesn't mourn its passing. "Time was when there wasn't a family in northern Georgia didn't have at least one still and they took real pride in their work. But for the last 15 or 20 years the quality just got worse and worse."

Lane himself acknowledges he's old time corn liquor—the added white lightning—made in pure copper stills probably was better than bonded whiskies.

But after the Second World War, copper became scarce and the moonshiners turned to sheet metal vats and more recently to discarded car radiators to cool the liquor instead of copper coils.

The result is often a fatal dose of lead poisoning. The most frequent cause was the murder conviction in the late 1950s of Fats Hardy, a Gainesville moonshine king whose poisonous product killed many people in the Atlanta area.

Clyde Dixon, a local banker, says the taste of moonshine has also deteriorated badly because of a widespread belief among its makers that horse manure added to the grain in large amounts hastens fermentation.

"These modern guys will try anything," he says. "We even have them throwing in dead opossums to hurry things along. I've seen a boy get in the vat to drink some of the slop and drown. They just take the hog out and go along. They can't afford to lose all that money."

Regional Library Celebrates 25 Years

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Every road, budget and Prince Albert is 25 years old this year.

The Wapiti Regional Library. Travelling in cars, buses, snowmobiles, on trains and canoes, the library's books have been housed in homes, senior citizens' residences, penal institutions, summer day camps, small-town museums, fire reserves and in women's rest homes all over northern Saskatchewan.

The first of its kind in the province, the library was launched April 8, 1950, and has since grown from three branches in Melfort, St. Louis and Nipawin to 33 stations and the floors were so packed with books covering 34,000 square miles.

The success of what was then the only regional library in Saskatchewan and continues to set precedents in library service to rural communities and institutions.

It all started with a borrowed car from the provincial government; Marion Gilroy, a librarian, two vehicles and about 300,000 books rotating among its branches. It has children's services, audio-visual services, foreign books and a request system which allows every branch to have the chance to get any book in Saskatchewan.

"As basements go, the overhead pipes and chronic leaks and occasional breaks and cat droppings and the floors were so cold that from September to May we were our boots all day," says Karen Lahulk in an article for the Saskatchewan library booklet.

Max Braithwaite, who is writing a book on the library for its 25th anniversary, says such a library could only have happened in conditions make tough people who are willing to co-operate to make such a venture work.

Today, Wapiti has a staff of 110, two vehicles and about 300,000 books rotating among its branches. It has children's services, audio-visual services, foreign books and a request system which allows every branch to have the chance to get any book in Saskatchewan.

Smaller BGH Self Care Unit May Replace Queen's Pilot Project

BY HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The Queen's Self Care Unit will be closed out in 12 months and if the provincial government approves—replaced by a smaller facility at Belleville General Hospital.

Cecil Bateman, BGH board chairman, said today such a proposal will be discussed this week with Ontario health ministry officials.

The ministry has confirmed it will not renew its five-year lease on the converted Queen's Motel property on which it launched the unit as a pilot project in 1971.

The ministry's decision ends a year of speculation by the BGH board of governors. They first discussed the future of the facility in late 1974. At that time it was pointed out terms of the lease demanded a year's notice of termination.

This means the operation at the Queen's will close at the end of 1976, said Mr. Bateman.

The 20-bed unit was designed to ease pressure on hospital bed space by providing a less-costly centre for patients not in need of active hospital care.

Mr. Bateman said the board and administration now is viewing the possibility of installing a self-care operation in the Edith Cavell building — the former nursing school on BGH property.

"Such a project may involve 40-50 beds, said Mr. Bateman.

It will be discussed when Mr. Bateman and BGH administrator Philip Rickard confer on budget guidelines with ministry officials in Toronto Friday.

"We're hoping that we can show them we can operate a self-care unit in that building within budget allocations spent on the (Queen's) location," said Mr. Bateman.

Such a move has received approval in principle. But it is a matter whether they can find funds to do it," he said.

The chairman said the board may not be totally happy with the ministry's decision not to renew the Queen's lease. But the board realizes it has to live within new financial constraints demanded by government spending austerity.

Need for a smaller unit was implied last year in a ministry-commissioned survey of Hastings County health needs. Dr. Peter Gordon, Halifax medical expert, concluded the Queen's operation was too large for the number of admissions. The basic concept would remain valid if it were reduced and moved to hospital property.

Mr. Bateman said he didn't completely support the suggestion that the Queen's unit was not fully utilized.

"It was probably too large a facility that was required for this type of service at Belleville General," he said.

As a pilot project the self-care unit operation was funded by the ministry and administered by BGH.

Consulate Siege

Dutch Premier Won't Concede

AMSTERDAM (AP) — Premier Joop den Uyl says the Dutch government will wait out the Moluccan nationalists holding 25 hostages in the Indonesian consulate just as it did the gunmen who held 24 persons captive on a train for 12 days.

Den Uyl said he "hopes for an early end" to the consulate siege, which ended its 11th day today. But he said the government did not yield to the political demands made by the six Moluccans on the train and will not yield to those at the consulate.

The six young men who hijacked the train near Beilen, 90 miles north of Amsterdam, on Dec. 2 surrendered at noon Sunday after the temperature aboard the unheated train dropped to six below Celsius the night before.

It was thought likely that the young men would be charged with murder because they killed the train engineer and two of the passengers. A seventh hijacker who was taken to hospital after an explosion Dec. 5 has already been charged with murder.

Three of the hostages were carried from the train on stretchers, but all were reported in "fair to good" condition. They included 17 men and seven women and ranged in age from a 16-year-old boy to a woman of 72.

Both groups of South Moluccans demanded that the Dutch government give active support to their campaign for independence for their native islands from Indonesia, the pre-war Dutch East Indies.

Leaders of the South Moluccan community in the Netherlands who negotiated with the train hijackers said that they persuaded them they could continue their struggle for independence peacefully. But Justice Minister Dries van Agt said: "The terrorists saw it was useless to go on. They realized we were not prepared to make one single concession."

Commons Continues Debate Over Anti-inflation Laws

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament appears to be heading into the Christmas season with some of the toughest debate of the session.

With only days to go before the government-suggested Friday date for Christmas adjournment, MPs will be embroiled in the nub of the Liberal anti-inflation program.

They also will fire the last shots in the Commons on the Time-Reader's Digest battle.

In the latter case, the government had not decided last week whether to use closure to limit debate on the bill to ban or to allow the opposition during recess reading.

Tuesday, the government will announce a program of spending cuts.

Sources close to the cabinet said Friday Finance Minister Donald Macdonald went to cabinet last week with proposals to reduce spending in the next fiscal year by $1.5 billion.

The sources said the proposed cuts were debated in the cabinet committee Tuesday and in full cabinet Thursday.

After the stock market close Thursday, the government will announce the regulations tied to the anti-inflation legislation that was to become law Monday.

The regulations, which will control the operations of the anti-inflation board, are expected to be tabled in the Commons

Free Trip Surprise For City Carpet Dealer

In the dead of winter, John Wilson of Robert Michaud Ltd. and his wife Jay will be sunning in Hawaii.

The couple will fly to Hawaii in late February, the result of a draw in which Mr. Wilson's son's name was selected. He says he is not quite sure how his name was even entered, but he's not complaining his good fortune.

The 3-expenses-paid two-week vacation the says he plans to take another week comes courtesy of Montanto Textiles of Rexdale, Ont., the manufacturer of Antlas (TM).

And the synthetic fibre, used by several carpet and broadloom producers, is one of the wool-like products used in most carpets today.

Besides, he says, few people are willing to pay at least the 3-square yard for wool carpet, compared to a $12 to $14-square-yard range for equivalent quality synthetic fibre carpet.

Suspect Held In Theft

SHANNONVILLE — Leland Herbert Diamond, 21, of no fixed address and a former Belleville area resident, is to appear in Belleville provincial court at 11.30 a.m. today for a bail hearing on a charge of break, enter and theft.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville say the charge resulted from an incident at Cook Motors in Shannonville early Sunday during which about $100 in cash and a quantity of cigarettes were stolen.

Police say owner Asa Cook of Shannonville went to his establishment at about 1.30 a.m. and observed a man flee from the garage.

A suspect was apprehended shortly afterward and some of the missing property was recovered, police add.

Former City Mayor Dead at Age 69

A. McLean (Mac) Haig, O.B.E., former alderman and three times mayor of Belleville, died suddenly Sunday at his Trent Rd. home. He was 69.

A memorial service for Mr. Haig will be held in the chapel of Bridge St. United Church Tuesday, Dec. 16 at 2 p.m. Rev. George Ward will conduct the service.

Commonly known as Mac, Mr. Haig was active in civic affairs and is credited with guiding Belleville out of difficult financial straits during his second term as mayor.

Mr. Haig, after serving for many years as an alderman, first took the mayor's chair in 1952. He returned through acclamation in 1960 to reorganize city finances after an inquiry into the city's treasury department and the world championship McFarland Hockey team. He remained mayor for a third one-year term during 1963-64.

Active in many areas of civic endeavour he ran in federal election campaigns in 1940 and 1945 as a Liberal candidate but lost both bids by narrow margins.

A retired Group Captain with the Royal Canadian Air Force, he later studied at Queen's University and Osgoode Hall in Toronto, earning a doctorate in law. He was also made a member of the Order of the British Empire.

In Belleville, he served as president for several organizations including the Canadian Cancer Society, Chamber of Commerce and the Belleville Rotary Club. He also served on the Belleville General Hospital board of governors.

A resident of Belleville for 40 years, he was born in Campbellford, son of the late Dr. and Mrs. Andrew Haig. He was predeceased by a brother John.

Surviving are his wife, the former Mary Roberts, children Trudi Bunting, Christie Cox, Andy and Archie, grandsons James Douglas and Alex McLean Bunting.

He is also survived by his aunt, Mrs. Herbert Clark.

Mr. Haig's body has been donated to Queen's University in Kingston for research.

He said damage was estimated at $3,000 to the car.

Thieves Foiled

Unknown intruders were unsuccessful in attempting entry when they broke into Deacon Brothers Sportswear Ltd. at 121 East Dundas St. in Belleville at 2.37 p.m. Saturday.

Holiday Displays Popular

Glanmore House curator Marion Lewis says there was a surge of public interest in the traditional decorations used at the Hastings County museum last week as part of a week of special Christmas events.

All kinds of people, said Mr. Lewis Sunday, asked questions about the decorations, consisting of cedar wreaths, garlands and pomanders.

"This year we had to print the guides to make sure they knew how to make them," he said.

In the two previous years the special week-long program was held, interest in the decorations at the Victorian mansion was not as great, he said.

The curator added he suspected that this year interest was in line with current popularity in crafts and homemade items.

Yule decorations were made by Hastings County Historical Society volunteers and students from Prince of Wales Elementary School.

They hung in the museum — where a 40-foot cedar garland encircled the main staircase banister — during the past week mini-concerts, puppet shows, and live-theatre performance took place.

But despite the interest, Mr. Lewis said, he does not know whether an formal session on making of Christmas decorations will be held next year.

He said he did not want to compete with the Belleville Garden Club, which normally schedules such sessions around Christmas.

Ice Challenges Motorists

Icy road conditions Saturday led to accidents throughout the Quinte area including this three-car mishap on Redneersville Road.

Icy conditions affected driving in Belleville from about 5 p.m. Saturday to about 3 a.m. Sunday. Belleville police investigated 14 accidents in the city during the period and two for Belleville OPP. Seventeen accidents were investigated by Belleville OPP. Bancroft, also affected by icy road conditions, was accident-free during the period. (Photo by Glenn Ross)

Freezing Rain Turns Quinte Roads Into Skating Rink

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

The traffic situation in the Quinte area turned into a state of confusion Saturday as unwary afternoon shoppers and rush hour motorists found themselves in the middle of freezing rain.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville say the rain began shortly before 3 p.m. and driving conditions remained hazardous until about 3 a.m. Sunday when rising temperatures kept ice on roads to a minimum.

The Belleville detachment investigated 17 minor traffic accidents during the period, including nine in the first half hour as motorists apparently drove into the storm at normal speeds.

Belleville police say they investigated 14 minor accidents, plus two for the provincial police who had more accidents than none.

In Prince Edward County, the rain was responsible for two serious accidents in which eight people were injured.

OPP in Brighton also blamed slippery roads in a truck-bus collision on Highway 401. There were no serious injuries.

However, the situation was completely opposite in the northern end of Hastings County where, although road conditions were similar, Ontario Provincial Police at Bancroft did not have to investigate one accident.

"People must have stayed off the road," remarked one provincial police corporal. "I was working at three o'clock when it started to get bad and I thought, 'I won't be getting home for a while' but nothing happened."

Car, Horse Collide

THOMASBURG — Dense fog early today was responsible for a car-horse collision on Concession 3-4 of Hungerford Township, three miles east of Highway 37 past Vanderwater Park.

Ontario Provincial Police at Madoc say a 1971-model Toyota, driven by Emma Cronkwright, 36, of RR 1, Thomasburg, was westbound when it collided with a horse owned by Don Hill of Toronto who has a farm in the area.

Police say the horse, which wandered onto the road, suffered serious injury to its right hind leg and was to be treated by a veterinarian today.

One Hurt In Crash

REDNERSVILLE — An Ameliasburgh area woman received cuts and bruises Saturday afternoon in a three-car collision on Redneersville Rd. about a tenth of a mile east of the junction of Prince Edward County Rd. 23.

Injured was Alicia Crowe, 22, of RR 1 Ameliasburgh passenger in a car driven by Roy Crowe, 22 also of RR 1 Ameliasburgh.

Drivers of the other two vehicles, Eric Caulfield, 48, of Carrying Place and Morley Allen, 43, 55 Craig St., Belleville were unhurt.

A spokesman for the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police said the collision occurred after Caulfield vehicle slopped on the road because of ice condition. Police estimate total damage at $800.

Driver Charged

TRENTON — A 23-year-old Trenton man has been charged with impaired driving after the automobile he was driving was in collision with a parked car, causing $1,200 damage, police Friday night, Trenton Police said.

Paul McFarlane, 231 West Street Trenton, was treated and released from Trenton Memorial Hospital, after the car he was driving 'went out of control while travelling south on Mercers Street and was in collision with a parked car owned by Earl Martin, 215 Trenton.

Damage to the Martin vehicle was estimated at $1,200. Police estimated there was $300 damage to the front end of the McFarland automobile.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following calls for assistance in the 48-hour period ending at 8 a.m. today:

Saturday, 10.11 a.m. — false, please hook over — nothing caught fire at Royal Canadian Legion on Pinnacle St. No damage.

Sunday, 11.56 p.m. — faulty alarm at Quinte Hotel on Pinnacle St.

Monday, 4.38 a.m. — motor on sump pump at 38 Maple Dr. burnt out. Small amount of smoke damage.

Fitting End

The expression on this youngster's face exemplifies the feeling of about 175 children who enjoyed a fitting end to a Sunday party by meeting Santa Claus. The children are offspring of members of the Belleville General Hospital Staff Association which held the party at Centennial Secondary School on Palmer Rd. in Belleville.

Cash Taken

Unknown thieves escaped with $130 in cash after they broke into Dowe's Gulf Service at 198 Dundas St. in Belleville sometime between noon Sunday and 6:40 a.m. today.

Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said today entry was gained by twisting the cylinder out of a door lock and replacing it after opening.

Gross Sales About Same as French GNP

Multinationals: GM's Net Profit in 1972 Was Greater Than GNP of Ireland

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

How powerful are the multinational corporations? The question is now endemic and the answers are endless.

The usual parallel is to relate the gross national product of the world's middle powers, for example, Norway, Sweden, Holland, Switzerland and some of the more aggressive emerging nations, Brazil, Mexico and Venezuela to the annual sales figures of large multi-national corporations.

That kind of thing produces some devastating comparative figures what with General Motors net profit in 1972 being greater than the gross national product of Ireland and its gross sales about the same as the French gross national product that year.

Author Lester Brown in his 1973 book on the international corporation called World Without Borders, says that among the world's 100 largest entities, nations and multinations, 39 are nation states and 61 are multi-national corporations.

Nor are we talking solely about American-owned firms. There are many German, Japanese and British-based international concerns and a few Belgian, Canadian and Dutch which can also be included in this new numbers game.

Brascan Limited, the Toronto-based holding company for Brazilian Light and Power, is the second largest foreign-owned company in Brazil's giant economy.

It dominates the utilities of many of Brazil's largest cities as well as being a majority or minority owner of Brazilian industries in food processing, railway transport equipment manufacturing and investment concerns.

And yet Brascan Limited with interests in excess of $1 billion is not known to be a political power behind the government in Brazil.

We have to look at the truly bad boys of international business, like T.T. and T. or Gulf Oil to see the way in which multinational concerns try and influence events in other nations.

The former concern was involved in the domestic politics of Chile both to try and prevent the election of the late Marxist president Salvador Allende and then to help get the military rulers after that event took place in late 1970.

Gulf Oil's payoffs, along with those of Lockheed Aircraft, are front page news right now in the U.S. press and are related to another influential activity of financially influential multi-national concerns, to pay off those who will make business easier for them in given foreign countries.

On the other hand, even the most influential of multi-national corporations can live in the shadow and fear of total nationalization in countries whose tax system or gross national product are far less than the earnings of a large international concern.

Take the international copper companies which were seized by the state in the major copper-producing nations Chile, Zaire and Zambia.

Or take the giants of the giants, the oil companies themselves which have been nationalized in the world's major oil-producing nations, Libya, Iran, Saudi-Arabia, Kuwait and a few days ago by the Marxist leaning socialist regime in Iraq.

Whither Controls?

The federal cabinet has allowed the government wage offer to the postal workers to stand. To have determined otherwise would have been as politically dangerous as it would have been unacceptable.

Even the general public recognizes that to disallow the postal workers their raise likely would have led to a further stoppage and even turmoil. In short it would have been counter-productive.

But where does this leave the Anti-Inflation Board, which after all was merely doing its duty given the mandate it had to curb rising demands by the public sector?

As of now, the Government's good (or bad?) intentions are threatening to come unstuck, and with overtones of farce. Such are the contradictions, confusion, babel of tongues, and the cynicism surrounding their policy.

"The Cabinet can secondguess us anytime it wants to," says Jean-Luc Pepin, who heads the anti-inflation program. He was referring to the board's decision to reject the terms under which the postal strike was ended.

As it happened the Cabinet did just that — and everywhere workers and professional people who reject the idea of controls sense that things may be going wrong, that the program won't work.

The contradictions of it are reflected locally. Thus we have Hastings county council on the one hand going along with Ottawa's guidelines, supporting a letter to this effect from provincial treasurer Darcy McKeough, while on the other the county board of education has voted itself a 25% increase in trustees' monthly salary to $350.

So it goes. All along the line there will be further politicking and jockeying for further favour — with evidence of some inequality here or a falling behind the others, there.

It's a prickly time for the marketplace and frustration all round. It will take all the Government's persuasion and skill to reconcile this program of economic controls with the doubts and antipathy of a restless public.

Americans Want Work

However "odious" it may be to indulge in comparisons, it can be revealing.

Consider the inflationary cycle. In the United States it is about half the 17 per cent or so it is running at in Canada. Greed appears to be more rampant in Canada than across the border. Our top bureaucrats make more than their counterparts in the United States.

And while everyone from postal workers to teachers and doctors has his hand out here, asking incessantly for more, out-of-work Americans are trying desperately to find jobs.

Several interviewed in the course of the still-lingering recession in the United States, have stressed the demoralizing effect of being unemployed. They have said it has struck at their manliness, being unable to support themselves and their families.

It's not the sort of talk heard in Canada these days. And while it is acknowledged prices and government spending must be curbed as much as salaries and wages, the general attitude of the work force is still geared to disruption of national purpose on the one hand and grabbing from the system as much as it can on the other.

It's a pretty poor attitude at that.

Fewer Smokers?

An official of the anti-smoking lobby — and more power to them — was heard to say on television recently that their campaign seemed at last to be taking effect.

This may just be the case. There was a time when practically every other youngster had a cigarette in his — or her (since it anything girls have been smoking more) hand. And of course they still indulge, over coffee or a beer, but casual observation of late suggests that maybe they are tapering off, smoking less or not at all.

If a person of whatever age feels he has something worthwhile to live for, if life itself is the most treasured prize, then it is this kind of thinking which suggests to the individual that smoking is a costly indulgence. And in more ways than one.

Author's Book Tells How to Survive in the Marketplace

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

The marketplace is an economic jungle that can destroy you unless you know the rules of survival.

But if you learn the rules, and adapt them for your own use, you can flourish in that jungle.

That's the philosophy of Sylvia Porter of New York, as summed up in her recently published Money Book (Doubleday, 1,185 pages, $18.95).

Consumers today need more help than ever before. Except for those in strongly organized groups, the past few years have brought a steady attrition of investments, liquid assets and even living standards.

Yet during this time, prices were fairly stable, the economy was growing strongly, and unemployment was minimal.

That's all changed now, and the typical consumer is feeling the pinch as never before.

To protect yourself against rising costs, Sylvia Porter, you must:

—Substitute items that have not gone up, for those that are now inexpensive, whenever possible.

—Shop for less expensive versions of increasingly costly goods and services.

—Shop for the best possible deal if you must have an item that's becoming more expensive.

—Eliminate items that are of no real value, and may even harm you.

As for example, food costs have increased sharply in the past two years, especially the price of meat.

So, substitute. If you make a mistake, you won't be stuck with it for long; you can profit from your error the next time you shop.

The author suggests barbaricized chuck steaks and roasts: short ribs, boil shank, brisket and short loin for barbecues; lamb chops cut from the lower rather than rib or loin chops; blade and arm chuck steaks; flank steak, sirloin tip and bottom round steaks rather than tender and easily to carve.

What could be eliminated from the food budget? Snacks, says the author, are "among the most expensive food extras you can buy," and can easily add 10 per cent to the weekly food bill.

Everybody has heard that it's unwise to shop for food on an empty stomach. But did you know that, according to surveys cited by the author, people who shop after meals spend up to 17 per cent less than those who shop hungry?

Many of the same principles apply to the clothing budget as well. Shoppers should fight the temptation to buy clothes on impulse, says the author.

The best time to buy clothes is at off-season sales. (The post-Christmas bargains are just around the corner). But learn to resist bargain prices if you don't need the garment. Buy. One extended section of Sylvia Porter's Money Book deals with one of the most treacherous areas of the jungle — place jungle—franchising, "rack rentals," vending machines, phoney training courses, pyramid schemes, distributorships and work-at-home swindles.

Promoters are constantly coming up with new "business opportunities" to lure the unsophisticated, the starry-eyed, victims eager to get rich quickly.

Much of this has been said before, by others as well as by Sylvia Porter herself. But human nature is such that the advice bears endless repeating.

"What has gone before I served," says the author, "if you refuse to heed the warnings?"

A Budget Defeat in March Could Mean a May Election

By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau

Thomson News Service

TORONTO — When will the election be?

Not for an intense session. With the government in a minority practically every moment is exciting.

It is a constant prize fight.

But overwhelming it all, or underlying it all is the one big question—when will the election be?

This is a question obviously with so ready answer.

Anything could happen at any time to precipitate a vote.

But, barring the extraordinary, the most likely time for an election would appear to be next May.

Now of the three parties particularly wants an election at this point.

And the government has to regrapple its party machine.

All three, as a consequence, have been playing it close to the vest.

This winter, however, like it or not, the house will have to face a vote which will be crucial.

When the new session the government will have to produce a throne speech covering a full legislative program.

After some weeks behind will compulsorily be voted on.

And even if they want to, it will probably be impossible for the opposition parties to avoid defeating the government.

And the throne speech motion is an automatic confidence vote.

If the government is defeated on it, there is no alternative but to go to the country.

The only real question would seem to be the timing of the vote.

And this will probably come in March.

Traditionally the throne speech debate winds up just before the budget is to be presented.

The budget comes down before the end of the fiscal year, March 31.

Medical Men in a Quandary

Editor,
The Intelligencer!

I am writing in reply to the article "Freeze on Hospital Budgets".

There are basically three ways for any nation to bring the best health possible to all its citizens (assuming that any enlightened nation feels this is one of its first priorities). The first and most important priority is nutritionally adequate food and most would agree that all Canadians can have this if they wish.

The Second most important priority is adequate shelter and sanitation facilities. In Canada, this has been available to most of us for so long that we tend to take it for granted (sewage disposal, purification of water, modern plumbing, heating, etc.).

If these two requirements available then the third most important priority can be brought into play and that is a health care system capable of treating diseases of all the citizens, despite their financial resources.

Such a system has been available in Canada for over a decade now and we feel we are not indeed very fortunate to have this service available, ask any American.

However, such a health system through its very nature can threaten the financial stability of a nation even as rich as Canada. What the Canadian and Ontario Government is now starting to do is forcing us, as physicians, to start making judgements about the quality of the health care we deliver to patients and who shall receive it. What are we going to do if the patient requires a costly treatment at our hospital that costs two years worth of our budget will be the same as the previous year. Who are we going to exclude from admission to our hospital, the senile, the incurably ill, the people with self-inflicted disease (alcoholism, drug addicts, the people who don't wear seat belts, motorcycle riders, the people requiring expensive psychiatric treatments, kidneys, heart surgery, neurosurgery, etc.)? Do you also, at the same time, publicly call for decrease in cleaning and maintenance services in our hospital; a decrease in Social Services, (geriatrics, psychologists, home care nurses, etc.), a decrease in nursing care, a decrease in rehabilitation, etc.?

All these decisions are about to be forced upon us as physicians and all have far reaching social, moral and legal implications.

I feel, as a concerned and caring physician, that these are questions we should not be required to answer on our own. Only a whole nation and its representatives should make such decisions.

Please, fellow Canadians, give us guidance.

Please, my government, give me and all physicians guidance.

In an interesting debate on TV recently the question came up, is Zionism a religion or is it a Jewish political movement.

It seems that Zionism is in reality part of the fulfillment of prophecy. There are several references in both old and New Testament but I will quote one.

"I will gather you from the people and assemble you out of the countries where you have been scattered and I will give you the land of Israel." Ezekiel 11:17.

Old-fashion Christmas

The Brighton Santa Claus parade Saturday was filled with more than 40 floats built by area people including contributions from local schools, service clubs, and businesses. Here, Tamara Keyes, foreground, and her fellow pupils from the Spring Valley Public School present their image of what Christmas was like in the village in the year 1875, one hundred years ago.

Freezing Rain Doesn't Stop Parade

BRIGHTON — Despite freezing rain, Saturday more than 1,000 area residents lined the streets here to see Santa Claus and his friends.

In a parade filled with clowns of all shapes, from all over the province, children waved and applauded until Santa came by, dispensing candies to the young at heart.

Standing in the freezing rain, some for as long as 1½ hours, the stout-hearted were entertained by pipe bands from Cobourg, Oshawa and the Trenton Citizens Marching Band.

More than 40 floats were entered in this year's Christmas parade, including representatives from various civic, and school groups, as well as local business. Miniature cars, overflowing with clowns cleared along the parade route.

Representatives of the Ontario Provincial Police and Brighton and Murray Fire departments drove along thrilling the children with blasts from fire horns and Keystone Kop antics rarely seen in the village.

Slippery Roads Blamed In Two Accidents

TRENTON — Freezing rain caused two separate accidents in Trenton, Saturday, sending three people to hospital and causing an estimate $2,100 damage, town police reported.

A two-vehicle accident at 8.30 p.m. on Dufferin Street sent three people to hospital, who were treated and released, and caused $1,300 damage. Police reported a vehicle owned by Donald Andrus, Newmarket, Ontario was attempting to make a turn onto Carrying Place Road when it was in collision with a car driven by Elwood Clarke, Rit 3 Carrying Place.

In a separate incident, a two-vehicle accident on West Street caused an estimated $800 damage, but no injuries. A southbound car driven by John Willis, Belleville, was in collision with a northbound auto driven by Michael Vickers. Police also attributed this accident to the freezing rain.

Residents Endorse Seat Belt Use

PICTON — Prince Edward County residents say they endorse the use of seat belts and they wear them, at least some of the time.

David Pile, a flying instructor with Prince Edward Flying Club, says he "always wears them, but never used to".

Mr. Pile said his decision to always wear seat belts came as a result of a minor airplane accident some years ago.

"We were taking off one night and just as we were getting airborn, the engine quit. We hit a snowbank and landed upside down and there we hung from our seat belts like bats. It was then I realized their value in a car."

One garage owner interviewed says the new type of belt will probably encourage more people to wear seat belts who formerly declined because of the "fastened in feeling".

The new type of belt enables the driver to have complete freedom of movement while driving, but should an abrupt change in vehicle motion occur, an automatic sensing device, located under the driver's seat, will lock up both lap and shoulder belts.

Clifford Kerr of RR 2 Picton, a driver for Triad Trucking, says he usually wears seat belts during lengthy trips but adds he is unpocked as to their advantage.

"There are just so many pros and cons as to whether they can save lives."

Ted Wallwork of Northport, an employee of Mead Johnson Canada in Belleville, drives 22 miles to work every day.

"I usually wear them," he says.

Seven Injured In Two-car Crash

PICTON — A two-car collision on Highway 49 north of the H. J. McFarland Memorial Home Saturday afternoon sent seven persons to hospital.

Injured were Robert Finlay Bolton, 44, of RR 2 Picton, driver of one of the cars, his son Clifford, 13, and Grant, 17, George Economou, 32, of Kinloche, driver of the second vehicle, and his passengers, Toula Economou 30, of Kinloche, Demetre Dimitiagen, 25, of Brantford and Chris Economou, 18.

Police said today that Chris Economou, Clifford and Grant Bolton were treated for minor cuts and bruises while the other accident victims were admitted to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital with fractures.

The collision occurred when a southbound vehicle, driven by Robert Bolton, was in collision with a northbound car driven by George Economou.

Damage to the Bolton vehicle was estimated at $700 while damage to the Economou vehicle was set at $1,000 in the collision which occurred shortly before 3.30 p.m.

Soviet Gas Line Now Under Way

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Building has begun on a pipeline of nearly 2,000 miles to carry natural gas from the Soviet Union to six East European countries.

Five countries—East Germany, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland and Bulgaria—helping build the pipeline and the sixth, Romania, is providing finance and gas - processing equipment.

Once the project is completed—it is due to be fully operational in 1980—each country will receive deliveries of gas in proportion to money and effort invested.

Now construction is under way, the Soviet press is presenting its progress as smooth and concerted.

But there have been signs of friction, particularly over the large contingents of labor some of the other countries were meant to provide.

Romania, from the start apparently balked at committing any of its already sparse work force, and earlier this year Czechoslovakia said it was asking the Soviet Union to do the actual pipe-laying along its section.

Hungary put in a similar request, saying it lacked the technology and machinery to handle the type of pipe the Russians wanted to use and now, according to press reports in those countries, both nations will be balked at committing manpower, the Soviet press has been silent on the matter.

Bulgaria, which was to provide the pipe, has run into difficulties and has had some of its deliveries cancelled.

Poland, which was to provide the pipe-laying machinery, has been silent on the matter.

Vietnamese Welcome U.S. Oil Exploration

SINGAPORE (Reuter) — Seven months after the fall of Saigon, the Vietnamese are reopening their doors to American oil exploration companies.

One of the few places where Americans can make direct contact with the Vietnamese authorities is at the Hanoi trade mission in Singapore.

I was speaking with the head of the mission, Le Van Mao, at his luxurious white-painted villa in the eastern suburbs of Singapore when a taxi drove up and two men came to the front door.

Man went to meet them, spoke briefly to the two and then returned to his large marble-floored lounge with two letters the men had handed to him.

"They were Americans," Man said. "They want to return my country to speak for oil again."

Man, chief representative in Singapore of Hanoi's national import-export corporation, said U.S. companies are welcome to resume offshore operations in Vietnam.

But he stressed that contracts made in South Vietnam with the former regime of President Nguyen Van Thieu are illegal and fresh applications have to be made.

"If they would like to return to make a contribution in oil exploration and to co-operate with the Vietnamese people, they (the Americans) can come," Man said.

The Hanoi official has been working quietly here to build up trade again between Vietnam and the outside world.

Rice from South Vietnam has already begun flowing to Singapore.

The Singapore government is believed to be keen to take part in the reconstruction of Vietnam and the Singapore Chamber of Commerce has asked the Vietnamese if it can send a delegation to Hanoi and Saigon.

Petroleum exports from Singapore made up 27 per cent of the total two-way trade with the deposed Thieu government.

Oil and gas sales to South Vietnam in 1974 and the first four months of this year were worth $478 million.

This market disappeared when the Communists took control of Saigon and the loss has been a blow to Singapore's big refinery industry.

Man believes that Singapore has the potential to supply not only petroleum products but much of the machinery and other capital goods required for Vietnam's reconstruction, while Singapore would become more imports of Vietnamese agricul-

Canada's Contribution High Towards Olympics

MONTREAL (CP) — The promoters of corporate or business programs for the financial support of the 1976 Montreal Olympics say record of Canadian and foreign participation is impressive.

Goods, services, licensing fees and contributions—ranging out front vitamins to an soda fleet and from soft drinks to hard cash—are estimated to reach a value of $30 million.

"Canadians are basically determined that the Olympics must be a success—there's no doubt in my mind about that," says John C. O'Brien, the Canadian navy admiral who came out of retirement a year ago to help make the Games "go".

Admiral O'Brien, one-time commander of Canadian Maritime Forces and now director-general of revenue for the Olympics organizing committee, conceded in an interview Wednesday that response varies in the Canadian regions.

Promoters also say reaction varies regionally to the ups and downs of Olympic news from Montreal.

Admiral O'Brien, 57, said he is convinced citizens generally regard the Olympics as a "Canadian thing" rather than a Montreal thing.

"I believe the feeling is that the Games have been spoken for, they must go on and they must be good," said the admiral.

The Olympics organizing committee remains responsible for staging and running the Games despite its recent takeover by the Quebec government of some construction responsibilities from the City of Montreal.

Admiral O'Brien emphasized that funds raised through the corporate plan would go solely to support the committee's activities and not be sidetracked for construction of facilities desired eventually to become part of Montreal's fixed assets.

Amid the sometimes tumultuous controversy surrounding the Olympics, small but influential groups have been campaigning quietly for business participation in various parts of Canada. The theory is that a corporation's participation spreads Olympic spirit among employees.

Business Flocks to Saudi Arabia

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (Reuter) — For Western merchants who fly in to this desert kingdom on every plane, the prizes to be won are vast.

Luring them is the vision of the $40-billion surplus from Saudi Arabian oil revenues and wanting to be spent on transforming this country of an estimated six million people into a modern industrial nation.

If the salesmen have their way, complete new towns will rise in the Arabian desert and prefabricated harbors will provide instant new ports on the bare Red Sea.

These and a host of other projects are being urged on the noble but noncommittal princes who run Saudi Arabia as the most frantic trade rush of the decade gathers pace.

In the present state of the trade scramble, Americans are far and away in the lead with West Germans and the Japanese next. Some way behind come the British while the South Koreans are moving up fast.

For foreign businessmen, selling in Saudi Arabia is fraught with frustrations. Gaining an audience to make a sales presentation can be difficult enough. But the subsequent wait for a decision often stretches the nerves of even the most buoyant sales representative.

The lobbies of the overcrowded hotels are filled with hollow foreigners reading paperback after paperback and not daring to leave the building in case that telephone call, delayed days or weeks ago, might suddenly come through.

In another country, the businessman might find some solace at the bar. But in Saudi Arabia Islamic law is followed in every aspect of life and alcohol is totally prohibited. So are most other Western delights.

At first, Westerners often become irritated at the frequency with which appointments are materialize. But they soon find it wiser to take a more philosophical view.

Quinte Cuisine

One of Denise Grant's favorite recipes come from her mother in Chicoutimi, Quebec. It's Saguenay Tortiere, a rich and elegant variation on the traditional French-Canadian dish served during the Christmas season. Mrs. Grant, who is a volunteer helper at the Toy Lending Library, moved to Belleville a year ago with her husband Dick and three children, Joann, Diane and Glenn.

Saguenay Tortiere

LARD PASTRY

one and one-third lb. lard two-thirds cup boiling water five cups flour
1½ tsp. salt

Add water to the lard, and beat until creamy. Stir in flour and salt, using a fork. Chill before using.

FILLING

1½ lb. stewing beef
1½ lb. shoulder pork
1½ lb. stewing veal
one or two chicken breasts
two medium onions, chopped four lbs. potatoes salt and pepper
boiling water

Trim excess fat from the meat. Have cut into small cubes, about one inch by one inch.

Combine all the meat and the onions. Mix well, then cover and refrigerate overnight.

The next day, peel and cut potatoes in half-inch cubes. Add the potatoes to the meat mixture and then add salt (about five tsp.) and pepper (about ½ tsp.). Mix well.

Line the bottom and sides of a heavy lidded casserole or Dutch oven (Mrs. Grant uses a roasting pan) with the lard pastry, sealing the sides to the bottom. Pile in the meat mixture.

Add boiling water to the meat just until you can see it, but not to cover the contents.

Roll pastry for the top of the pie, and seal it well around the edges. Cut a large vent in the top.

Put a lid on and bake the tortiere four to five hours at 225 degrees. Remove the lid for at least half an hour at the end of the time, to brown the crust.

This tortiere, served with pickled beets, tomatoes and salad, makes a filling meal for 10 to 12 people. It is delicious heated up and served the next day, says Mrs. Grant, who adds that game, such as rabbit or moose, may be used in the recipe if available.

Lisa Gassenbeck's pomander.

Traditional Giving: Orange-clove Pomander

Lisa Gassenbeck has been making pomanders to give away and to decorate her family's home since she was seven years old.

Now nearly 14, she's continuing the tradition this year by preparing several for gifts for teachers and friends.

The pomander is a clove studded orange, rolled in cinnamon, and hung by one of variety of plain or fancy hanging devices.

"It helps if you know character," Lisa admits, but adds that any kind of hanger can be made for the pomander. Particularly successful devices have included ribbons, velvet ribbon topped with lace, macramed shiny rattail cord and the like.

She begins each year with small thick skinned oranges. "These have been made since pioneer days when they often gave them as gifts," she says, "but the one thing they didn't use was oranges. They were too expensive."

Instead, apples were used, hence, the name pomander.

Lisa, who attends Bayside School, begins each pomander at the stem end, piercing the centre with a pencil. She then inserts a clove and begins making ever-widening circles with the pencil and inserting cloves until the whole orange is well studded.

A $1.59 bag of cloves will make three pomanders. The oranges cost about five cents each.

When the orange is well studded, set it aside for about two weeks so that it can dehydrate.

"They'll shrink quite a bit and grow lighter but they'll never rot," Lisa points out.

When it has shrunk, simply roll the pomander in cinnamon and prepare any kind of hanging device.

Lisa recommends keeping a couple for yourself for clients and drawers and adds that the very first ones she made are still fragrant.

Pencil makes spaces for cloves.

Day Care Centres Would Screen Kids

Avid interest in the new early childhood screening program adopted by the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit this year has extended to day care centres, says Olga Wallace, health unit director of nursing.

Miss Wallace told the counties board of health meeting here Wednesday day care centre officials have approached the health unit expressing interest in introducing the program in Quinte area centres.

The program is designed to check a child's physical condition, motor ability, level of balance and ability to follow simple directions to aid in reducing the trauma for a child entering school, she explained.

Miss Wallace gave board members a concrete idea of the program's content by showing slides of a typical child being screened by a public health nurse with a parent present.

She said hearing and vision are checked, urine sampled and immunization status determined as part of the program.

"There is no injunction in any way on whether the child has failed or succeeded," she emphasized.

Books By And About Women

SANYA: MY LIFE WITH ALEXANDER SOLZHENITSYN

By Madame Reshetovskaya

Madame Reshetovskaya was born in Russia at Novocerkarst in 1919. Her mother was a lawyer; her father, a jurist fled from Russia during the Civil War. She and Sanya (the nickname she gave Solzhenitsyn) met while children attending the same school. Later, as a student at the University of Moscow, this beautiful young Cossack girl and Sanya married a few years later.

This is a memoir of the life they shared, the intimate story of a marriage that survived a devastating war, secrets, and interrogation. Here, also, is felt the appalling loneliness and anxiety of years of imprisonment.

More deeply, it is the compassionate study of a troubled genius, showing how he developed his first and first effect of his triumphs and failures which caused him much turmoil.

Environment Blamed

LONDON (CP) — The environment in factories, offices and kitchens is to blame for many of the severe backaches suffered by several thousand people in the United Kingdom, says a report by the British Consumers' Association. It suggested that redesigning the working environment would eliminate much postural strain leading to backache.

Ann Landers

Sore Loser Throws a Tantrum and the Game

Dear Ann Landers: My problem is my husband. He's a great father, a good provider, a lovely guy, but a sore loser.

Whenever we play backgammon and I win, Pat throws the board across the room and starts a fight.

He accuses me of trying to humiliate him, says I must have cheated because he is the superior player and should beat me every time.

I hate to give up playing backgammon with Pat just because he's a screbed. It's great fun after the children are asleep to sit down to this fascinating game. But Pat's behavior is so despicable when he loses I don't know what to do. Any suggestions.—Anxious Partner in Glendale Heights

Dear Pizzi: Yeah, do something else—anything—but don't play backgammon with the sore loser. Obviously he can't stand losing to you. If you're smart you'll tip up those tight games to protect something more important. Your marriage.

Dear Ann Landers: You are not a doctor and you don't pretend to know all the answers. Yet you were the one who identified my husband's medical problem after we had gone from doctor to doctor for 15 years.

Recently, I wrote to you about Jim falling asleep during meals and games, he caught even at the dinner table. It used to worry me such that he might fall asleep while driving the car. All the doctors who checked him said he was ok and not to worry.

When he fell asleep at a Notre Dame football game (he is a proud alumnus of that great school) I knew something must be terribly wrong. It was you who suggested the possibility that Jim might have narcolepsy.

The following day he went to a doctor recommended by a new neighbor. Sure enough that was the diagnosis. Since Jim has been on medication he is 100 per cent better. I'm fascinated by the fact that you called the shot. I feel as if we should send you a cheque.—Grateful.

Dear G.: Please don't. It was the sleep doctor who made the diagnosis. Furthermore, I don't want to be called for practicing medicine without a license. Glad I could help.

Dear Ann Landers: Is it wrong to bring a cake when invited to a friend's home for dinner?

I came from a small town. My mother and aunts did this often. It seemed like a warm gesture. So far as I know, nobody ever resented it.

We moved to Pittsburgh a few months ago. People here have been very kind to us. Three times I have baked cakes and brought them to dinner parties. Each time I had the feeling the hostess was not pleased. What about this, Ann?—Love To Bake

Dear Bake: Better bring a box of candy or some non-perishable delicacy in a jar or can. When a guest brings a cake the hostess may feel obligated to serve it. This leaves up her mind. She must either ditch her dessert or serve it in addition to the guest's cake, which is just too much.

If you love to bake ask the hostess in advance if you can bring the dessert. There's a good chance she'll be pleased. But don't surprise her.

Women's Prison Director Defends Pass Program

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — The director of the Prison for Women says the temporary-absence program which allows prisoners passes away from jail is a "very positive treatment procedure."

Douglas Chinery said in a recent interview that the program has been criticized in recent years because of crimes committed by prisoners on passes, but the public must judge the system against several factors.

The prisoner's eventual release, the small percentage of violations and the over-all benefit to prisoners and their families are factors which have to be assessed.

He said attention has focused on the pass system at prisons here because of the firing of Joseph Doyle, former director of Edinburgh Institution—a maximum-security farm annex adjacent to Joyceville Institution near Kingston.

Mr. Doyle was fired in August after he granted one prisoner a pass for 56 days and another a pass for 41 days. He was also charged with allowing prisoners an absence for other than medical or humanitarian reasons and with authorizing the building of a swimming pool in violation of prison policy.

A hearing into his dismissal ended Sunday and adjudicator Gordon Simmons said he will hand down a decision in a month.

Australia's Economy Fraser's Priority

SYDNEY AP) — Australia's new prime minister, Malcolm Fraser, said Sunday that economic recovery from the recessive administration's first priority.

But he suggested his government would not follow policies as quickly as Gough Whitlam, the ousted Labor prime minister, did when he came to power in 1972.

"I think it is very important that matters be done properly," Fraser told a news conference at his home with his wife, Tamara, seated beside him.

"The way you do things is very often as important as what you do because if you do things the right way you're more likely to make the right decisions."

Labor union spokesmen said they are willing to see what Fraser will be able to do, by persuasion, employment and reducing inflation.

They did not repeat suggestions made before the election that trade union members will respond to a defeat for Labor with strikes.

Fraser said the size of his conservative coalition's victory during the weekend added to his responsibility to set up a good government.

Cuba May Build Nuclear Reactor

OTTAWA (CP) — The development of industry, including the building of a nuclear reactor for electric power, will be the main focus of the first five-year plan to be adopted by Cuba late this month, says Joaquin Mas Martinez, the Havana-based republican ambassador-designate to Canada.

The plan, to be approved by Cuba's first Communist party congress, will cost $13 billion and will cover all aspects of the economy, Mr. Martinez said in an interview during the weekend.

The six-day assembly, which begins Wednesday in Havana, will be the first congress held in the Western Hemisphere by a Communist party in power.

It will adopt a constitution that will provide for the first general elections since Fidel Castro and his supporters took control of the country in the 1959 revolution.

The constitution will establish a new government structure based on a pyramid of elected "assemblies of popular power"—Cuban type Soviets—leading to a national assembly.

Mr. Martinez, who is expected to present the Cuban delegation, said the constitution and five-year plan combined will show Cuba "how to start to live again."

The country had to struggle to survive after the revolution and consequently economic growth but now has reached the point where it can plan advanced development.

He said the plan will aim to make the vital sugar industry develop the steel industry, improve agriculture and provide better irrigation and rejuvenate transportation by rehabilitating railways, roads and the port of Havana.

Construction of the nuclear power plant would begin in the five-year period 1976-80, and would be completed sometime in the 1980s. The reactor would be similar to the Candu development by Canada and was necessary because Cuba does not have the water resources for generating hydro-electric generating plants.

The power reactor would operate plants such as a steel mill proposed in Orienta province on the southern end of the island. The province has vast iron ore deposits and a steel making industry there would allow Cuba to manufacture will own agricultural implements.

The steel industry also would enable the country to develop more ambitious construction plans.

Mr. Martinez, 44, said the plan proposes to mechanize 80 to 90 per cent of the sugar harvest and to double textile production by the early 1980s.

Moynihan Warns Russia Will Take Over Angola

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Communists will take over Angola if they can "by a South African label" on their opposition, Daniel Moynihan, the United States representative to the UN, said Sunday.

He said control of vital oil shipping routes between Asia and Europe is at stake in the struggle over the former Portuguese colony, on Africa's southwest coast.

Moynihan, speaking on NBC television's Sunday show, said: "The Soviet Union with its proxy armies from Cuba, has invaded the southwest region of Africa.

"The U.S. role, he said, has been to give arms "to the government of Zambia and Zaire, who have passed them on" to forces backing the Soviet-sponsored Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA).

State Secretary Henry Kissinger has said the U.S. has had no direct contact with South Africa on the issue, but Moynihan conceded that the two countries' policies have converged in opposing the MPLA.

Black Africa's hatred of South Africa's white minority regime means "if we shield our side can join a South African label on resistance to Communist invasion of South Africa, then the Communist invasion will succeed," Moynihan said.

"If it becomes impossible for the U.S. to proceed ... if the Communists take over Angola, they will take over the oil shipping lines and the world becomes different," he added. He said he thinks that would be in the interests of Africa.

Moynihan said U.S. support for Israel is hurting Washington's attempts to improve relations with Arab countries, and "we could not be trusted elsewhere or we might wake up one day and say to hell with Israel."

The ambassador said the U.S. is committed to Israel because that country represents democracy, and he saw no reason to change the commitment.

Indians Say Victims Possessed by Bears

WIKWEMIKONG, Ont. (CP) — Residents of this Ojibwa reserve—where seven young persons committed suicide in the last 12 months—say some incidents at the reserve believed to be possessed by such spirits as bears.

A legend known as the bear walk says that if a person has a vision, usually of a bear, the person's soul will be dominated by that of the spirit in the vision, the residents said in an interview outside an coroner's inquest into the suicides.

A psychiatrist said at the inquest last week that belief is the curse of the bear walk, and members of the family that are factors contributing to what he said was a suicide epidemic at the reserve.

The residents said the legend says that the spirit determines the actions and the fate of the body it inhabits. They said older residents revere the legend more than young persons at the reserve about 60 miles southwest of Sudbury.

Dr. John Ward, the psychiatrist, said one victim wrote that there was a curse on the area and that three persons who attempted suicide believed they were victims of the bear-walk curse.

Coroner Jack Bailey said the jury, which was commenting on suicide were between 17 and 34 years old and all but one died of head wounds inflicted with 22-calibre rifles.

Air Workers Say Bilingual Communications Realistic Move

MONTREAL (CP) — The federal government's plan to introduce bilingual air communications at Quebec airports was described Sunday as a "realistic and honest move" by the president of the Quebec Air Workers Association.

The statement by Roger Demers came after an announcement in Montreal Saturday by Transport Minister Otto Lang that beginning immediately, air traffic operators in Quebec are authorized to provide "advisory services" in French when it is considered to be in the interest of safety.

Mr. Demers said his 200-member association, which has pressed for use of French at Quebec airports, is "satisfied with the outcome of this problem and the support of the government."

Instruction manuals and French-language lexicons are to be introduced April 1, and all flight advisory services provided in French and English. Air traffic operators inform pilots of weather conditions and give flight clearance instructions.

The issue of bilingual air communications recently led to one-day suspensions of two air traffic controllers at Montreal's Dorval Airport who made unauthorized use of French in control operations.

Mr. Demers said his association agrees with Mr. Lang's statement that the two controllers' fines should be reduced

St. Lawrence Workers Walk Off Jobs

TORONTO (CP) — Stagehands at the city-owned St. Lawrence Centre for the Arts walked off their jobs Saturday in a dispute over job designations, a spokesman for the centre said Sunday.

Theatre manager Victor Pelley said in a news release that the stagehands, members of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, want specified job designations written into a new two-year contract.

He said the centre employs four permanent stagehands and a number of part-time employees and the union wants a stagehand stage crew to be paid for all productions, whether their services are needed or not.

Mr. Pelley said the walkout is not expected to affect productions scheduled at the centre during the Christmas season.

The stagehands struck after the curtain came down on the closing performance of Sean O'Casey's The Plough and the Stars, said Mr. Pelley. The next major production opens Boxing Day and supervisory personnel will stand in for the stagehands.

Chretien Says Ottawa Will Cut Popular Programs

MONTREAL (CP) — Treasury Board President Jean Chretien said Sunday the federal government will have to make "painful" cuts in many popular programs to help reverse the trend of inflationary government spending.

In an interview on CFCF radio, he declined to discuss specific budget cuts under consideration but said he is determined to cut expenses in all possible areas to bring government expenditures in line with revenues
